SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news from Burmah is certainly not very stirring, if we except a report which will presently be adverted to. Everything is reported to be quiet in the district of Bassein, where Captain Fychte, the deputy commissioner, has, it is said, for the last two months exerted himself energetically and unceasingly in putting down dacoity, and has succeeded, Bassein being now a model district. The only bit of excitement is furnished by an attempt of the prisoners in the jail to effect their escape from durance. The attempt seems to have been met very coolly, but a few only of the prison-breakers made good their flight. Provisions have become much cheaper, and the same quantity of rice which six months since commanded nine rupees, is now purchasable for one! The people of Exeter will envy these Peguers. Some avocations it appears flourish simultaneously in England and Pegu, for gangs of coiners have been detected at Rangoon.

The "stirring" matter to which allusion has been made, had better be given as it comes to us.

"Reports have reached us, and in fact are quite current among the native population, that the Meng-Dat-Meng, the Fighting Prince, intends to leave Ava with a very large force, on a date corresponding with our 20th of December next; and that on the very same day, a simultaneous movement is concerted, for the different towns and districts in Pegu. Moung Goung Gyee, who is said to be now at Tharawaddy with 10,000 men, is said to have been actually appointed governor of Rangoon, upon the faith of his promise to drive out the English therefrom, and has received the title of the 'Nine Golden Umbrellas.' Ko-mee-Toon has been appointed governor of Bassein; Pya-Poh Paynhen has been appointed to Dallah; Shooay Moung, son of the late governor Yoo-Dza-Na, has been appointed governor of Tonghoo, Shooay Gien, and Martaban; Moung Byo, the robber chief, at present encamped but a few miles from Pegu, has been appointed governor of Pegu and Syriam; and when the plains have become sufficiently dry to admit of his operations, he is to open the ball, with Moung-Goung-Gyee as his vis-à-vis. These several desperadoes are to play their respective parts, creating as much mischief and disorder as possible; until the great body under the prince shall have completed its march to Rangoon. We do not pretend to be so much alarmed for the safety of our newly-acquired possessions, as we might be if the resources of our enemy were less known to us; but we are full well assured that quite enough is true of the rumours in question to warrant the adoption of immediate steps for the frustration of the designs of the enemy."

From the North-West there is little or nothing. As the editor of the Delhi Gazette observes, "if that people be happy whose annals are silent, India is indeed a fortunate country." The following scrap may be interesting. It is from a Peshawur letter, dated November 26:—

"The most important item of news from this part of the world is that the Afreedies have given in. The pass was to have been forced the day before yesterday, but they came in the evening before."

Particulars of some other "affairs" in this part will be found in the usual place.

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

The Bengal, with a mail, left Calcutta Dec. 5th, Sand Heads 6th, Madras 10th, Point de Galle 13th, Aden 23rd, and arrived at Suez Dec. 29th.

The Queen, with a mail, left Bombay Dec. 14th, and arrived at Aden on the 23rd ult.

The Erin, with the China mail, left Hong-Kong Nov. 27th, Singapore Dec. 4th, Penang 6th, and arrived at Point de Galle Dec. 11th.

The mails thus brought were taken on to Alexandria; they arrived at Malta (per Colombo) on the 7th inst., and Marseilles on the 9th.

DEPARTURES OF EACH MONTH—MAILS FROM LONDON TO INDIA, CHINA, ETC.

Viâ Southampton (from London), at 8 o'clock in the morning of the 4th and 20th. It is advisable to post letters in London on the previous evening; if that day be Sunday, then on the evening of the 3rd and 19th; if Monday (of course) before 8 o'clock on that morning.

Postage, letters under  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. . . . . 1s.
" " 1 oz. . . . . 2s.

Pre-payment is optional, but out of London it is the most certain to insure early despatch; and it will be preferable to affix stamps rather than to pay in money.—Newspapers, free.

Viâ Marseilles, on the 8th and 24th; if either of these days be Sunday, then on the 9th or 25th.

Postage (must be in stamps), letters, under  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. 1s. 10d.
" "  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. 2s. 3d.
" Newspapers, 3d. each.

* * The Marseilles mails of the 8th and 24th overtake the Southampton mails of the 4th and 20th, at Malta; they arrive in India together.

(Our publication commenced at 6 o'clock this morning, Jan. 13.)

DATES OF ADVICES.

Bengal .. .. .	5 Dec.	Burmah (Rangoon) ..	Nov. 20
Madras .. .. .	10	Bombay .. .. .	Dec. 14
Ceylon .. .. .	13	Hong-Kong .. .. .	Nov. 27

The following is somewhat startling. It is one of those passages which we think better to give in the original phraseology.

"The fact of a Russian army having reached Khiva, appears to be unquestioned. The ostensible object avowed is to release from the bondage of the Khivans some subjects of the Czar, but in reality it is supposed that this army will eventually march upon Persia, a supposition which gains probability by the fact mentioned in our last Summary, of the Shah's having marched with his troops by Tabreez. It was at first alleged that the Shah was on his way to aid Turkey, but it is now stated that he has gone to defend his border country, aided by Britain; and it is rumoured that the Indian Government has been advised to have troops in readiness for service both in Persia and Egypt."

It is rumoured as possible that Lord Frederick Fitzclarence will take the command of an army of observation on our north-west frontier.

Jail émeutes seem to be popular on both sides of India; we have mentioned one in Pegu. There has been another at Lahore, but it was quickly put down.

A paragraph relating to Oude is sufficiently characteristic; it is just such as we expect from that unhappy country:—

"There has been a very serious engagement in Oude, between Capt. Bunbury's regiment and the followers of a rebellious rajah—more properly described as a dacoit, whose fort was stormed. There were many killed and wounded on the captain's side. Although the fort was taken by a coup de main, the rajah contrived to escape: he is said to be an inhuman monster, the terror of travellers and of less-powerful zemindars."

The appointments and removals consequent upon the establishment of a 3rd European regiment at Bengal and Bombay, will be found in their respective places.

In the Madras districts to the northward of the local capital great apprehensions are entertained, on account of the failure of the north-east monsoon.

Ceylon, or part of it, seems to have been thrown into a state of considerable alarm at the suggested change of the calling-place of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers from Galle to Trincomalee.

The news from China is of every degree of interest and non-interest.

The re-capture of Amoy is among the most stimulant, perhaps the most important; and we quote an account of this event at length:—

"For some time past, as our readers are aware, we have anticipated the speedy recovery of Amoy from the tumultuous bands dignified with the name of rebels, who must have decamped some time ago, but for the presence of the British men-of-war. At length, however, the city has been evacuated, and a commercial circular, dated Amoy, 12th November, thus begins by announcing the event, in a tone which others, besides the constituents of the firm which issues it, would do well to note:—

"We have now the satisfaction of informing you, that the mandarins are again in possession of this place, and that property here may now be considered as safe as at any former period."

"It would appear that skirmishing had been going on as usual, until the leading insurgents began to remove their families on board their junks on the 9th, during which and the following day the gates of the citadel were kept shut in expectation of an attack. On the night of the 10th, there were evident preparations for the evacuation of the place, and the insurgent leader embarked. Before daybreak, the imperialist forces advanced on the north and east against the citadel with scaling-ladders, and the rebels retreated through the southern gates, and pushed towards the wharfs, in the hope of finding refuge on board the fleet; but in this a great many of them were disappointed, in consequence of the boats which usually ply there for hire, having all kept out of the way. The sampans belonging to their junks hurried backwards and forwards, but it was quite impossible they could accommodate the numbers who crowded the shore, and many betook themselves to the water on planks, &c., in the hopes of reaching the junks. Few were successful in this, the others being either drowned, or driven by the wind upon the island off Kulang-su, where they remained without the slightest prospect of escape, until, with its entire garrison, they were taken by the imperialists. Had the sympathy of the inhabitants been with them, almost every one might have embarked in safety, as in their retreat they were by no means hard pressed, for their opponents did not try to scale the walls until the defender had fled, and then followed them but slowly through the town; while the imperialist fleet made not the slightest attempt to intercept the rebel junks.

"As might have been expected, dreadful cruelties were perpetrated by the captors upon those unfortunates who fell into their hands; and it is estimated that from 700 to 1,000 were killed, a large proportion of whom were massacred in cold blood, chiefly by the Canton and West-coast junkmen, who are said to have bound and thrown them overboard, and speared those who did not sink. As an act of humanity, the English consul used his influence to stop the butchery on the 11th, and Captains Fishbourne of the Hermes, and Vansittart of the Bittern, considered themselves called upon to interfere, and consequently landed with a body of men, drove off the imperialists from the wharfs, and rescued about 400 of their prisoners, 200 of whom were less or more injured, some of them mortally, and placed the wounded under medical treatment. But, as will be seen from the following paragraph, which concludes the circular from which the above particulars are chiefly taken, so little sympathy was shown towards them by the inhabitants, that regret was even expressed that the foreigners should have interfered at all:—

"To-day all is quiet, and the inhabitants appear generally much pleased at the defeat of the rebels; they even in some instances express their regret the foreigners should have interrupted the massacre yesterday. We hope confidence will soon spring up and business be resumed; but some little time must elapse ere order is completely restored."

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE ARMIES OF INDIA, REPORTED SINCE OUR LAST PUBLICATION.

BENGAL.—Major John R. Talbot, inv. estab. at Calcutta, aged 53, Nov. 18; Lieut. J. Silver, 2nd Eur. Fus., at Rangoon, Nov. 12.

MADRAS.—Capt. R. L. Reilly, 10th N.I., at Coonoor, aged 37, Nov. 20; Lieut. T. M. Smith, 8th N.I., at Samulcottah, Nov. 23.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.

We have received a file of the Rangoon Chronicle up to the 19th, and of the Mauhin Advertiser up to the 18th November. From the former we regret to perceive that Captain Digney, of the Bengal marine, is dead. Cholera, we are sorry to learn, has broken out at Akyah. According to the accounts from Rangoon there seems to be still a chance of the fine old "Clark ka gora," and the gallant 2nd fusiliers, winning more honours, for if the rumours given by the Chronicle be only half true, there will be more fighting before the close of the year. M-ng-Dat-Meng, the fighting prince, is to move from Ava with a very large force on the 20th of December, on which day the ball is to be opened simultaneously at several places. Chiefs, with hard names, have been appointed governors of Bassein, Dallah, Tonghoo, Shooay, Gien, and Martaban, and Pegu and Syriam; while the governorship of Rangoon has been conferred upon Moung Young Gye, who has promised to drive out the English, and was said to be at Tharawaddy with a force of 10,000 men, but according to a later account had stockaded himself, together with another Dacoit chief, near Myreaday. The 18th Royal Irish, which went down to Burmah 1,100 strong, leaves it with little more than 450 men.

A letter from Rangoon, dated November 21, says:—

"Reports have just come in that Pegue has been retaken by Moung Brau (or some such name). Captain Nuthall was despatched yesterday evening, about nine o'clock, with ninety of his light Peguers."

These reports are not credited.—Hurkaru.

PEGU.

We have received further advices from Prome extending in date to the 3rd November. Moung Goung Gye and another dacoit chief was reported to have stockaded themselves near Myreaday with a goodly number of men. The capitation tax was being collected all over the district, and a great deal of it reported to have been paid willingly, and those who are unable to pay, instead of pleading inability, crossed over to the dominions of the Burmese king. A fire broke out in the town of Prome on the 29th ultimo, which Capt. Baird is said to have strenuously exerted himself in putting down, and while his efforts were crowned with complete success, no more than a dozen huts being destroyed, he himself suffered from his extraordinary exertions, and is now laid up with coup de soleil.—The former Myothoogyee of the village of Kumah, a few miles above Prome, is said to be threatening the town, in consequence of which it has been found necessary to anchor the Medusa off the village as a guardship. H.M.'s 51st K.O.L.I. and the sappers and miners from Myecaday, have been located at Thayatmyo, a few miles below Myecaday, on the right bank of the Irrawaddy. This village is said to be a beautiful place, and material for the erection of barracks have been sent up there, and it is rumoured that it will eventually become the army headquarters.

The Hurkaru quotes a passage from a private letter from Prome, mentioning a report that 140,000 armed Burmese had been collected for an invasion of Pegu. The writer probably intended to say 40,000. Another letter talks of preparations for retaking the Aeng passes.

The weather at Prome is represented to be pleasant—the mornings delightfully cool, and during the day “not hot.”—Ibid.

BASSEIN.

(Extract from an Officer's Letter.)

I left Bassein perfectly quiet; nothing had occurred to disturb the harmony which judicious management has produced there, excepting the little excitement caused on the 3rd November, by an attempt made by the whole body of prisoners to escape from jail. At six in the evening, just after their supper, they rose simultaneously (300 of them) on their guards, many of whom they cut down; seized all the dabs and hatchets they could lay their hands on, and made a rush out of the gate. The brave burkundazes bolted to a man, and hid themselves in the sepoy guard-house outside—the jail-guard mounted guard only at night, and remained at their quarters in cantonments during the day—leaving the convicts to themselves; many of whom had ample time to wrench off their irons and walk quietly away; and there seems no doubt that they would all have escaped had it not been for the excellent conduct of the deputy-commissioner's “sheristadhar,” who lives close by: this man collected a few men, and rushed to the jail gate, cutting down the remainder of those who attempted to force their way out.

But for this timely aid every one of the convicts must have effected their escape; as help from the quarter from which it was most expected was not afforded. The outbreak and the escape took place within a hundred yards from the stockade gate, over which there was a guard, looking on all the time; but not only was no assistance afforded, but no notice was taken of the representations of the jail duffadars, and others who were dispatched to inform the military of what was going on. The consequence was that many lives were lost. Those of the runaways who managed to get out of the jail when the general rush took place made at once for the jungle; where, under cover of night, it was not difficult to conceal themselves. Through the excellent management of Captain Fytche, however, very few of them succeeded in making good their escape from the district.

A line of men were posted along the river bank, north and south of the town; and at the outlet of every creek through which a canoe could pass; orders were further despatched to the gongs of the different villages surrounding the town, to be on the alert and to scour the jungles at day-light. By these means, all, with the exception of between twenty and thirty of those who had escaped, were recaptured; those who resisted were cut down; and in some cases only their heads brought in. In some five or six other cases, the wounds received were so severe, that the unfortunate fellows died from them. About twenty men were at large when I left; but I am certain they will not be so much longer, unless they have managed to cross the cordon of Captain Fytche's jurisdiction. Thanks are due to him for the perfect state of tranquillity of the entire district, contrasting strangely with those to the north and east; a state of tranquillity brought about, be it remembered, not by the aid of the military, who, although the country, almost up to the gates of Bassein, was in the hands of Burmese marauders and Dacoits, did not consider themselves at liberty to leave their stockade; but by the extraordinary energy of the deputy commissioner, Captain Fytche, aided by an equally gallant spirit in the person of Captain Rennie, of the Zenobia, who, with a body of raw Kareens raised at a moment's warning, and a handful of sailors from the above vessel, marched in triumph through the district from one end to the other, fought two pitched battles, with enormous numerical odds against them; overcame all opposition, and, in short, effected in bringing the district to its present peaceful state, which is looked upon by the natives themselves as miracle.

Our harvest, though, as a natural consequence, not so abundant as it would have been had the ravages of war not rendered paddy for sowing scarce, is still not bad.

To give you an idea of what the district will yield, I may mention that Akyab, the “rice garden of the East,” is said to have yielded this last season about 120,000 tons of rice, and that this is considered a good season. The Bassein district alone, from the accounts already received, has yielded this year 150,000 tons, and will, it is confidently hoped, yield in future seasons from 200,000 to 250,000 tons. The climate of the place is delightful.

THE PUNJAB.

Camp Adeezace, Nov. 27, 1853.—We moved to this ground about a fortnight ago, and since then have been marking out the fort and making roads. Some days ago we were in hopes of going at the Afreedees; but they have come to terms, and given in to us with their usual promises of never again troubling us. Our only chance now of any fighting is with the “Borees,” but whether or not we are to be sent against them I cannot tell. The mountain train and guide infantry have joined us, and will, I fancy, remain until everything is quiet. This place is very healthy, and all the Peshawur invalids are recovering. General Roberts has, we hear, been very ill, and obliged to leave Peshawur.

Mr. John Lawrence and Major Edwardes, with their camp, are still with us. I hope in a day or two to see the fort begun, and should anything occur, will let you hear.

Since writing the above, we have received the important intelligence that a gallant and most successful operation had been planned and carried out against the refractory. To render the measures for effectually opening the Kohat pass complete, it became absolutely necessary to prove to these people, that hills and valleys were accessible to well-organized troops, and they were to be beaten on their own ground. Intimation of the necessity of resorting to compulsion having been communicated, by the political authorities, to Colonel Boileau, now commanding the whole “field force” (he had rejoined the 22nd Foot, on Brigadier Breton returning to assume command of the Sind Sagur district), in the course of the 28th of Nov. the following party was directed to hold itself in readiness for active service on the succeeding morning:—

The whole of the mountain (mule) train;

Two guns of Captain Delamain's 9-pounder battery, which it was however found necessary to send back under escort of two hundred Goorkas, whose services were thus lost to the detachment;

400 men of H. M.'s 22nd regiment;

200 men of the 20th N.I.;

400 of the 66th, or Goorka regiment;

Add 450 of the Guides.

The force, which was commanded by Col. Boileau, who had the advantage of being most materially assisted in his operations by Lieut.-Col. Napier, and Maj. Edwardes, marched from the camp at 5 A.M., on the morning of the 29th Nov., and preliminary arrangements having been made, the outer range of hills was penetrated at two points, distant about one and a half mile from each other. Through the first, deriving its name from the village of Kandao, went the gallant Guides with the intention of taking the enemy in flank, and so successful were they in this manoeuvre, that on the main body entering the Ambergush pass, further on, they found it evacuated, though the burning embers and certain heads of maize half roasted, which were found on the heights, clearly proved that they had only just been abandoned by the hill-men, who had no mind to be taken in the rear by the Guides. On deploying from the pass at the foot of the inner side of the outer range, the force was reunited, and found itself on a small plain in a valley much resembling that of Kangra, with the three villages of the Borees before them, at the foot of some precipitous crags; these it at once became apparent must be carried before the villages could be attacked and destroyed. This service devolved on two detachments of the Goorkas and the Guides, commanded by Lieuts. Hodson and Turner, respectively, and the style in which the latter especially, whose party met with the greatest resistance, drove the enemy from crag to rock, and from rock to crag, and finally kept them at bay from eleven in the morning till three in the afternoon, was the admiration of the whole force, who could plainly see the onslaught, especially a fierce struggle that lasted a whole hour, for the possession of a breast-work, which appeared inaccessible from below, but which was ultimately carried by the Guides in the face of the determined resistance of the Afreedees, who fought for every inch of ground. During these operations on the hills the three villages were burnt, and it was only the want of powder that prevented the whole of a succession of small towers being blown into the air. The powder was in charge of the sappers, who unfortunately fell into the rear, and having done so, received orders to stand fast at the Shergush pass, where they were joined by the chief commissioner, who had thence a full view of the whole of the operations. The scene, on the principal village being set on fire, with the clouds of smoke rising up the hills, was grand and solemn. The work for which the force had entered the valley having been thus fully achieved, the retreat commenced at three P.M., and then the difficulties of the detachment commenced, for, as is well known, the Afghans are familiar with the art of following, though they will rarely meet, an enemy. The withdrawal of the Guides and Goorkas from the heights was most exciting, and none but the best officers and the best men could have achieved this duty with such complete success. Lieut. Hodson's tactics were of the most brilliant description, and the whole force, having been once more re-united in the plain, they marched out of the valley by the Turoonnee pass, which, though furthest from the British camp, was the shortest to the outer plains, on emerging into which they were joined by the chief commissioner from the Shergush pass. The force did not return to camp till between ten and eleven at night, having been out nearly eighteen hours, many of the men without food, and almost all without water, the small supply which had been carried out having soon been exhausted, and none being procurable at Boree. Not an officer of the detachment was touched, and only eight men killed and twenty-four wounded. When the force first entered the valley, there were not more than 200 Borees in arms to resist; but before they returned, the number had increased to some three thousand, tens and twenties pouring in all the morning from all the villages and hamlets within many miles, intelligence of the attack being conveyed to them by the firing. The whole of this gallant affair was evidently well planned, and well executed, and the praise earned by the troops most just. The attack will strike terror into the hearts of the recusants, and they, as well as the hill tribes in general, have learnt that to rocks, however inaccessible they may seem, no defiles through which our troops have to pass, and no breast-works the enemy may erect, can, nor will, protect them.—Lahore Chronicle, Dec. 3.

A BRUSH WITH THE AFREEDZES.—A report reached Rawul Pindie, direct from Kohat, on the morning of the 16th November, that Captain Coke had had a brush on his side of the pass with the Afreedzes, that he had been slightly wounded himself, and lost some men, but succeeded in punishing the enemy considerably. We give this as we receive it, and, knowing the authority whence the report emanated, are inclined to place some reliance on the correctness of the general outline.—Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 19.

PESHAWUR.—We subjoin the following extract of a letter from Peshawur, dated the 21st instant:—"There is little or no news from Cotton's Camp. A false alarm was created some nights since, and the whole force turned out in a few minutes. As yet the field force has done nothing, but more decisive operations have been determined on, that is, if we may judge from the fact of 100 barrels of gunpowder with other requisites for blasting having been sent out. The Mountain Train left this morning with the depot of the 20th N.I. All this looks like work.—The hill tribes, or some of them at all events, are said to be collecting in the Khybur. It is supposed they intend to pay our valley a visit. Chamberlain's irregulars and two horse-artillery guns are ordered to be ready to entertain them at a moment's warning.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 21.

BENGAL.

HER MAJESTY'S 70TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

The following letter from our correspondent at Cawnpore explains the causes which produced so much sickness among the men of H.M.'s 70th foot:—

"Almost all the papers in India have noticed the fearful mortality from cholera among the men of H.M.'s 70th regiment. Numerous, of course, were the surmises as to the real cause of the sickness, but not one guessed the true reason. Medical men tried all sorts of experiments; instead of beef only mutton was given to the men; they then got daily rations of vegetables, quarters were changed, port wine was given to their heart's content—in short anything that medical men recommended was at the disposal of the regiment, yet it was impossible to get a clue to the true reason. What experiments and close observation could not find out has been discovered by mere accident, though not until a favourable change in the state of the atmosphere had from itself put a stop to the further progress of the disease. And what would you think was the real cause? The system that obtains of returning to the soldier what is called "difference of cost of rations." Now, in the first instance, let me tell you that this difference paid to the men during the very period that cholera raged among them was about one anna and two pie per day, of which almost every fraction found its way into the liquor-vendors' pockets for stuff which is downright poison. The daily deduction from a soldier's pay for the rations supplied to him by Government is three annas and four pie, hence, after deducting the one anna and two pie returned to him, he obtained his daily victuals for two annas and two pie. For this payment he was provided daily with the following rations:—

- 1 lb. of bread or biscuit.
- 1 oz. of salt.
- 1 lb. of beef or mutton.
- 4 oz. rice.
- 1½ oz. coffee.
- 1½ oz. sugar, and ½ oz. of green or black tea.

Now I ask anybody on earth what can the quality of rations be that are supplied to the soldier in the aforementioned quantities for two annas two pie per diem? To swallow such stuff, and then to wash it down with one annaworth of a kind of liquor, which may not inappropriately be termed 'diluted prussic acid,' is enough to break down the strongest constitution, and yet with these facts before them, the authorities never dreamed of ascribing the disease among the 70th to the true cause. Is not this a mistaken notion of taking care of the soldier? I will write you by and by on another subject, as soon as I have ascertained all the facts connected with the case."

We hope our correspondent is misinformed, though from what has come to our own knowledge there is ground to believe that his tale is too true. We have all along deprecated the system of returning the difference between the real cost of rations and the amount of monthly deductions from the pay to the soldier, and we have shown on more than one occasion that it would be far better to lay out such difference in improved qualities of the rations. The order lately passed will virtually do away with the practice hitherto existing, and it is only a matter of regret that it is not at once brought into operation.

Presuming the account given by our correspondent to be correct, and we fear it is so, the facts are very apposite to the remarks we made yesterday upon the evils of the Abkarree system; and leaving out of the question all higher considerations, as a mere matter of finance it would be advisable that Government should put down all shops for the sale of native liquor, situated within such distance of the barracks of European troops as to render it easy for the soldiers to obtain the liquid poison, with which they destroy themselves. As every European soldier costs the Government about 100l. sterling, the expense of replacing the men of the 70th, who have fallen victims to their appetite for strong drink, will not be made up to the State by the proceeds of the excise duties from the shops whence they obtained the liquor in a long course of years.—Hurkaru.

THE LONDON MAIL of October 24th arrived at Calcutta December 1st (per Bentinch).

DEATH OF LIEUT. J. SILVER.—We announce with regret the death of 1st Lieut. and Adj. J. Silver, 2nd Bengal fusiliers, which took place at Rangoon on Nov. 12th. Lieut. Silver was ill during the voyage down on board the Zenobia last month, but improved after landing at Rangoon. However, the improvement was but temporary, as his illness soon after took an unfavourable turn, and terminated fatally, as above stated.

Of the deceased officer's military qualifications it is unnecessary for us to speak. Their best eulogium is to be found in the splendid state of discipline and efficiency in which he leaves the superb regiment of which he has been adjutant for many years, and in which he was deservedly esteemed and liked by his brother officers and the men under his control. We sincerely hope that the 2nd fusiliers may be so fortunate as to find among its officers a fit and worthy successor to the deceased, whose whole heart and soul was in the regiment, and who left nothing undone that could conduce to its welfare or improvement.—Morning Chronicle, Nov. 28.

DAWK BUNGALOWS.—Government has decided that military officers travelling on duty must pay the charge for occupancy of dawk bungalows out of their own pockets.

COMPANY'S FOUR PER CENT. PAPER, which, owing to some absurd rumours, went down to a few annas within par, in the course of twenty-four hours rose to three per cent. premium.

THE LATE A. F. DONNELLY, ESQ.—The native subordinates in the Dacca Abkarree department have subscribed the sum of Rs. 500, the interest on which is to form an annual prize to the best student of the Dacca College. It is to be called the "Donnelly Prize," in token of respect for the memory of the late Mr. A. F. Donnelly, Abkarree commissioner of the Dacca division.

THE HON. MR. F. J. HALLIDAY took his seat as third ordinary member of the Supreme Government of India under the usual salute, on the 2nd December.

EAST-INDIA RAILWAY.—A notice has been published by the managing director and agent of the East-Indian Railway Company, to the effect that warrants will be issued to the shareholders in London for the payment of the last half-year's interest, upon application to the officers of the company at Calcutta.

On deploying from the pass at the foot of the inner side of the outer range, the force was reunited, and found itself on a small plain in a valley much resembling that of Kangra, with the three villages of the Borees before them, at the foot of some precipitous crags; these it at once became apparent must be carried before the villages could be attacked and destroyed. This service devolved on two detachments of the Goorkas and the Guides, commanded by Lieuts. Hodson and Turner, respectively, and the style in which the latter especially, whose party met with the greatest resistance, drove the enemy from crag to rock, and from rock to crag, and finally kept them at bay from eleven in the morning till three in the afternoon, was the admiration of the whole force, who could plainly see the onslaught, especially a fierce struggle that lasted a whole hour, for the possession of a breast-work, which appeared inaccessible from below, but which was ultimately carried by the Guides in the face of the determined resistance of the Afreedees, who fought for every inch of ground. During these operations on the hills the three villages were burnt, and it was only the want of powder that prevented the whole of a succession of small towers being blown into the air. The powder was in charge of the sappers, who unfortunately fell into the rear, and having done so, received orders to stand fast at the Shergush pass, where they were joined by the chief commissioner, who had thence a full view of the whole of the operations. The scene, on the principal village being set on fire, with the clouds of smoke rising up the hills, was grand and solemn. The work for which the force had entered the valley having been thus fully achieved, the retreat commenced at three P.M., and then the difficulties of the detachment commenced, for, as is well known, the Afghans are familiar with the art of following, though they will rarely meet, an enemy. The withdrawal of the Guides and Goorkas from the heights was most exciting, and none but the best officers and the best men could have achieved this duty with such complete success. Lieut. Hodson's tactics were of the most brilliant description, and the whole force, having been once more re-united in the plain, they marched out of the valley by the Turoonce pass, which, though furthest from the British camp, was the shortest to the outer plains, on emerging into which they were joined by the chief commissioner from the Shergush pass. The force did not return to camp till between ten and eleven at night, having been out nearly eighteen hours, many of the men without food, and almost all without water, the small supply which had been carried out having soon been exhausted, and none being procurable at Boree. Not an officer of the detachment was touched, and only eight men killed and twenty-four wounded. When the force first entered the valley, there were not more than 200 Borees in arms to resist; but before they returned, the number had increased to some three thousand, tens and twenties pouring in all the morning from all the villages and hamlets within many miles, intelligence of the attack being conveyed to them by the firing. The whole of this gallant affair was evidently well planned, and well executed, and the praise earned by the troops most just. The attack will strike terror into the hearts of the recusants, and they, as well as the hill tribes in general, have learnt that to rocks, however inaccessible they may seem, no defiles through which our troops have to pass, and no breast-works the enemy may erect, can, nor will, protect them.—Lahore Chronicle, Dec. 3.

A BRUSH WITH THE AFREEDDEES.—A report reached Rawul Pindie, direct from Kohat, on the morning of the 16th November, that Captain Coke had had a brush on his side of the pass with the Afreedees, that he had been slightly wounded himself, and lost some men, but succeeded in punishing the enemy considerably. We give this as we receive it, and, knowing the authority whence the report emanated, are inclined to place some reliance on the correctness of the general outline.—Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 19.

PESHAWUR.—We subjoin the following extract of a letter from Peshawur, dated the 21st instant:—"There is little or no news from Cotton's Camp. A false alarm was created some nights since, and the whole force turned out in a few minutes. As yet the field force has done nothing, but more decisive operations have been determined on, that is, if we may judge from the fact of 100 barrels of gunpowder with other requisites for blasting having been sent out. The Mountain Train left this morning with the depot of the 20th N.I. All this looks like work.—The hill tribes, or some of them at all events, are said to be collecting in the Khybur. It is supposed they intend to pay our valley a visit. Chamberlain's irregulars and two horse-artillery guns are ordered to be ready to entertain them at a moment's warning.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 21.

BENGAL.

HER MAJESTY'S 70TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

The following letter from our correspondent at Cawnpore explains the causes which produced so much sickness among the men of H.M.'s 70th foot:—

"Almost all the papers in India have noticed the fearful mortality from cholera among the men of H.M.'s 70th regiment. Numerous, of course, were the surmises as to the real cause of the sickness, but not one guessed the true reason. Medical men tried all sorts of experiments; instead of beef only mutton was given to the men; they then got daily rations of vegetables, quarters were changed, port wine was given to their heart's content—in short anything that medical men recommended was at the disposal of the regiment, yet it was impossible to get a clue to the true reason. What experiments and close observation could not find out has been discovered by mere accident, though not until a favourable change in the state of the atmosphere had from itself put a stop to the further progress of the disease. And what would you think was the real cause? The system that obtains of returning to the soldier what is called "difference of cost of rations." Now, in the first instance, let me tell you that this difference paid to the men during the very period that cholera raged among them was about one anna and two pie per day, of which almost every fraction found its way into the liquor-vendors' pockets for stuff which is downright poison. The daily deduction from a soldier's pay for the rations supplied to him by Government is three annas and four pie, hence, after deducting the one anna and two pie returned to him, he obtained his daily victuals for two annas and two pie. For this payment he was provided daily with the following rations:—

- 1 lb. of bread or biscuit.
- 1 oz. of salt.
- 1 lb. of beef or mutton.
- 4 oz. rice.
- 1½ oz. coffee.
- 1½ oz. sugar, and ½ oz. of green or black tea.

Now I ask anybody on earth what can the quality of rations be that are supplied to the soldier in the aforementioned quantities for two annas two pie per diem? To swallow such stuff, and then to wash it down with one annaworth of a kind of liquor, which may not inappropriately be termed 'diluted prussic acid,' is enough to break down the strongest constitution, and yet with these facts before them, the authorities never dreamed of ascribing the disease among the 70th to the true cause. Is not this a mistaken notion of taking care of the soldier? I will write you by and by on another subject, as soon as I have ascertained all the facts connected with the case."

We hope our correspondent is misinformed, though from what has come to our own knowledge there is ground to believe that his tale is too true. We have all along deprecated the system of returning the difference between the real cost of rations and the amount of monthly deductions from the pay to the soldier, and we have shown on more than one occasion that it would be far better to lay out such difference in improved qualities of the rations. The order lately passed will virtually do away with the practice hitherto existing, and it is only a matter of regret that it is not at once brought into operation.

Presuming the account given by our correspondent to be correct, and we fear it is so, the facts are very apposite to the remarks we made yesterday upon the evils of the Abkarree system; and leaving out of the question all higher considerations, as a mere matter of finance it would be advisable that Government should put down all shops for the sale of native liquor, situated within such distance of the barracks of European troops as to render it easy for the soldiers to obtain the liquid poison, with which they destroy themselves. As every European soldier costs the Government about 100l. sterling, the expense of replacing the men of the 70th, who have fallen victims to their appetite for strong drink, will not be made up to the State by the proceeds of the excise duties from the shops whence they obtained the liquor in a long course of years.—Hurkaru.

THE LONDON MAIL of October 24th arrived at Calcutta December 1st (per Bentinck).

DEATH OF LIEUT. J. SILVER.—We announce with regret the death of 1st Lieut. and Adj. J. Silver, 2nd Bengal fusiliers, which took place at Rangoon on Nov. 12th. Lieut. Silver was ill during the voyage down on board the Zenobia last month, but improved after landing at Rangoon. However, the improvement was but temporary, as his illness soon after took an unfavourable turn, and terminated fatally, as above stated.

Of the deceased officer's military qualifications it is unnecessary for us to speak. Their best eulogium is to be found in the splendid state of discipline and efficiency in which he leaves the superb regiment of which he has been adjutant for many years, and in which he was deservedly esteemed and liked by his brother officers and the men under his control. We sincerely hope that the 2nd fusiliers may be so fortunate as to find among its officers a fit and worthy successor to the deceased, whose whole heart and soul was in the regiment, and who left nothing undone that could conduce to its welfare or improvement.—Morning Chronicle, Nov. 28.

DAWK BUNGALOWS.—Government has decided that military officers travelling on duty must pay the charge for occupancy of dawk bungalows out of their own pockets.

COMPANY'S FOUR PER CENT. PAPER. which, owing to some absurd rumours, went down to a few annas within par, in the course of twenty-four hours rose to three per cent. premium.

THE LATE A. F. DONNELLY, Esq.—The native subordinates in the Dacca Abkarree department have subscribed the sum of Rs. 500, the interest on which is to form an annual prize to the best student of the Dacca College. It is to be called the "Donnelly Prize," in token of respect for the memory of the late Mr. A. F. Donnelly, Abkarree commissioner of the Dacca division.

THE HON. MR. F. J. HALLIDAY took his seat as third ordinary member of the Supreme Government of India under the usual salute, on the 2nd December.

EAST-INDIA RAILWAY.—A notice has been published by the managing director and agent of the East-Indian Railway Company, to the effect that warrants will be issued to the shareholders in London for the payment of the last half-year's interest, upon application to the officers of the company at Calcutta.

RAILWAY SURVEY.—Government have sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 60,000 for the survey of the railway line between Calcutta and Delhi.

ROADS.—Government have sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 1,623 for the construction of a new road in the district of Nowgong, in Assam.

THE CAVALRY STATION OF NAKODA.—It has been long a matter of report, that the cavalry station of Nakoda would sooner or later be abolished. The rumour was true; for the cantonment in question is virtually abandoned. The 8th L.C. proceeded to Lahore, instead of to Nakoda, as originally directed in the general relief.—Mofussilite, Nov. 17.

COL. OUTRAM.—It is rumoured that Col. Outram is to be appointed Resident at the court of Persia, vice Col. Shiel, who proceeds to England on the score of ill-health.

BENGAL BONDED WAREHOUSE.—A draft Act relating to the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association has been published. The most important points in it are that the qualification for a directorship is reduced to five votes, and that the Governor-General cannot dissolve the corporation without giving five years' previous notice.

RATIONS TO THE EUROPEAN SOLDIER.—On the 28th ultimo the Governor-General issued an order relative to the improved quality of rations to the European soldier. In that order it was stated that the commissary-general had directed executive commissariat officers to make a report periodically to their departmental superiors, of their having, at uncertain intervals, personally attended the issue of rations. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in republishing the Governor-General's order, further directs that commanding officers will, on the 1st and 15th of each month, report, for the information of the superior local authority, how many times they have, at uncertain intervals during the fortnight, personally attended at the issue of rations. This shows an earnest desire on the part of the highest authorities to secure to the soldier a supply of really good provisions; and we have no doubt that the measure will be attended with much benefit to all parties. If a further arrangement were made to exercise a control over the liquor sold by licensed grog-shops to the soldier, we venture to say that, comparatively speaking, sickness would be but little known among European troops, and hospital establishments might safely be reduced to one-half their present numerical strength.—Hurkaru, Nov. 28.

THE "CITY OF POONAH."—We understand that the City of Poonah is likely to afford considerable employment to the gentlemen of the long robe, a question having been raised how far the circumstance of the vessel not having actually become a wreck, though sold as such, invalidates the contract which the ship, according to maritime laws, was bound to perform. We are told that legal advice has been taken on the matter, and that the opinion given is favourable to the claimants. If such be the case, it will fall particularly heavy upon the late owners of the City of Poonah, who, besides the loss they have already sustained by the premature abandonment of the vessel, may thus have to make good further losses sustained by passengers and shippers. We think that if Captain Brass had been the commander of the ship, he would not have abandoned her without first satisfying himself whether he could not do as much as the fortunate purchaser of the supposed wreck has done. The matter is of great importance, as it may involve in lawsuits all parties concerned—the owners, captain, surveyors, passengers, shippers, and the insurance offices, that have undertaken the risk on the cargo. To the lawyers it will be a regular harvest.—Hurkaru, Nov. 23.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and staff arrived at Delhi yesterday morning. The camp is pitched at the Lahore gate, and not upon the new encamping-ground near the Cashmere gate of the city. A guard of honour from the 16th Grenadiers, with the regimental colours and band, under command of Lieut.-Col. Graves, was in waiting to receive his Excellency, and was drawn up to the right of the tent. His Excellency and staff arrived about a quarter-past 7 A.M., and were received with the usual salute, fired from the artillery drawn up at the Lahore gate for the purpose. At 1 o'clock P.M. his Excellency held a levee in the durbar tent, which was numerously attended. The camp moves onwards towards Meerut on Tuesday morning.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 19.

THE 3RD EUROPEAN REGT.—The 3rd European regt. is to be formed at Chinsurah. The corps is to be armed and clothed precisely as the 2nd European regt. before it was made a fusilier corps; the facings to be white. The 1st and 2nd Fusiliers are to furnish 164 men for the 3rd European regt.; twenty serjeants; twenty corporals for serjeants; twenty lance corporals and twenty privates for corporals; and eighty-four privates, each giving a moiety of these details, as a nucleus on which to form the new corps. The above is the substance of the G.G.O. in Saturday's Gazette.—Hurkaru, Nov. 21.

OPIMUM.—The public sale of opium (Nov. 21) realized Rs. 866-2-3 for Behar, and Rs. 873-13-5½ for Benares, being a decrease of Rs. 45 on the former, and Rs. 17 on the latter, in comparison with the average prices of the October sale.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The Calcutta Gazette of Wednesday, Nov. 23, contains the following appointments:—"Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy, to be superintendent of electric telegraphs in India; Mr. C. Shepherd, junior, to be deputy-superintendent of electric telegraphs in the Bengal presidency; Mr. R. L. Brunton, to be deputy-superintendent of electric telegraphs in the Madras presidency; Dr. H. Green, to be deputy-superintendent of electric telegraphs in the Bombay presidency."

NEW LIEUT.-GOVERNOR OF AGRA'S FIRST ORDER.—The Calcutta Gazette of Wednesday, the 17th Nov. contains, among other things, the first order issued by the new Lieut.-Governor of Agra. It is ominous of his reign. We suspect that in a very few years a refuge for the destitute will be found elsewhere than on the Bench:—"The Hon. the Lieut.-Governor is pleased to direct civil and sessions judges to submit their applications for leave of absence through the court of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut; such applications to be always accompanied by a statement of the number of cases remaining undecided at that date on the several civil and criminal files of the judge's office."—Friend of India.

AN EMEUTE IN THE JAIL AT LAHORE.—We regret to learn that an emeute took place, on Thursday evening, among the prisoners confined in the Central Jail at Lahore. It was put down, happily without any loss of life. A few of the guard were ultimately obliged to fire, when six prisoners were wounded; four others also wounded with swords. The riot took place among the prisoners in No. 4 barrack, who felt much the cessation of out-door labour, to which, previous to the late prohibition, they had been accustomed. When ordered to their wards at sunset, they rushed at the gate of the yard, at which a man was stationed, and got through it into the central space, from which the different yards diverge. They then attempted to release the prisoners in No. 8 barrack, but were opposed by the door-keepers, and when foiled in this, they rushed down the main entrance (which is a narrow passage nearly one hundred yards long); but they found the gate at the end closed, and the guards at their posts. They then retraced their steps, and broke into No. 6 yard, the gate of which was closed after them. They tried then, with the prisoners therein, to climb the outer iron railings: on this the sentries fired, and they all retreated. Sixty-three of the ringleaders were at once secured, and flogged the following morning. We understand they will be placed in solitary confinement. The deputy inspector, Mr. Bryan, who was on the spot, behaved with great decision, and deserves great credit; but for him, there would have been considerable loss of life. The guards, too, were well prepared, and all would appear to have done their duty.—Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 19.

FREIGHTS.

Our quotations are, to London and Liverpool, 3l. 17s. 6d. to 4l. 5s.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Dec. 3, 1853).—The slackness which appeared in our market for cotton goods, a little before the departure of the last mail, has not been removed, the inquiry from the Agra presidency being still moderate. Scotch fabrics are more buoyant. In mule twist, ordinary low and middling 20's, 30's and 40's are in less request, while 50's to 100's are in demand with somewhat better rates. Turkey red yarns are only in limited demand, but prices are well supported. During the last few days, copper has declined, in consequence of the inquiry from the Upper Provinces having fallen off. Iron maintains its position, and holders of the metal are very firm. Spelter, lead, and tin plates are without report of sale.

MADRAS.

CAPTAIN COOKE.—We learn that Captain Cooke, of the commissariat department, will be appointed assistant adjutant-general of the army.—Madras Spectator.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN R. L. REILLY.—We regret to record the death of Captain R. L. Reilly, of the 10th N.I., which took place after a very short illness at Ootacamund on the 20th inst. Captain Reilly had been employed for some time past as executive engineer on the Neilgherries, and was very popular with all classes of the community, no less for his ability than for the amiable character of his disposition. His decease promotes Lieutenant G. J. Stapleton and Ensign W. R. Round to the higher grades.—Athenaeum, Nov. 26.

SECUNDRABAD.—The Madras United Service Gazette notices that a committee has been ordered to assemble at Secunderabad to report upon the healthiness of the barracks in that cantonment. A lakh of rupees, it is said, was expended in improving these barracks in 1837, and they are still among the most unhealthy in India. In the five years, during which H.M.'s 30th foot remained in the station, 1,000 men and women were laid in the regimental burying-ground. The journalist records this fact on his own authority, as he was stationed at Secunderabad during the whole of that period. The cause of the unhealthiness is a drain under the barrack windows, into which the graveyard filters. The burying-ground itself is only a few yards off, and on a higher level, and it has continued thus for some twenty years. The fact is simply disgraceful.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

OFF RECKONINGS.

Fort St. George, Nov. 29, 1853.—In consequence of the demise of Colonel Thomas George Newell, and of the augmentation of the infantry, the following addition to the list of officers entitled to off-reckonings are authorized:—

Colonel Thomas Littleton Green, to half a share from the Off-reckoning Fund, from the 12th October, 1853, vice Newell, deceased.

Colonel John Yaldwyn, to half a share from the Off-reckoning Fund, from the 15th November, 1853, in consequence of the augmentation.

DRESS OF 3RD EUROPEANS.

Head-Quarters, Nov. 24, 1853.—Under the authority of Government, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to establish the following dress for the 3rd Madras European regiment:—

Clothing—Red: Facings, pale yellow; lace, white with black worm.

Officers' uniform—As prescribed for officers of infantry of the line.

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAIL of November 8th arrived at Bombay December 8th (per Achar).

EXAMINATION OF SUBALTERN OFFICERS.—From the General Orders published in another column, it will be seen that the Commander-in-Chief has laid down the test of qualifications necessary for the command of a troop or company, in which an examination must be passed before any subaltern officer shall be in future considered eligible for such appointment.

THE EX-AMIEERS OF SCINDE.—The Englishman states that Government have offered the Ex-Amieers of Scinde to return and take up their residences at Hyderabad, provided they agree to do so permanently.

SHIP BURNING.—The Bombay Times records another instance of an attempt at ship burning in the harbour. The British Queen, of Liverpool, laden with cotton, left the harbour of Bombay on the 16th November. Shortly after it was discovered that she was on fire. The flames were suppressed by the exertions of the officers, and the captain returned to the port. Five hours afterwards, the vessel was again on fire. The promptitude of the officers again saved the ship; three hundred bales of cotton were removed, and hot cinders found below them. The fire therefore was the work of an incendiary. We need not say the crew are lascars, or add that they will escape.

MORTALITY IN BOMBAY.—The Bombay Gazette informs us, on the authority of a report from the Medical Board, that the deaths in that island during 1852 were 13,511. The proportion of mortality to inhabitants is about equal to that of London. The male deaths are to the female as 118 to 100. The greatest cause of mortality in Bombay is fever, which destroyed 5,847 persons. Then follow diarrhoea and dysentery, which slew nearly 3,000, then respiratory diseases (deaths 1,415), and lastly cholera (deaths 1,135). This, however, refers only to natives. Among Europeans, the number of deaths from disease of the alimentary organs are three times the deaths from fever. One-fifth of the deaths of European males spring from nervous disorders.

LORD FALKLAND was at the presidency; it was understood that he would leave India on the 28th Dec.

LORD FREDERICK FITZCLARENCE was at Poona, where he daily manœuvred the military camp which he has formed at the station.

THE NEW MERCANTILE BANK of India, London, and China, which has been lately established in Bombay, held a meeting on the 30th Nov., when the report of the provincial committee was read, the deed of settlement approved of, and the directors and some of the officials of the new bank appointed. Mr. A. Anderson, formerly manager of the Commercial Bank, has been selected as London manager on a salary of 1,000*l*.

MR. KIGHT, an aeronaut, made an ascent in Bombay on the afternoon of the 10th Dec., and had not since been heard of. Mr. Kight had about twelve months ago notified his determination of making an ascent, but failed to carry out his intention; the indignation which at that time was expressed, no doubt urged him to retrieve his reputation, and he went up on the above date, loudly cheered by the spectators, the balloon rising to a great height, so that it appeared a mere speck in the atmosphere. At about five o'clock the balloon was seen descending in the direction of Malabar Point, and the aeronaut was observed to be throwing out ballast to check the rapidity of the descent, but it fell into the sea, about three miles distant from the land, descending as it approached the ocean with fearful velocity, into which it plunged with great force, and neither man or balloon have since been heard of, although no exertions that humanity could prompt have been spared to recover him.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

FRIDAY, January 13, 1854.

COLONEL COTTON ON PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.

ALL who have paid any attention to Indian matters during the last few years, must have become almost sickened by the clamour about Public Works. But, as the subject is most important, the feeling of disgust must not be encouraged, although the subject, with many others of like nature, has for the most part fallen into the hands of persons alike incompetent and malignant. A work conceived and written in a better spirit, though not entirely free from one-sidedness, and the production certainly of a man well acquainted with that which he discusses, has lately made its appearance and has attracted, as it deserves, considerable attention.* The chief public works required in India naturally divide themselves into works of irrigation, and works for intercommunication. With regard to the former, there is scarcely room for any great difference of opinion, although it has been apprehended that such works would engender malaria, and it was, we presume, inferred that people should be sentenced to death from starvation, lest they should encounter death from disease. Colonel Cotton is an ardent, and we must add, a powerful advocate for extended irrigation, in which course we think all judicious persons must be disposed to concur with and applaud him. Whether his calculations be not over sanguine when he estimates the profit of such works at 70 per cent. upon the outlay, or more than that, is another question, on which we should say he has not furnished sufficient data to enable us to arrive at a fair judgment. But that extended irrigation is perhaps first among the great wants of India, is a point upon which few dissentients will be found. But then arises the question of questions, whence is the money to come? Colonel Cotton says, Borrow it;—and if the return be that which he estimates it to be, or one-tenth of such amount, we should say so too. That man, however, would be a bold one—that Government would be a bold one, who should act upon this recommendation in the face of the clamour which such a proceeding could not fail to raise. Here, it would be said, is a Government borrowing money in a time of peace; it must be on the very verge of insolvency. We do not affirm that it would be unwise to disregard such clamour, we think it ought to be disregarded; but so sensible and well-informed a writer as Colonel Cotton must be well aware that Manchester would be in an uproar if such improvements were made with borrowed capital, although the men of that town have been bawling themselves hoarse because they are not made, or rather because these same Manchester men choose to say that nothing of the kind has been attempted. Colonel Cotton is of a different stamp. We have no doubt he writes with perfect honesty of purpose, and we sincerely wish that the object which he so zealously presses may be carried out to an extent which may satisfy all his aspirations, and meet all the wants of India.

On the other point, the multiplication and improvement of the means of transit, it is equally impossible not to agree with him generally; but in descending to details his views will not command equal unanimity. Thus, while he would subject the enjoyment of the advantages of irrigation to the payment of toll, he is favourable to the exemption of those using roads and canals from such charge. We cannot see why. Roads and canals in England are not free. They cannot be made or maintained without expense; and nothing can be fairer, as it appears to us, than that those who use them should pay for the advantage. They increase the value of the land, and thus indirectly assist the funds of Government; but works of irrigation effect this object less circuitously; and if one class of works should be free, why not the other? Then, too, we are not sure that Col. Allen's opinions on the comparative value of different modes of transit are altogether sound. We cannot but agree in what he says as to the importance of improving and extending river navigation, but we are not at all convinced that in any case a canal is preferable to a natural river; nor that it can, to any great extent, adequately supply the place of railroads. The writer seems to think that canals in this country are still very flourishing concerns; but we suspect, that if he inquired, he would find that the dividends of canal proprietors have suffered greatly from the competition of railways. On this point, and indeed on some others, we must say that Colonel Cotton manifests a deference almost ridiculous for the authority of a person who some years since pronounced the passage by steam across the Atlantic absolutely impracticable,—a sentence too memorable to have been forgotten, had not its author subsequently attained a notoriety of a still less enviable character. Colonel Cotton seems almost to prefer common roads to railways. We regard the "iron road" as the great instrument for the renovation of India, and hope that it may be extended there far and wide. On the subject, too, of the kind of railway to be adopted, if any, we fear the author is heterodox. He is opposed to the railway as we have it here, and has a substitute in a sort of "post and rail" mode of transit, of the practicability of which we have some doubts, and of its safety still more. But enough has been said in the way of disparagement, and much might be urged in praise of the work. It is highly suggestive, and this is much. He who can set people thinking performs good service to society. On the subject of irrigation we go with Colonel Cotton heart and soul; even as to borrowing the money, not having much fear of Manchester. The bugbear of India debt is truly ridiculous, seeing how contemptible is its amount compared with the revenue of the country. While differing from some of the views advanced in this book, on the means of extending and improving intercommunication in India, the expediency of such extension and improvement cannot be questioned. In regard to the improvement of the navigation of the Godavery, the author enumerates several classes and bodies who are interested in the matter—the Company's Government, the Governments of Nagpore and Hyderabad, the manufacturers of Great Britain, the anti-slavery body, and the shipping interest. How comes it that

HOW IS INDIA RUINED?—The decay of our Indian manufactures is a subject frequently discoursed upon by Indian reformers. There is but one answer to be given to it. "Settle that with Mr. Bright." It is the rapacity of Manchester, not the rapacity of the East-India Company that impoverishes the Indian Artizan.—Calcutta Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

FRIDAY, January 13, 1854.

COLONEL COTTON ON PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.

ALL who have paid any attention to Indian matters during the last few years, must have become almost sickened by the clamour about Public Works. But, as the subject is most important, the feeling of disgust must not be encouraged, although the subject, with many others of like nature, has for the most part fallen into the hands of persons alike incompetent and malignant. A work conceived and written in a better spirit, though not entirely free from one-sidedness, and the production certainly of a man well acquainted with that which he discusses, has lately made its appearance and has attracted, as it deserves, considerable attention.* The chief public works required in India naturally divide themselves into works of irrigation, and works for intercommunication. With regard to the former, there is scarcely room for any great difference of opinion, although it has been apprehended that such works would engender malaria, and it was, we presume, inferred that people should be sentenced to death from starvation, lest they should encounter death from disease. Colonel Cotton is an ardent, and we must add, a powerful advocate for extended irrigation, in which course we think all judicious persons must be disposed to concur with and applaud him. Whether his calculations be not over sanguine when he estimates the profit of such works at 70 per cent. upon the outlay, or more than that, is another question, on which we should say he has not furnished sufficient data to enable us to arrive at a fair judgment. But that extended irrigation is perhaps first among the great wants of India, is a point upon which few dissentients will be found. But then arises the question of questions, whence is the money to come? Colonel Cotton says, Borrow it;—and if the return be that which he estimates it to be, or one-tenth of such amount, we should say so too. That man, however, would be a bold one—that Government would be a bold one, who should act upon this recommendation in the face of the clamour which such a proceeding could not fail to raise. Here, it would be said, is a Government borrowing money in a time of peace; it must be on the very verge of insolvency. We do not affirm that it would be unwise to disregard such clamour, we think it ought to be disregarded; but so sensible and well-informed a writer as Colonel Cotton must be well aware that Manchester would be in an uproar if such improvements were made with borrowed capital, although the men of that town have been bawling themselves hoarse because they are not made, or rather because these same Manchester men choose to say that nothing of the kind has been attempted. Colonel Cotton is of a different stamp. We have no doubt he writes with perfect honesty of purpose, and we sincerely wish that the object which he so zealously presses may be carried out to an extent which may satisfy all his aspirations, and meet all the wants of India.

On the other point, the multiplication and improvement of the means of transit, it is equally impossible not to agree with him generally; but in descending to details his views will not command equal unanimity. Thus, while he would subject the enjoyment of the advantages of irrigation to the payment of toll, he is favourable to the exemption of those using roads and canals from such charge. We cannot see why. Roads and canals in England are not free. They cannot be made or maintained without expense; and nothing can be fairer, as it appears to us, than that those who use them should pay for the advantage. They increase the value of the land, and thus indirectly assist the funds of Government; but works of irrigation effect this object less circuitously; and if one class of works should be free, why not the other? Then, too, we are not sure that Col. Allen's opinions on the comparative value of different modes of transit are altogether sound. We cannot but agree in what he says as to the importance of improving and extending river navigation, but we are not at all convinced that in any case a canal is preferable to a natural river; nor that it can, to any great extent, adequately supply the place of railroads. The writer seems to think that canals in this country are still very flourishing concerns; but we suspect, that if he inquired, he would find that the dividends of canal proprietors have suffered greatly from the competition of railways. On this point, and indeed on some others, we must say that Colonel Cotton manifests a deference almost ridiculous for the authority of a person who some years since pronounced the passage by steam across the Atlantic absolutely impracticable,—a sentence too memorable to have been forgotten, had not its author subsequently attained a notoriety of a still less enviable character. Colonel Cotton seems almost to prefer common roads to railways. We regard the "iron road" as the great instrument for the renovation of India, and hope that it may be extended there far and wide. On the subject, too, of the kind of railway to be adopted, if any, we fear the author is heterodox. He is opposed to the railway as we have it here, and has a substitute in a sort of "post and rail" mode of transit, of the practicability of which we have some doubts, and of its safety still more. But enough has been said in the way of disparagement, and much might be urged in praise of the work. It is highly suggestive, and this is much. He who can set people thinking performs good service to society. On the subject of irrigation we go with Colonel Cotton heart and soul; even as to borrowing the money, not having much fear of Manchester. The bugbear of India debt is truly ridiculous, seeing how contemptible is its amount compared with the revenue of the country. While differing from some of the views advanced in this book, on the means of extending and improving intercommunication in India, the expediency of such extension and improvement cannot be questioned. In regard to the improvement of the navigation of the Godavery, the author enumerates several classes and bodies who are interested in the matter—the Company's Government, the Governments of Nagpore and Hyderabad, the manufacturers of Great Britain, the anti-slavery body, and the shipping interest. How comes it that the manufacturing brawlers will do nothing but brawt and will not themselves either venture personal toil, or risk the smallest pecuniary stake for advancing their own interests? "At present," says the author before us, "the purchasing of the cotton from the cultivators is in the hands of ignorant, short-sighted, and oppressive native merchants;" and the Manchester men appear determined that it shall so remain. Why is this? We suppose these persons feel that if the system were improved, the occupation of some of them would be gone, and they would have no field for abuse and scurrility.

And now, having no further space at liberty, we must take leave of a subject on which volumes might be written, and of a book which presents materials almost inexhaustible for interesting reflection and inquiry. No one connected with India, either by circumstances or taste, should neglect to read Colonel Cotton's work.

INDIAN RUMOURS.

THE Indian papers not unfrequently get hold of news, so considered, of which no one else in the world knows anything. These fantastic articles of intelligence generally relate to military matters. The papers just received contain the following two paragraphs. The first is from a Mofussil journal, and runs thus:—

"A NEW RETIRED LIST FOR GENERAL OFFICERS AND COLONELS.—We were the first to announce to the Indian Army that a new Retired List for General Officers and Colonels (having served their time on the Staff, and declining a return to India) would probably be soon established. It is now confidently stated, in various quarters, that the fact is beyond all doubt."

A Calcutta editor quotes this, and attaches the following:—

"Is our contemporary certain upon this point? We were early in the field with this announcement, and gave it upon good authority, which subsequent private advices have only served to assure us may be relied upon."

We beg to assure our readers, in the fewest possible words, that there is no truth whatever in the statement.

SIR RICHARD JENKINS, G.C.B.

THE hand of death has removed from the Court of Directors of the East-India Company the very able and highly-respected member whose name stands at the head of this article.

He was the son of Richard Jenkins, Esq., of Bicton, Salop, a county which gave to India, at a period long antecedent to the birth of the deceased Director, the great founder of the British empire in the East, Clive, and more recently Major Edwardes. Mr. Richard Jenkins was appointed a writer for Bombay in the season of 1798, and he arrived at that presidency in 1800. Thence he proceeded to Calcutta, to partake of the advantages of the College established there. At this establishment he was highly distinguished, and on the 27th July, 1803, at the public examination held before the Governor-General, he defended the following position in the Persian language,—"The natives of India under the British government enjoy a greater degree of tranquillity, security, and happiness than under any former government." The duty, it is said, was ably performed by Mr. Jenkins, and it is certain that he maintained the right side. On the same occasion he pronounced a declamation in Arabic, and manifested great proficiency in Hindostanee. He stood first on the list of servants entered for the public service of Bombay for that year (1803), receiving a degree of honour in three languages (Persian, Hindostanee, and Arabic), in the first and third of which he was first, while he occupied the second place in the remaining one. He also received an honorary present of books in recognition of his proficiency in the Greek and Latin classics. Mr. Jenkins did not immediately return to Bombay, but passed a short time in the office of the Governor-General, whence he proceeded to Hyderabad. On the 17th May, 1804, he was appointed assistant to Mr. J. Webbe, then Resident at the court of Scindia. The death of Mr. Webbe in November of the same year, gave Mr. Jenkins temporary charge of the residency. The period was stormy, and with Scindia, who scarcely deserved to be called even a semi-civilized barbarian, it was hard to deal. Mr. Jenkins continued, however, to discharge the duties of Resident with energy and ability, but was exposed to constant vexation and serious loss, the whole of his baggage having been captured by Scindia's Pindarrie followers. His services were, however, duly appreciated by the Marquis Wellesley, and he would in all probability have been appointed the permanent successor of Mr. Webbe but for his want of years and standing. Mr. Jenkins continued his services as assistant, until in August, 1806, he was appointed acting Resident at Nagpore, during the absence of Mr. Elphinstone. This appointment was notified at home in terms very flattering to Mr. Jenkins, who had then not quite completed six years of residence in India. On a second absence of Mr. Elphinstone, commencing in 1808, Mr. Jenkins again became acting Resident, and continued in the discharge of his duties in that capacity until 1810, in the month of October of which year he was appointed Resident in the place of the distinguished officer whose office he had temporarily supplied. His career continued to be as honourable to himself and as useful to the State as heretofore. So early as 1812 he prepared an elaborate paper on the Pindarries, so long a terror to India, and a disgrace to its governments. In 1816 he had the opportunity of striking a blow of a different kind at this lawless force, by directing Colonel Walker to attack a body of them, which movement was attended by success. The step was taken in anticipation of orders from the Government, but received official approval, conveyed in very marked terms of satisfaction. In June, 1816, Mr. Jenkins succeeded in the delicate task of concluding a subsidiary treaty with Nagpore, an object which the British Government had long desired, but had previously been unable to accomplish. Little more than twelve months after he is found employed in duties of a different kind. Mr. Jenkins had long perceived that the Rajah of Nagpore was engaged in intrigues with the Peishwa, and took his measures accordingly, by urging the march of troops in the direction of Nagpore, where he expected their services would soon be wanted. Nor was the expectation vain. On the 26th November, 1817, a conference between the Resident and the Rajah's ministers was abruptly terminated by the sound of fire-arms. The expected reinforcements had not arrived, and the entire British force at Nagpore did not amount to fourteen hundred men. But in this small band were hearts ready to brave all danger at the call of duty, and it was at the disposal of a man who, albeit unbred in camps, possessed a measure of courage which would have conferred honour on the most dashing aspirant to military distinction, combined with a coolness worthy of a veteran warrior. The British took post on two hills, but it was not until the evening that the enemy opened fire. The struggle was fearful, for the British force, reaching only the inconsiderable strength already mentioned, had to contend with not less than twenty thousand men supported by thirty-five guns, of which instruments of destruction the British had only four. The contest lasted till the morning was considerably advanced, when it was triumphantly ended by the daring bravery of Captain Fitzgerald, commanding a detachment of Bengal cavalry, with which, aided by a few Madras troopers, he charged an immense body of the enemy's horse, captured their guns, and turned them upon the flying force, who were speedily scattered in every direction where flight was practicable. The day was now won; and though there was subsequently some fighting, its object was merely to clear the ground of the enemy. By mid-day on the 27th all was quiet. Throughout the action, Mr. Jenkins was on the field; and his presence and conduct, as testified by the highest military authority on the spot, Colonel Hope-toun Scott, tended greatly to animate the men in the discharge of their duties. Another civilian, Mr. Sotheby, the Resident assistant, manifested equal courage, but unhappily with less good fortune,—the field on which he exerted himself was the bed on which he drew his last breath. Civil and military thus combined to render memorable the conflict of Sectabuldee, the name of the principal eminence which was the scene of it.

The rajah shortly afterwards made his peace, and proceeded to the Residency, but some time and some military operations were required to restore order. The Resident continued active and assiduous as ever; and well it was that such was the case. The rajah persisted in his course of intrigue with the enemies of the British Government; evidences of his treachery multiplied, and it was now proved, as it had long been suspected, that he was the murderer of his kinsman who had preceded him in the sovereignty of Nagpore. He was accordingly arrested, and despatched to the British provinces under an escort. A child only ten years of age, who claimed descent, through the female line, from a former rajah, was his successor, and, from the consequent long minority, the entire administration of affairs in Nagpore devolved on the British Resident, who thus became the virtual ruler of the state. The difficulties of Mr. Jenkins's position were enhanced by an unlooked-for occurrence. The deposed rajah contrived to make his escape, and succeeded in collecting a body of adherents within his former dominions, who supplied him with the "sinews of war." This rendered him for some time a cause of apprehension and a source of trouble. But amidst all difficulties Mr. Jenkins performed his onerous duties in a manner that reflected the highest credit on himself, and conferred the greatest benefit on the country; which, under his management, steadily increased in wealth, tranquillity, and all the elements of peaceful and happy progress, and which, in 1826, he transferred to the rajah in a state of prosperity which it had never before attained. The negotiation of the treaty under which the new ruler was admitted to the actual exercise of power was the last act of Mr. Jenkins's Indian life; and it received the following graceful acknowledgment:—

"SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch dated the 1st instant, forwarding for ratification the treaty concluded by you with his highness the Rajah of Nagpore, under the instructions of Government, dated the 8th September last, and to return to you that instrument herewith, duly signed, sealed, and ratified by the Right Honourable the Governor-General.

"Lord Amherst gladly avails himself of this opportunity to express to you his high sense of the zeal, judgment, and ability which have marked your proceedings in carrying into effect the orders of the Supreme Government regarding the transfer of the Nagpore territory to the government of its native sovereign; and his Lordship desires me to add that the service which you have rendered to the state in the completion of the above arrangement, forms an auspicious and appropriate termination at once of your brilliant, energetic, and successful administration of Nagpore affairs, and of your eminently honourable and distinguished career of public employment in India.

"It remains only to express his Lordship's cordial regret that the state of your health compels you to return to Europe at the moment of so important and interesting a change in the government of Nagpore, when the continued application of your enlightened superintending care and experienced guidance and advice would have proved of incalculable benefit to the interests, welfare, and prospects both of the rajah and his subjects.

(Signed) J. A. STIRLING, Deputy Secretary to the Government, in attendance on the Governor-General."

"Camp at Kahjehanpore,
"18th December, 1826.

On Mr. Jenkins's return to England, he met with the reception that he so well deserved. Honours and distinctions awaited him; and in due time he received them from the Crown, from the Proprietors of the East-India Company, and from those among whom his earlier years had been passed. In June, 1832, he was elected a Director of the East-India Company, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. C. E. Prescott. The flattering approbation of the Crown was indicated by his being selected for the honour of G.C.B., a distinction the more marked when it is considered that from the limited number of civilians admitted to this dignity, the number even of meritorious men who can attain it, is very small. The advisers of the Crown undoubtedly manifested great tact, judgment, and good feeling, in recommending Sir Richard Jenkins for this mark of royal grace and favour, and that part of the public acquainted with India, fully appreciated the wisdom of the recommendation. There is reason to believe that such a feeling was entertained by the illustrious Marquis Wellesley, under whose administration the dawning of Sir Richard Jenkins's talents and energy was displayed, to be more fully developed under future governments. The sense which his colleagues in the East-India direction had of his abilities as a man of business, was shown by his appointment as Deputy-Chairman for the year 1838-39, followed as it was by his being chosen Chairman for the succeeding year. For some years, Sir Richard Jenkins sat in Parliament for the borough of Shrewsbury, and it is certain that his selection by the townsmen of the Salopian capital as their representative, conferred, at least, as much honour on themselves as on the object of their choice.

Little remains but to advert to the close of the earthly existence of one of India's really great men. Sir Richard Jenkins died on the 30th of December last, at the age of sixty-eight.

DEATH OF DR. MILL.—It is with regret we announce the decease of Dr. William Hodge Mill, Regius Professor of Hebrew, Canon of Ely, and Rector of Brasted, who died at Ely on Christmas-day, after less than a week's illness. Dr. Mill took a very high degree in 1813, and was elected Fellow of Trinity College. In 1820 he went out as first principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta, the noble foundation of Bishop Middleton. On his return in 1838, he received the honourable and important appointment of domestic and examining chaplain to the late Archbishop Howley. Subsequently he was appointed Christian advocate. In 1843, his patron and friend Archbishop Howley presented him to the living of Brasted, Kent, and in 1848 he was elected Regius Professor of Hebrew, to which a canonry at Ely is attached. As a mathematician and scholar, Dr. Mill's attainments were of the very highest order; and the pursuits of his youth he continued as the relaxation of his maturer years. His acquirements in Sanscrit have won him an European reputation; and, as a contribution to the evangelization of India, as well as a classical production in that great language, his "Christa Sangrita" is a work unparalleled in modern literature. Dr. Mill leaves behind him a widow and surviving daughter, the wife of the Rev. Benjamin Webb, of Sheen.

EAST-INDIA COLLEGE.—The examination of the candidates for admission into the East-India College next term (which will commence on the 19th inst.), took place at the East-India House, on the 5th, 6th, and 7th instant, when, of forty-two candidates who were examined, the following were reported duly qualified, viz.:—H. W. Alexander, S. G. Bayley, H. M. Caulfeild, F. H. Conolly, R. G. Currie, T. C. Graham, H. Hankey, G. L. T. Harris, Lord Frederick Hay, O. B. Irvine, Sir M. G. Jackson, Bart., E. G. Jenkinson, C. Clarke Jervoise, A. A. Clarke Jervoise, W. H. Kerr, E. D. Lockwood, E. C. Lewis, W. McPherson, A. R. Macdonald, A. R. D. Mackenzie, F. Macnaghten, E. Macnaghten, C. W. Moore, F. B. Outram, E. H. Percival, C. G. Plumer, H. J. M. Præd, W. H. Propert, H. G. Ross, W. H. Salmon, R. W. Sparks, A. L. Spens, L. R. Tottenham, W. S. Wells, D. Williams.

APPOINTMENTS.—The London Gazette of December 14th contains the following appointments by the Queen:—Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. G. Cathcart, governor of the Cape of Good Hope, and Maj.-Gen. Henry Somerset, C.B., to be ordinary members of the military division of the second class of Knights commanders of the most honourable order of the Bath; and Col. W. Eyre, Lieut.-Col. 73rd foot, Lieut.-Col. J. Michell, 6th foot, Lieut.-Col. C. C. Yarborough, 91st foot, Lieut.-Col. G. T. C. Napier, late lieut.-col. of the regt. of Cape Mounted riflemen, and Lieut.-Col. John Maxwell Perceval, 12th foot, to be ordinary members of the military division of the third class of companions of the said most honourable order.—Dec. 24. The Queen has been pleased to appoint John Bowring, Esq., now H.M.'s consul at Canton, to be H.M.'s plenipotentiary and chief superintendent of British trade in China.—Jan. 10. The Queen has been pleased to appoint Dr. Bowring to be governor and commander-in-chief in and over the colony of Hong-Kong and its dependencies.

Weekly Board-day, Thursday, at 1 o'clock.
Committees sit also every Tuesday and Saturday at 12 o'clock, when Policies requiring despatch may be effected.

Agents in India.—Messrs. Braddon and Co., Calcutta; Messrs. Bainbridge and Co., Madras; Messrs. Leckie and Co., Bombay.

MICHAEL ELIJAH IMPEY, Secretary.

THE LONDON AND EASTERN BANK.—Paid-up Capital, £100,000. To be incorporated under the Act of Viet. 7 and 8.

DIRECTORS.

The Hon. JOHN CADWALLADER ERKINE, E.I.C.S., Chairman.
John Carnac Morris, Esq., F.R.S., E.I.C.S., formerly Superintendent and Treasurer of the Government Bank, and President of the Chartered Bank of Madras, Deputy-Chairman.
Lieut.-Colonel Thomas Chadwick, Bengal Army.
Lieut.-Colonel J. G. W. Curtis, C.B., Bengal Army.
Robert John Lattey, Esq., of Calcutta.
Major Auchmuty Tucker, C.B., Bengal Army.
John Edward Steinhens, Esq., Manager (late Manager of the Simla Bank, London Branch).

Agent in Calcutta—John Macchellar, Esq.
Bankers—The Bank of England; the Commercial Bank of London.
Audit—J. E. Coleman, Esq., Accountant to the Bank of England; George Joseph Lyons, Esq.

Solicitors—Messrs. Oliverston, Lavey, and Peachey.

It has been long seen and felt by mercantile houses connected with India that more extended banking accommodation is required, for, while business with the East is rapidly and steadily increasing, banking accommodation in connection with the commerce of India is principally confined to one large establishment.

A very favourable opportunity of starting a Bank of this nature exists at present, as the Simla Bank, which has for some years been established in India, with branches in Calcutta and in London, has, by mutual arrangement among its shareholders, been separated from its two branches; and on the foundation of these latter the London and Eastern Bank is formed. Thus the new Bank at once secures the existing business connection and establishments of the Simla Bank in London and Calcutta, and the capital of the Bank is provided at starting with an immediate and profitable field for employment, and is at once rendered productive—an object which a new Bank can very rarely present. Nearly all the home and many of the Indian shareholders in the Simla Bank have joined the London and Eastern Bank. It may be mentioned here that the Simla Bank has been established in India for nine years, and during that time has given a regular and steady dividend of 8 and 9 per cent. per annum.

The business of the London and Eastern Bank will be confined for the present to Exchange operations between London and India, the purchase of bills secured by first-class credits and shipping documents, the purchase and the sale of Government paper, and bullion for the Bank and its constituents, realisation of bills and drafts in India, discounts and advances on dock warrants, bills of lading, and other securities of a safe and easy convertible description.

It is intended to commence working the Bank with a Branch at Calcutta only in the first instance, employing the agency of other Banks at Bombay and China until the business is sufficiently large to support separate branches at these places, and for this reason the paid-up capital is limited in the commencement to £100,000, to be increased as may be found advisable, existing shareholders having the preference in every new creation of stock.

The Bank is prepared to transact business with all parties on the following terms:—

1. Drawing or current accounts opened with individuals and firms, and interest at 2 per cent. per annum allowed on the monthly minimum credit balance, if not reduced below £100, interest not being calculated on broken periods of the months of lodgment and withdrawal.
2. Deposit accounts. Interest is allowed on all sums deposited in the branch for fixed periods at current rates, such accounts being generally payable at once, under discount, if required. Large amounts are received for fixed periods under special agreement.
3. East-India Government paper bought and sold, dividends and interest drawn, and investments and sales effected in the British and Foreign Funds, East-India Company's Stock, and other securities.
4. Pay and pensions of the officers of the army and navy, and of the civil and military services of the East-India Company, are realized as they fall due.
5. Commission at one-half per cent. is charged on all accounts opened with the branch (except deposit accounts) unless remitted by special agreement.
6. Bills and letters of credit are granted, and remittances made to India, at the exchange of the day.
7. The Bank is prepared to purchase bills drawn against funds or Government paper in India, or on approved parties there.
8. The Bank will generally be prepared to discount its own acceptances.

Every information with regard to the Bank may be obtained on application to the Manager, and a list of the shareholders seen at the office.

J. E. STEPHENS, Manager.

36, King William Street, City, January 1, 1854.

CHESS.—THE STAUNTON TERRACE CHESS BOARD, expressly sanctioned and adopted by Mr. Staunton himself.

The amateurs of Chess in India are respectfully invited to give their orders for the magnificent Chess Boards which MECHER has just produced, as an appropriate accompaniment to the far-famed Staunton Chess men. The prices vary, according to the style of embellishment, and they are warranted to stand any climate. N.B.—MECHER, 4, Leadenhall Street, London, is the well-known emporium for dressing cases, writing desks, razors, and all descriptions of cutlery. Orders must be accompanied by a reference for payment to some home in London.

GUNS, RIFLES, AND PISTOLS.

JOHN BLISSETT, Gun-Maker, 322, High Holborn, respectfully begs to inform his patrons and the public that he continues to make to order and has the largest and best-assorted stock in the trade of Guns, Rifles, and Pistols, of every bore, weight, length, and description, and of every varied price, made of the very best materials, by all experienced first-class workmen, upon the premises, which may be selected from at once, without uncertainty or delay, and the superior shooting qualities seen.

J. B. begs especial notice to his recent and very important improvements in his Revolving Poly-chambered Pistols and Rifles, each chamber interlocking by insertion with the fore-barrel at the time of discharge, without which no revolving arm is perfect or safe. An inspection will prove its adaptation of the revolving chamber principle to be the most secure, effective, and complete ever invented.

WATERPROOF GARMENTS.

E. SPENCER and CO. have the satisfaction to announce that they have received the unsolicited permission of Captain Crookshank, 51st Regt., to state that he has given one of their WATERPROOF GARMENTS a TEST OF FOUR YEARS in the HOTTEST PARTS OF INDIA; and whilst his friends around him (who had purchased "Pocket Syphonias" and other novelties, advertised to "stand all climates") were drenched to the skin, he had not so much as a damp thread about him, and with the exception of his cape being minus a couple of buttons, it is nearly as good as when purchased.

E. S. and Co.'s STOCK comprises every kind of OUTER GARMENT, made in the best style, and suited to all the various circumstances of exposure to weather by sea and land.

All kinds of Floats and Life Buoy. Patent Buoyant Water-tight Trunks, Bags, Portmanteaus, Overland Trunks, Packing Cases, and all articles of Travelling equipment.

GENERAL WATERPROOF WAREHOUSE,

(Opposite Mark Lane.)

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION OF OPIUM

and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—This most valuable preparation stands highly recommended by the faculty both in India and England, and also in several large cities on the Continent of Europe, as a safe and efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium, but more especially in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting which so generally precedes EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.

As disgraceful attempts have been made in this country and in India to impose a spurious preparation by counterfeit labels and recensions, it becomes the duty of Messrs. SAVORY and MOORE to caution the public against such impositions, and to inform them that JEREMIE'S SOLUTION OF OPIUM is now prepared (EXCLUSIVELY) in their laboratory in London, by desire of the representative of the late Captain Jeremie, and that every bottle will be surrounded with a Government stamp, without which none can be genuine.

London, December 1, 1853.

Agents in India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, & Co., Calcutta.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS, the most effectual Cure for GOUT and RHEUMATISM.—A frequent cause of these complaints is the inflammatory state of the blood, attendant with bad digestion, lassitude, and great debility, showing the want of a proper circulation of the fluids, and that impurity of the blood greatly aggravates these painful disorders. Holloway's Pills are of so purifying a nature that a few doses, taken in time, is an effectual preventive against Gout and Rheumatism; but any one that has an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the powerful properties of which, combined with the effect of the Pills, insures a certain cure.

Sold by all druggists, and at Professor Holloway's, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

skill of a native doctor. As soon as practicable, Dr. Lyell arrived from Peshawur, and it is said that the recent reports of Lieutenant Godby's situation are favourable. On the motive of the murderer there are speculations, which the rude justice of the bystanders has probably prevented being either verified or refuted.

From Oude, there is only the "old story." We need not say what it is. From Hyderabad (Nizam's country), much the same.

Calcutta is for the present deprived of the light of the Governor-General, who has departed for Pegu, under an Act of the legislature of India, passed at once, the rule of suspension having itself been suspended for the purpose. The Act, as usual, enables the Governor-General alone to exercise all the powers that may be exercised by the Governor-General in Council, excepting such as may by resolution be reserved to the President in Council, and excepting, necessarily, the power of making laws and regulations; the Act to commence from the official announcement of the Governor-General's departure; and its duration is limited to two calendar months from the time of passing the Act. Having adverted to legislation, another measure of that kind may be mentioned. This is an Act empowering every attorney of any of her Majesty's courts to practise in any of the Sudder Courts of the East-India Company, subject to the rules in force therein; and every attorney and barrister in any of the said Supreme Courts to practise in any of the Company's courts subordinate to the Sudder Courts, without obtaining any certificate of good character and qualifications, as previously required from pleaders, and still, it is to be presumed, from all not attorneys or barristers of the Supreme Courts. These functionaries are to be regarded as pure as Cæsar's wife, and as able as Sir Frederic Thesiger, yet perchance they may make strange havoc with Indian law. Whether the people at large are likely to be improved by the European lawyers, or the latter contaminated by their intercourse with the masses, is a nice point of inquiry, into which it were better not to enter.

The absorbing matter at Madras seems to be the acquisition by the British Government of the fertile territory of Nagpore, in consequence of the late ruler leaving no heir. This country is vaunted as the "garden of India," the "great cotton-field of the country," &c. Its power of producing cotton is undeniable; and with the facilities of communication which will, without doubt, now be furnished, it may render us independent of the United States,—a most desirable thing, for various reasons. It is to be wished that the hope of this result might be extended, by adding the words—and satisfy the Manchester cotton-spinners; but as nothing can satisfy them, it would be folly to entertain a hope of effecting such a process.

From Bombay, it is announced that a large body of Persian troops had marched from Shiraz to Bushire, which port was blockaded by the Company's sloop Clive, and that the schooner Constance and the steam frigate Auckland have been despatched to the Persian Gulf. The army of exercise at Poona has been broken up, and has been the subject of a very complimentary order, issued by Lord Frederick Fitzclarence. It is reported, that his lordship is about to proceed to Scinde.

China contributes little or nothing; and no information, either new or entitled to credit, is furnished as to the movements of the rebels or insurgents, or patriots, or whatever they may be entitled to be called. The army of this body is said to be within sixty miles of Pekin, having advanced after sustaining a defeat, an operation which in Europe usually checks progress, but which, in China, seems to accelerate it. At Shanghae, a man of Chinese descent, but a native of Singapore, consequently a British subject, is said to have been inveigled into the city and there beheaded, on the ground that he was a spy. His countrymen of Chinese origin have memorialized the British Consulate on the subject, and the memorial is under consideration.

The following is by the China Mail, considered important:—

"By the portion of the Russian squadron just arrived here from Japan, the demise of the temporal sovereign is reported."

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE ARMIES OF INDIA, REPORTED SINCE OUR LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s TROOPS.—Lieut. J. L. S. Lumsdaine, H.M.'s 15th Hussars, near Bangalore, Dec. 15.

BENGAL.—Col. W. H. L. Frith, at Southampton, aged 68, Jan. 23.

MADRAS.—Lieut. E. W. Vaughan, 17th N.I., at Aurangabad, Dec. 9; Col. F. Haleman, at Kensington, aged 58, Jan. 2.

BOMBAY.—Capt. G. Stack, 24th N.I., at Kurrachee, Dec. 9; Lieut. T. B. Jones, 11th N.I., at Asseerghur, Dec. 16; Lieut. S. Dobree, 5th L.I., at Florence, Jan. 7.

BURMAH.

CONSPIRACY AT RANGOON.—By the steamer Fire Queen we have been apprised of the discovery of a conspiracy at Rangoon, planned, it is supposed, with the connivance of the court of Ava, for the murder of all British, or rather European, residents, on the 23rd Nov. It appears that the plan of operation sketched out was to set fire to the commissariat storehouses, and by taking advantage of the confusion thus created, to attack and regain the Shoay Dagon Pagoda, and after taking possession of the stockade, to burn the town of Rangoon, and annihilate all European residents. One of the conspirators, probably thinking that he might gain more by siding with the British than with his own countrymen, gave secret information to the commissioner of Rangoon, who, after first satisfying himself by all possible means in his power of the correctness of the intelligence thus derived, made his arrangements accordingly. An officer of H.M.'s 80th regt., and a company of the 9th N.I. were ordered to embark on board the Nemeris at half-past five on the evening of the 22nd of November. The commissariat is said to have complied with the indent made for provisioning the troops, and it was generally supposed that the force was to start next morning in pursuit of some dacoits, which caused much annoyance to the inhabitants of Pegu. After dark, however, the troops disembarked again, and were stationed near the commissariat godowns. The guards were doubled, and some of the ports were strengthened by artillery. The conspirators, however, probably keeping an equally sharp look-out, after learning of the arrangements, desisted from carrying their designs into effect, and the impending conflict was averted by the timely measures of the commissioner. Numerous arrests are said to have taken place, and it is stated that through the exertions of the authorities not less than twenty-three persons concerned in the conspiracy had been secured.—Hurkaru.

On Monday night reports were rife about the town that Pegue had been retaken by Moungh Beau and his followers, but from inquiries we have made we are happy to say that advices from Pegue have been received, dated the 21st, but no allusion has been made upon the subject of the reports, neither was the garrison in any fear of danger.—Rangoon Chronicle, Nov. 23.

The Myo-Ouks of Pounling, and other villages on the banks of the creek to which it gives its name, having reported to the deputy commissioner that several gangs of daring dacoits are committing depredations there, a strong party of the Pegu light infantry battalion, under Captain Nuthall, its commandant, proceeded up there on Sunday last.

A party of the Pegu light infantry battalion also proceeded on Sunday noon last to the village of Bhohay, beyond the Poooson-down Creek, where a gang of dacoits have located themselves.

The first fire of the season occurred on Sunday night last in the district of Lambodeh, near the river side, and just at the end of the new strand road. About sixty more houses were burnt.

The H. C. steamer Tenasserim returned from Maulmein on Sunday, and started for Calcutta on Monday noon last.

A detachment of H.M.'s 80th, and a detachment of a native regiment, embarked last night on the Nemesis, it was said, for the purpose of guarding the river off Kemendine. The commissariat guards were strengthened last night, and detachments under the command of European officers were stationed at Kemendine and Poooson-down.—Ibid.

PROME.

We extract the subjoined letters from Promé, dated 18th November, 1853, 10 P.M.

"The prisoners here broke out of jail this evening at or about six o'clock P.M., heavy firing was kept up for a good hour—and the Ramgurg Irregulars charged in amongst the convicts. A great massacre was the result. I have just heard that about forty prisoners succeeded in making their escape out of jail. Of this number between thirty and thirty-five are returned as killed and wounded, and the remainder got scot free. One sepoy on our side (the sentry at the gate) was wounded rather severely in the rush.

"All sorts of rumours here—one is rather startling, to the effect that an army of Burmans are between this and Meeaday. How they came there no one knows. Another large army is on the advance from Ava towards us. The head-quarters of the 2nd E.B. Fusiliers are to remain in Promé and the 1st will have to go to Meeaday."—Rangoon Chronicle, Nov. 26.

Our latest intelligence from Capt. Smith's district is dated the 19th, and represent that part of the country to be perfectly quiet and the river to be entirely free from dacoits. The weather would also appear to be delightful up there, as the average range of the thermometer is said to be 75° at noon, and 70° dawn.—Ibid.

In our last issue we noticed that important stations of the town had guards placed there. This was done as secretly as possible in order not to alarm the inhabitants, of that which we have so often croaked upon. But as there was something "i'the wind," we were naturally on the alert.—Ibid.

The town was to have been taken on Wednesday morning, at seven o'clock. It was a well-planned scheme, and had not our authorities taken time by the forelock the consequence would have been dreadful.

The head conspirator was seized by the deputy commissioner a little before the time which the insurgents had appointed for their work of massacre, and thus ended the first lesson.—Ibid.

BENGAL.

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

"Camp, Adeeazee, Nov. 27th, 1854.

"Since my last letter to you we have scarcely done anything worth writing to you about. We moved to this ground about a fortnight ago, and since then have been marking out the fort and making roads. Some days ago we were in hope of going at the Afreedoes; but they have come to terms, and given in to us, with their usual promises of never again troubling us. Our only chance now of any fighting is with the 'Borees', but whether or not we are to be sent against them, I cannot tell. The camp is becoming dull, and one does nothing but walk about all day long. The mountain train and guide infantry have joined us, and will, I fancy, remain until everything is quiet. I am tired of the dull life, and wish myself back into cantonments again. The nights are dark, and two nights ago we had a couple of shots fired into camp. This place is very healthy, and all the Peshawur invalids are recovering. Gen. Roberts has, we hear, been very ill, and obliged to leave Peshawar.

"Mr. John Lawrence and Major Edwardes, with their camp, are still with us. I hope in a day or two to see the fort begun; and should anything occur will let you hear."

Since writing the above, we have received the important intelligence that a gallant and most successful operation had been planned and carried out against the refractory. To render the measures for effectually opening the Kohat pass complete, it became absolutely necessary to prove to these people, that their hills and valleys were accessible to well-organized troops, and that they were to be beaten on their own ground. Intimation of the necessity of resorting to compulsion having been communicated by the political authorities to Colonel Boileau, now commanding the whole "field force" (he had rejoined the 22nd foot, on Brigadier Breton returning to assume command of the Sind Sagur district), in the course of Nov. 28th, the following party was directed to hold itself in readiness for active service on the following morning:—

The whole of the mountain mule train.

Two guns of Capt. Delamain's 9-pounder battery, which it was however found necessary to send back under escort of 200 Goorkas, whose services were thus lost to the detachment.

400 men of H.M.'s 22nd regiment;

200 men of the 20th N.I.;

400 of the 66th, or Goorka regiment;

And 450 of the Guides.

The force, which was commanded by Col. Boileau, who had the advantage of being most materially assisted in his operations by Lieut.-Col. Napier and Major Edwardes, marched from camp at 5 A.M. on the morning of the 29th November; and preliminary arrangements having been made, the outer range of hills was penetrated at two points, distant about one and a half mile from each other. Through the first, deriving its name from the village of Kundao, went the gallant Guides, with the intention of taking the enemy in flank, and so successful were they in this manoeuvre, that on the main body entering the Shergush pass farther on, they found it evacuated, though the hanging caubers, and certain heads of maize half roasted, which were found on the heights, clearly proved that they had only just been abandoned by the hill men, who had no mind to be taken in rear by the guides.

On deploying from the pass at the foot of the inner side of the outer range, the force was reunited, and found itself on a small plain, in a valley much resembling that of Kangra, with the three villages of the Borees before them, at the foot of some precipitous crags: these, it at once became apparent, must be carried before the villages could be attacked and destroyed. The service devolved on two detachments of the Goorkas and the Guides, commanded by Lieutenants Hodgson and Turner, respectively; and the style in which the latter, especially, whose party met with the greatest resistance, drove the enemy from crag to rock, and from rock to crag, and finally kept them at bay from eleven in the morning till three in the afternoon, was the admiration of the whole force, who could plainly see the onslaught, especially a fierce struggle that lasted a whole hour, for the possession of a breast-work, which appeared inaccessible from below, but was ultimately carried by the Guides in the face of the determined resistance of the Afreedoes, who fought for every inch of ground.

During these operations on the hills the three villages were burnt, and it was only the want of powder that prevented the whole of the succession of small towers being blown into the air. The powder was in charge of the sappers, who unfortunately fell into the rear, and having done so, received orders to stand fast at the Shergush pass, where they were joined by the chief commissioner, who had thence a full view of the whole of the operations. The scene, on the principal village being set on fire, with the clouds of smoke rising up the hills, was grand and solemn.

The work for which the force had entered the valley having been thus fully achieved, the retreat commenced at three P.M., and then the difficulties of the detachment commenced, for, as is well known, the Afghans are familiar with the art of following, though they will rarely meet an enemy. The withdrawal of the Guides and Goorkas from the heights was most exciting, and none but the best officers and the best men could have achieved this duty with such complete success. Lieut. Hodgson's tactics were of the most brilliant description, and the whole force having been once more re-united in the plain, they marched out of the valley by the Turoonee pass, which, though furthest from the British camp, was the shortest to the outer plains, on emerging into which they were joined by the chief commissioner from the Shergush pass. The force did not return to camp till between ten and eleven at night, having been out nearly eighteen hours, many of the men without food, and almost all without water, the small supply which had been carried out having soon been exhausted, and none being procurable at Boree.

Not an officer of the detachment was touched, and only eight men killed and twenty-four wounded. When the force first entered the valley, there were not more than 200 Borees in arms to resist; but before they returned, the number had increased to some three thousand, tens and twenties pouring in all the morning from all the villages and hamlets within many miles, intelligence of the attack being conveyed to them by the firing.

The whole of this gallant affair was evidently well planned and well executed, and the praise earned by the troops most just. The attack will strike terror into the hearts of the recusants, and they, as well as the hill tribes in general, have learnt that no rocks, however inaccessible they may seem, no defiles through which our troops have to pass, and no breastworks the enemy may erect, can, nor will protect them.—Hurkaru.

KUSSOWLIK, Nov. 26.—A barbarous murder was committed here last night, or rather early this morning, on the person of Pemsr. Sergeant J. Hannan. The murderer or murderers broke open a door in the deceased's house, and cut and stabbed him in several places; one stab below the left ear, apparently with a large knife, must have caused instantaneous death. The deceased lived quite alone, having but one servant, and must have been about fifty-five years of age: he had been for some months suffering from ill-health, which so reduced him that he could have offered but a feeble resistance to any one; but the probability is that he was surprised in bed while asleep. He was possessed of considerable property, and no doubt the motive which influenced his murderers was the hope of finding a large sum of money in the house; several boxes were broken open, but it is not known whether or not they contained any money. A track of blood was found from the deceased's house for a considerable distance, through the Regimental Bazar, to the Kalka-road; but owing to the absence of any civil or military authorities at this station, at present, no trace of the murderers have as yet been discovered.

Nadir Khan, the son of the Maula Jugheerda, who was the originator of the recent attempted outbreak in the vicinity of Murree and Rawul Pindee, suffered the penalty of death, at the latter station, on the morning of the 19th inst. Tali Mahomed, one of the followers, who fired the shot that was nearly proving fatal to the commissioner, Mr. Thornton, was hung at the same time with his master.

Ram Dass, the fuker who personated the late Peshora Sing, was seized in Maharaja Goolab Singh's territories, and sent in a prisoner to Rawul Pindee. He and Nadir Khan's other fellow-conspirator, Jafir Khan Golrah, are now undergoing their trial; and will most probably be transported for life.

MUTTANEE.—The following is dated Camp Muttanee, 3rd November:—"Nearly all the available troops in camp started yesterday morning to burn and destroy the villages in the Booree valley. Our force consisted of 450 Guides, the mountain train battery, about 400 H.M.'s 22nd, 450 Goorkhas, and 180 20th N.I.; the whole were under arms at 4 A.M., commanded by Col. Boileau, of H.M.'s 22nd. Our party, after crossing the hills between Kundas and the main Afreedie range, descended into the valley without opposition at half past 10. A snug, peaceful-looking spot it is, with its four prosperous and comfortable villages, each defending the other, and flanked by three or four towers immediately under the hills on the further side of the valley. The two villages to our left were carried and fired by the 22nd boys and a party of Goorkhas, who made uncommonly short work of it, whilst the two on the right were similarly disposed of by Turner's division of the Guides, under cover of the mountain train guns, whose practice was first-rate. Their occupants were soon expelled, closely followed by Turner's men, who eventually drove their adversaries up the hill side to the left and over the crest. Meantime these almost inaccessible heights, which by the way commanded the aforesaid villages, were, in spite of a most determined opposition on the part of the Afreedies, who disputed the ground step by step, carried in to the right in splendid style by Hodgson's division of the Guides and the Goorkhas. No description of mine can give you an idea of the admirable manner in which these gallant fellows, Guides and Goorkhas, did their work; depend on it, this crowning of the Booree heights was one of the finest pieces of light infantry performance on record; it was, moreover, one which Avitable, with 10,000 Seikhs, was unable to accomplish. The skirmishers were recalled at about 3 o'clock. The Goorkhas descending by a gorge in the steep front of the hill, closely followed by the Afreedies, who kept up a galling fire to the last; the steadiness of skirmishers in their descent was the admiration of all.

"The Guides, Goorkhas, and part of the 22nd, were warmly engaged in the rear as the column retired, which it did by a more practicable route than it had entered by, and finally reached camp at 10 P.M., pretty well done up, as you may fancy. Our day's work cost us the lives of five Guides, four Goorkhas, and one private of H.M.'s 22nd, with nine guides, eight Goorkhas, four of H.M.'s 22nd and one artillery man, wounded; not a heavy loss considering what was effected in the face of a determined resistance on the part of our enemies, who are the bravest fellows and the best marksmen of all the Afreedie tribes. Our political arrangements were excellent. Mr. Lawrence, Major Edwards, Colonel Napier, and Captain James, were present, also several amateurs from cantonment."

PESHAWUR, Nov. 21.—"Capt. Coke was wounded the other day in the head; he went with a party of villagers who were going to attack a hostile tribe, just to keep them in countenance and show them the way, but they ran off and left him alone, and he was wounded by a matchlock ball, but not seriously."

"A horrible murder was committed here a day or two ago, by a man belonging to the corps of Guides. He cut a woman to pieces, and wounded two men badly; after which he ran away to an old tower or burj in the lines occupied by the Guides when in cantonment, mounted the summit, and then waving his sword over his head, like a second Horatio Cooley, bid defiance to the army of chowkedars, headed by the gallant cantonment magistrate. The latter, however, got over the hero by force of argument, and induced him at length to throw down his sword, when he was seized. All the men in the Guide corps look pretty nearly as if they were ready for anything from pitch and toss to manslaughter at any hour of the day or night—perhaps they make all the better soldiers for that.

"There was a severe shock of an earthquake felt here last night, Nov. 20th. It occurred exactly as the eight o'clock gun fired, and seemed as if it was the effect of the report; but it was too severe to be mistaken, as it made the houses shake. Another severe shock was felt at Peshawur on Dec. 6th, which it is stated must have caused great destruction in Afghanistan."

"Our general is gone, and the brigadier is soon to follow. Brigadier Salter being promoted to a senior class brigadier, leaves shortly for Agra, it is said."

"The 2nd battalion of artillery arrived yesterday in the course of the general relief."

"4th Dec.—There has been another attempt at assassination committed here or in the neighbourhood. Lieut. Godby, attached to the cavalry of the guide corps (the infantry have been lately employed with the detachment in the Kohat Pass), was stabbed yesterday in the back by a man, who, on some pretence or other, obtained access to him when he was on parade. The guide corps, with the exception of a portion of them at Mattannee, are in the Eusafzye country, where they are building a cantonment. Unfortunately there was no medical officer there at the time, and the wounded officer had no one to attend him but a native doctor. Some accounts say the wound is not mortal, and I trust this is the case. As soon as intelligence of the outrage was brought to Peshawur, Dr. Lyell hastened out to afford medical aid. Little or nothing is known of the motives which led to the commission of the crime. It is surmised that Lieut. Godby was mistaken for Lieut. Hodgson, commandant of the guide corps, and assistant-commissioner in the Eusafzye. Col. Mackeson was murdered while sitting in his verandah reading a note; here is an officer severely wounded, to say the least, while sitting on his horse on parade, with a number of his men about him."

"P.S.—Recent accounts give a more favourable report of Lieut. Godby's wound."

COL. BOILEAU'S CAMP.—The subjoined is our latest news from the camp of Colonel Boileau, near Adeezae:—

"Camp Bazeed Khel, Dec. 8, 1853.—Since my last letter we have had a few changes in our camp. The Guides and Mountain Train have left us, and our force now consists of the 22nd regiment, 20th Native Infantry, 66th regiment, 7th Irregular Cavalry, and Captain Delamain's battery. We have not yet succeeded in getting the water from the spring to the fort, and have therefore not begun to build the latter. Our roads are getting on well, and will soon be ready for our patrols. I was sorry to see a few mistakes in your account of the Booree expedition; everything we did is attributed to the Guides, and nothing is said of the Mountain Train, the 22nd regiment, or the 66th. I can assure you, the latter especially did good service, and had some of the hardest fighting of the day; the Mountain Train also was very useful, and did its duty well. The 22nd crowned the heights on our coming out of the valley, and have lost one man since from wounds received that day. The sappers and miners, with the powder, did not 'fall into the rear,' but were ordered back before they got to the top of the hill, over which we passed. I hope you will correct these mistakes, as I like to see justice done to all parties."

THE MUTLAH RIVER.

It appears that the vessels despatched on a survey of that river, after returning to Calcutta, have submitted to Government their report, which, it is stated, is more favourable than the most sanguine could have ventured to anticipate. In short, with a little expense, vessels could, by that channel, be brought within fifteen miles from Calcutta; and if the Tolly Nullah Canal be availed of, there is nothing to prevent them from casting anchor in the very harbour of this town. Under these circumstances the idea of a railway from the Mutlah, in preference to a canal, is dying away of itself; and the opinion we have, all along expressed about the advisability of a canal will, eo ipso, become practically established. We have frequently argued this important question, and are now the more strengthened in the views we have taken, as from facts and circumstances since elicited, it is clear that, leaving every other matter out of consideration, even in mere point of expense, a canal will in the end be found the more economical of the two. It has been ascertained that, in order to guard against the effects of inundation, it would be necessary to throw up embankments of more than usual solidity, and that with regard to the peculiarity of the soil, a long time must necessarily elapse before such embankments get properly settled. Considering the extent of the traffic which must ensue between Calcutta and the port in the Mutlah, it is obvious that a double line of rails would be altogether insufficient, in fact, nothing less than a quadruple rail would answer, and hence, the embankments must, at the very least, be made of double the breadth. Moreover, the quantity of soil required must be thrown on the particular line marked out, thereby causing additional outlay.

Taking, therefore, these circumstances into consideration, a railway could not be constructed under at least treble the cost of ordinary Indian lines, and this we have little doubt would bring up the expense fully to that of cutting a canal, which in every other respect has the preference, nor can there be the least question which of the two, a canal or railway, would yield the better return. If a canal is once cut, a railway will soon follow. The very soil that is thrown up on its borders will form the embankments for the rails.

But there is another and very powerful reason for the advocacy of the canal. A railway would be a direct taxation upon the commerce of this country and upon passengers, not so a canal. The train line for the conveyance of both must be paid either by the respective parties, or by the ships conveying goods and passengers to Bengal. In the former case, and especially with regard to goods, the expense must be added to the original cost—in the latter it must be made up by a corresponding increase in the rates of freight, and hence in either case is an indirect tax upon the commerce of the country. Quite the contrary with a canal. The average expense of bringing up a ship of 1,000 tons from the Sandheads to Calcutta, is for pilotage and steam hire about Rs. 1,200. Supposing, then, that tolls at the rate of eight annas per ton were levied on any ship passing through the canal, it would cause an additional outlay of Rs. 500 to the ship, which, we are quite convinced, would not make the least difference in either the rates of freight or passage. Moreover, it must be borne in mind, that such expense will partly be met by a reduction in the charge for pilotage.

If the river Mutlah is once made the channel of access to Calcutta, it follows that the occupation of pilots in the Hooghly ceases, and must be transferred to the Mutlah, and as all vessels, with the exception of native crafts, are compelled to take pilots, all ships must, as a matter of course, come up through the canal. Referring to the last official returns, we observe that the aggregate amount of tonnage, exclusive of native crafts for the year 1852-53, was—

					Tons.
Import tonnage	..	..	..	..	397,453
Export ditto	..	..	..	..	412,914
				Total	810,367
Which, at the assumed rate of 8 annas per ton, would give	..	..	..		Ra. 405,183-8
Deducting therefrom the expense of keeping the canal clean, repairs, establishment, &c. say
25 per cent.	..	..	..		101,295-14

We have a net income of .. Ra. 303,887-10

Which to yield a return of 6 per cent. per annum, would constitute a capital of Rs. 50,64,766. Will anybody assert that for such an amount a canal could not be cut? And we may further ask whether, with an almost sure return of six per cent., and with the steadily increasing commerce of the country, any difficulty could be anticipated in the creation of a private company in the event of Government not wishing to undertake the work themselves? We still maintain a canal is the thing, and we believe that our views are shared by all those who have given the subject the attention it deserves.—Hurkaru.

FACTS FROM TRAVANCORE.

After delays and difficulties which appeared interminable, after every description of intrigue had been employed to frustrate the efforts of the Resident, and after the kingdom had been distracted by a succession of rumours, the rajah of Travancore issued the following proclamation:—

“With a view to the amelioration of the condition of the slave population, without at the same time doing injury to the other inhabitants, the following proclamation is issued.

1st. That the children of Sirkar slaves which are born after the date of this proclamation shall be free.

2nd. That such persons though free must maintain the same regard for caste restrictions as has hitherto been observed.

3rd. That private slaves do not constitute property which can be seized in pursuance of decrees of courts or other orders for arrears of rent or taxes.

4th. That slaves are at liberty to purchase and hold property like the other inhabitants, and that their masters and others are forbidden to appropriate any such property to themselves.

5th. That injustice done to slaves will be regarded as a breach of the 6th regulation of the year 1010, and will be punished accordingly.

6th. That in the case of property falling to the Sirkar through want of heirs, the slaves connected with such property be regarded as free.

7th. That slave parents and children are not, without their consent, to be sold and separated more than fifteen miles from each other.

8th. That the pay of slaves working for the Sirkar is to be the same as that of free labourers.

9th. That both Sirkar and private slaves are to receive a moderate allowance in the time of sickness and of old age.

10th. That children under fourteen years of age are not to be employed in work beyond their years and ability.

11th. That a register is to be kept of all births and deaths among the Sirkar slaves, that notice of births and deaths is to be given to the Proverthycaren within thirty days of their occurrence, and that a fine be imposed in case a proper register be not kept.”

The decree has been carefully prepared. To all outward appearance it really accomplishes the two objects it professes to secure, a gradual emancipation of the slaves, and an immediate amelioration of their condition. In any other country, in the United States or Surinam, in Cuba or the Philippines, it might be received as the act of warm philanthropists, fettered only by the consciousness, that they are dealing with property, however unjustly acquired. It is only those who are acquainted with the infinite intrigue, which can be brought to bear on a native court, and the infinite baseness by which some native tribunals are distinguished, who can thoroughly comprehend the proclamation. It professes to effect all the abolitionists could desire, and is in reality but a hesitating step in advance. The slaves, as we have frequently repeated, are divided into two classes. A large number work for the Government, are legally the property of the rajah, and practically the property of the State. They will become free. The law is distinct, the Rajah will scarcely risk another despatch from the Court of Directors, and no private interests are involved in the act of emancipation. Private slaves are not enfranchised. The slaveholders have been too strong alike for Rajah, Resident, and Court. They are, however, nominally raised from the condition of slaves into that of serfs, are recognised as human beings, may hold property, and are defended like freemen from assault and murder. They must not be overworked until they are of age to bear the infliction without actually perishing, and the aged and the sick must receive a “moderate allowance,” instead of dying of starvation by the wayside. The provisions are humane, but they are ineffectual. They are intended for a state of society where officials do not exist by corruption, where perjury is not a jest, and where public opinion has been humanized by civilization. They succeeded in New York, and they must fail in Travancore. The resident is powerless beyond the limit of his personal observation, and the slaveholder has the support of Rajah, courts, and people. There is no one to see that a venal tribunal shall listen to their complaints, shall protect the property the master is inclined to seize, or save the overworked serf he is inclined to starve. And that he is so inclined, is evident from the simple fact, that these things are done every day, and that it has been necessary to employ a compulsion which amounts to force, to procure even a verbal denunciation of them.

There may be a few among our readers, who have believed us guilty of some exaggeration in describing the condition of these unfortunate outcasts. To all such the proclamation must be conviction, for what must be the condition of a community to which the 9th clause is a boon? By this decree it is acknowledged that in Travancore slaves are chattels liable to seizure by decree of Court. That in Travancore children under fourteen are overworked, torn from their parents, and sold to a distance. That the property of the slave is at the disposal of his master, and that the aged, and the sick, those worn out with labour, and those who have become incapable of further exertion, are left by the master, whose wealth has been swelled by both, without even “a moderate allowance.” These facts are stated, not by missionaries whose feelings have been overwrought by the daily spectacle of misery, not by journalists anxious to terminate at any cost an iniquity so glaring, but by the rajah himself in a grave official decree. Every assertion we have made has been justified out of the rajah's own mouth, and in clause X. he adds a shade of blackness to the picture, from which even our own correspondents have hitherto refrained.

We believe that this effort at amelioration will in practice be almost futile. One hundred thousand slaves will still remain subject to a bondage, which if once explained in the House of Commons might bring the new Charter Act to a summary termination. The efforts of the Court of Directors have liberated only a portion, and we cannot believe that they will rest satisfied. They have acted hitherto with a philanthropy and a promptitude worthy of every commendation, and their partial success may serve to prove how easily they might achieve complete reform. Emancipation, either present or prospective, is the only means by which it can be accomplished; and the Court, we feel satisfied, will not shrink from enforcing it, even should they be compelled to resort to the last alternative. The nineteenth century is scarcely the time for disquisitions on the proprietary right in human beings.

The whole condition of this territory appears to demand a searching investigation and reform. In none of the tributary kingdoms is so large a revenue so utterly thrown away, in none is so large a population surrendered so absolutely to the misgovernment of a semi-sacred dynasty. In 1839, General Fraser, then resident at Trevandrum, ordered Lieut. Horsley to report upon its condition, capabilities, and prospects. That report, drawn up with a minute carefulness which reminds us of Buchanan, is now before us, and we are informed that it is as accurate now as it was fifteen years ago. On an area of some six thousand six hundred square miles — the size of Yorkshire, — more than half of which is covered with hill and jungle, dwelt at that time a million and two hundred thousand souls. The revenue, raised chiefly by a land tax, but in part from monopolies of arrack, pepper, salt, and timber, amounted to Rs. 37,24,144. The taxation therefore amounted to six shillings a head, considerably more than the rate in British India, and its weight was increased by the oppressive mode of collection found in all purely native states. This great revenue is simply thrown away, in the maintenance of an oppressive religious aristocracy. Travancore has never been conquered by the Mussulmans. It is as Hindoo as it was in the golden age, and like the Papal States displays the inherent vices of sacerdotal dominion in their most exaggerated type. The Brahmins, some 300,000 in number, are maintained in idleness at the expense of the State. In Indore the revenues are wasted on the soldiery, but they at least may at some distant period serve to increase the forces of the empire. In Oude they are wasted by sheer mismanagement, but still they enrich a great territorial aristocracy, who though more oppressive than the barons of Stephen, or the seigneurs of Louis XI. still keep alive the habitual valour of the class, from which the ranks of our army are supplied. In Travancore, even this wretched apology is wanting. The revenues go to mendicants, who give to the State the prayers of the most vicious class of an Oriental population. To three thousand temples planted in every corner, we must add a series of Dharmshalas, or poor houses, which differ from those of England only in this, that their pauper inmates are the masters of the country. Of the total net revenue, eight lacs, or nearly a clear third, was in 1839 wasted on these institutions. The proportion has not, we understand, been diminished. The judicial establishments cost but Rs. 74,000, the troops but Rs. 1,29,000, the police but Rs. 40,000, the public works but Rs. 82,000. The whole of the remainder, with the exception of the cost of the monopolies, is swallowed by the palace and the priests. Governed by an administration like that of Mysore, the province might add to the finances of Madras two hundred thousand pounds.—Friend of India.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

It is now more than six years since one hundred and eighty-four surgeons and assistant-surgeons on the Bengal establishment, with the late Dr. Corbyn at their head, forwarded a petition to the Court of Directors. In that document, all the grievances of the service, their inferior pay, the unjust distinction between themselves and other officers of the army in the matter of leave, and the deficiency of prizes for the able and ambitious, were fairly and temperately set forth. The subject, however, to which the attention of the Court was most earnestly directed, was the extreme tardiness of promotion. It was shown to be impossible, under the present system, for a medical officer to reach the higher grades of his profession, until his frame had been exhausted by battling with disease in a dangerous climate, or until old age had diminished the energies necessary to render those appointments something better than "silver cushions." The senior superintending-surgeon had been forty years in India, the senior-surgeon thirty-eight, the senior assistant-surgeon seventeen, and there appeared but little probability of any improvement in the prospects of the service. The answer to the petition is not before us, but from that day to the present, little or nothing has been done to remedy the evils then brought under the consideration of the Home authorities. Reports have from time to time been circulated and denied, that the Court of Directors have at length become aware of the real tendency of the present system. Rumours have been regularly received of an alteration in the tenure of staff appointments, of a large increase of the circles of superintendence, of the creation of a new grade of first-class surgeons, and finally of a great addition to the ranks of the service itself.

The last rumour only has proved correct. The enlargement of our territories, the gradual absorption of native states, the increase of the army, and the growing disposition of the service to retire as soon as they are entitled to their pensions, rendered the concession imperatively necessary. Accordingly, the Calcutta Gazette of Saturday, the 10th instant, announces that ten surgeons, and forty-one assistant-surgeons have been added to the list. The notification, we fear, will create much bitter disappointment. It is true, it raises the numerical strength of the service almost to an equality with its duties, provides officers for the Punjab, and for Pegu, and removes the necessity for placing native sub-assistant-surgeons in charge of great military stations. It is true also, that it is equivalent to twelve months' promotion to all now who are upon the list, and that it will be felt as a boon by those who count every month which intervenes between them and promotion. But the service, as such, is not benefited. It is in fact rather less worth competing for than it was before, for the addition only increases the disparity between the higher and lower grades, and diminishes the chance of obtaining the annuities when the coveted period of service has expired. In 1836, when Scinde was yet unconquered, and the Sikhs still in possession of the Punjab, when Sambhulpore belonged to its rajah, and Pegu was known only as a place where we had expended millions of treasure, there were three hundred and sixty medical officers on the roll. Of these, one-third, or 120, including the staff, were surgeons. At the commencement of the present year, after we had added 100,000 square miles, and 8,000,000 people to our dominions, the authorized number was 354. It had actually decreased, as the necessity for additional numbers became more palpably evident. Nor was this all. While the grade of "Subordinate Superintendents" had ceased to exist, and the emoluments of the service, as of every other department, had been seriously diminished, the proportion of surgeons to assistants had scarcely varied. It was still 129 to 230 or thirty-five per cent. of the entire number. By the present addition, the disparity between the numbers of the two grades becomes still more conspicuous. The service is increased to four hundred and ten members, but its rate of promotion is diminished two per cent., and the superior grade includes only thirty-three per cent. of the entire number. The effect of such a change upon the prospects of the service requires neither argument nor illustration.

The subject must, however, be considered from a much higher point of view. We contend that by thus reducing the emoluments of their medical servants, the home authorities are weakening their efficiency, and pro tanto injuring the State. Not to speak of the fact, that every such increase insures greater age in those departments, where mature vigour is most urgently required; not to mention the deterioration of character caused by the absence of hope and of all motive to exertion, the future efficiency of an important arm is seriously endangered. The standing and the skill of the men to whom the lives of our officers must be often-times entrusted, is no light matter, and every measure which depreciates their position, diminishes also the average ability available.

Men of real ability and high character will not seek to enter a service in which they can hope only for a bare subsistence in a country which with all its advantages is a land of exile, where they lose all opportunity of increasing their scientific acquirements, and where they have little prospect of obtaining reputation. It will doubtless be argued that the pension compensates for every disadvantage, and that to return home in middle life with 500*l.* a year and a profession is, after all, a better prospect than is offered in England or the colonies. We should at once acknowledge the force of the argument, but that it has no real foundation. Every surgeon now desires to return to Europe as speedily as possible. He cannot hope for promotion, except after years of toil in a climate unsuited to the health of his children, and he prefers the chances of English practice to wasting time, energy, and hope in fruitless expectation. The number of annuities which may be obtained is limited, the competition is severe, and instead of seventeen years, the pension frequently cannot be obtained for twenty. The youngest on the list of applicants this year had served for upwards of twenty years. These facts will speedily be known in England. Men about to compete in public will inquire eagerly into every particular of their future career; and unless the evil is speedily remedied, we stand some chance of obtaining the worst instead of the best specimens of the medical profession.—Friend of India, Dec. 15.

SOME FACTS ABOUT COTTON.

The Bombay Chamber of Commerce does its duty well. Not to mention its active, and usually beneficial interference in every question connected with commerce which arises in that presidency, it presents us annually with a volume of really valuable information. Instead of joining the Manchester chorus, that Government is the great obstacle to the growth of cotton in India, its members ask for official information, obtain it, and make up their minds as to the facts which those statistics indicate. In their report for 1852-3, just issued, they have filled some 100 pages with returns, old it is true, but containing a complete account of the cotton of Madras, Agra, and Bengal. A similar account of their own presidency, the most important of all in this great field of enterprise, is not as yet forthcoming. Many of the statements published are worthy of attentive consideration. They indicate clearly the real causes which retard the supply of the Manchester mills from Goruckpore, Dacca, and Kurnool, and prove that it is not the Indian Government which is responsible for the deficiency. In fact, the chamber appears anxious to clear away this fallacy, which has long impeded rational and systematic effort, and which could have had its origin only among men whose ideas have been warped by the pressure of an ever present and overwhelming necessity.

To the inhabitants of the north of England, the cotton crop is what the price of bread is to the Frenchman, a thing without which he cannot exist, and which he therefore watches with an anxiety which beclouds his reason. As the Parisian, when his bread increases in price, considers a barricade and a revolution the best remedies for the scarcity, so the Manchester manufacturer seeks by the overthrow of the Court of Directors, to mitigate his losses from the scarcity in Louisiana. The one cry is as unreasonable as the other, if only because human selfishness influences governments and citizens alike. Louis Napoleon has a direct personal motive for making bread cheap, and the Indian Government has a direct motive to extend the cultivation of cotton. It would relieve it of one great difficulty, the superabundance of the article by the production of which the ryot pays his rent. Were India to become the cotton field of Europe, its revenue would admit of almost indefinite expansion. The wealth which now circulates through the Southern States, would then find its way into the Indian Treasury, a great harvest would no longer be regarded with alarm, and the Government with an elastic revenue might launch into undertakings it can at present scarcely contemplate. We should not repeat facts of which every one is aware, but it is only by iteration to the point of weariness, that we can hope to disabuse the public mind of an idea which at present impedes exertion most materially. There is a class in England which is almost monomaniac on two ideas, India can supply our cotton, and the Court of Directors prevent it from so doing.

What then are the causes which prevent the cultivation of cotton? The returns point to two, all of which are removable by only one expedient. The first is the absence of a certain market, the second the absence of European supervision.

First.—The absence of a demand. In the report from Madras, a most concise and able paper drawn up by the secretary to the Board of Revenue; it is admitted at once that the cotton can be grown. In that presidency an area of 860,000 acres is already covered with the native plant, and its produce is disposed of somewhere. The ryots therefore are obviously not indisposed to the cultivation, simply as such. Eight hundred thousand acres are not planted, we may presume, at a loss, more especially by a race who appreciate the culture of different crops, with a nicety beyond anything exhibited by English farmers. This, however, is only the indigenous cotton, which is worth little in England, and the cultivation of which is limited by the limitation of the demand. The instant the latter is increased, the cultivation increases with it. Mr. Bayley, after noticing the increase over the cultivation of last year, says, "it is attributed to the season having been favourable to the cultivation of cotton, and to enhanced prices prevailing in the market, and creating a demand for the same." The collector of Bellary repeats almost the same words, while the agent in Kurnool is even more explicit. He says: "The increase in the extent of cultivation of this article in this year is ascribed to the favourable prospects of the season at the period when the sowing operations commenced, and to the high prices at which the article was at that time selling, owing to the deficient supply of the previous year."

The collector of Madras thinks:—"The season was somewhat less favourable for cotton than other products, as it is a late crop and there was no rain in December. It was, better, however, than that of Feby, 1259, and an increase will be observed of 1442 acres in the extent cultivated."

The collector of Tinnevely reports an increase consequent on "steady demand." The collector of Coimbatore says, the increase is steady, the only two interruptions having arisen from

"bad seasons." Throughout Madras there is but one report. "It is the same in Bengal. In the district of Dacca the cotton cultivation, once so large, has died away, because the demand for the muslin into which it was manufactured has been destroyed by the influx of cheap goods from Manchester. Mr. Dunbar says:—"Nothing disgusts the ryots more readily, than being kept, year after year, to the culture of an unsuccessful crop, even if they are not themselves subjected to loss by the result; they lose heart about it, and become careless; but give them a cultivation which thrives under their hands, and let them see that it only requires to be followed up to pay them well for their labour, and we may rely upon it, it will be taken up with that assiduity which self-interest and the prospect of gain never fail to engender."

Col. Jenkins reports from Assam that the cultivation could be indefinitely extended, "should any circumstance cause a very trifling rise in price." In all these districts native cotton could be grown to any extent if a sufficient paying demand could be obtained. In the North West, 10,02,040 acres are now covered with the plant, and Mr. SW. G. is inclined to believe that increased demand, and consequently increased price, is the one requisite to produce extended cultivation. Mr. Bruce, Deputy Collector at Cawnpore, says:—

"If the associations and manufacturers who have been memorializing and soliciting the authorities in England regarding the increased cultivation of cotton in India actually wish it, and will guarantee that all that may be produced through any exertions in this country, will be taken by them and paid for here, and will send out responsible agents to receive charge of the cotton, either here or at Calcutta, I will engage and undertake to produce for them as much real, good, merchantable cotton as they may require, and not cost them, when landed in England, more than about 3½d. per lb., which I think very moderate, considering the Indian cotton generally realizes from 4½d. to 5½d. per lb. in England."

In fact the report is in every instance the same. Cotton can be cultivated in India to any extent, but not at the present prices.

To obtain a better price, it is necessary that the cotton grown should be of a better quality. To effect this object, the American seed must be introduced, and the American seed appears to fail. It requires a peculiar soil, and even if this difficulty could be obviated, there remains another. The ryot will neither cultivate nor clean it properly. The collector of Cuddapah says, it is "a delicate plant," and there is no reason to doubt, that during the process of acclimatization it requires a care and attention which the ryot will not bestow. He will neither watch nor wait, looks only to immediate returns, and does every act in a loose, shambling manner, fatal to careful agriculture.

It may be said that if it succeeds with the negro, it may succeed with the native. We deny the first assertion. The cotton is not cultivated in the southern states by the negro at all. It is true there is a machine on every estate composed of negroes, which performs certain manual tasks, but the cultivator, properly so called, is the white man, and the white man of the shrewdest, most energetic, and best-informed class. We have no proof that if we had on every thousand acres an European overseer, directing every effort, the result would not be as favourable in India as it has been in America. The collector of Cuddapah, who failed in his district, succeeded with the same seed in his garden. In short, we need European supervision.

The result of all this, and we have touched as yet only upon a corner of the subject, is sufficiently plain. If Indian cotton is to supersede that grown in the southern states, it must be cultivated as indigo is cultivated. The ryot who grows indigo is sure of his demand, and is instructed by a skilled European. The ryot who grows cotton must have the same advantages. The chances of the market must be borne by the planter, and not by the peasant, the cleaning must be conducted on a great scale, and then with English capital and English energy, the cultivation may succeed. —Friend of India, Dec. 8.

THE RETIRED LIST.

To the Editor of the Friend of India.

SIR,—The necessity for the formation of a retired list for the superannuated officers of the army of India, appears to have become admitted as a notorious fact, has been urged by all who have the welfare of the army at heart, and has engaged the attention of eminent statesmen, to whom the destinies of this magnificent empire have been committed. A notification, in a recent number of your journal, has by its extensive circulation in the press raised the hopes of hundreds, who justly conceive that their long and arduous service have given them some good chance of realisation, and has been followed by a dictum of the Times, with your permission, and a few remarks upon a subject of such momentous importance in the army, and entreat the favour of their publication in your much-read columns. The remarks which I peruse with interest very briefly too, apply, generally speaking, to all the three (3) armies of India; but at present I intend to confine my observations to that of Bengal only.

The army list indicates that thirty-nine (39) gentlemen have been honoured with the commission of a lieutenant-general, the senior of whom entered the army twenty-four years after the battle of Plassey, and the junior the year before Nelson died at Trafalgar! Of whom

4	belong to the artillery,	} 39
2	" " engineers,
6	" " cavalry,
27	" " infantry.

Not one of the gentlemen in the abovementioned grades can under any circumstances, unless specially selected on an urgent and extraordinary crisis, command a division of the army, or be employed in camp, or in quarters, even supposing that a residence of a half century in an Asiatic and tropical climate, had not incapacitated one and all, for the efficient discharge of their duties; it must be notorious to all your readers that on the promulgation of the last brevet, some officers who were promoted from the rank of major-general to that of lieutenant-general, were removed from their commands, and retired to private life.

As no officer of the rank of lieutenant-general and general can command a division of the army, it surely would be no hardship to any individual to provide for him an honourable retirement, and to call upon him to retire from the active branch of the army in which he can no longer be employed in the public service, and thus facilitate the advancement of officers younger in years, and with constitutions less impaired to fill the higher grades in our armies? Few can have any idea of the very great length of service of some of our officers: we have officers still on the strength of the army, who in their younger days associated with officers who had fought at Fontenay and Dettingen, and had scoured the Highlands for the fugitive Charles; who themselves entered the army five years after the declaration of independence by the Americans; officers who arrived in India, when Sir Eyre Coote commanded the forces, and whose messmates talked of the punch served out in the mango-groves after the fatigues of Plassey, who told of the thousands and thousands marshalled at Buxar, and of the plains strewn with hundreds trampled down and destroyed in that disastrous retreat and utter rout of the Nawab's forces.

Officers still survive who dined at noon at Government-house with Warren Hastings, and who played whist with Francis, and drank his choice claret; then, again, we have officers who returned to Europe five years before the first Burmese war, and who for a period of thirty years have retained in England their regimental rank, to the entire exclusion of all promotion, to the ruin of the army, and the destruction of its efficiency in its most vital point. In the royal army, brevet is given to dozens of officers, who are advanced periodically to the higher grades of the army, without in any way impairing the efficiency of the army, by retarding the promotion of regimental officers. In the royal army there are at the present moment three (3) field-marsals, fifty (50) generals, one hundred and twenty-six (126) lieutenant-generals, one hundred and sixty (160) major-generals, and three hundred and seventy-nine (379) colonels; making a total of 718. Of the abovementioned numbers (150), only are colonels of regiments, and receive sums from the public purse as colonels of regiments; the rest are unattached, but receive rank, and all its attendant honours and privileges, without any detriment to their regimental subordinates.

In the army of India, on the other hand, no sooner has an officer's tour of duty on the general staff expired, than he can no longer be employed in the public service, but retires into private life, and though as far as the army is concerned he is dead and gone, yet no promotion can take place, until he really deceases. This glaring anomaly cannot be defended in the present day, when the stern hand of reform has swept away so many abuses, and many many institutions are crumbling to decay from the very weight of years, and a speedy downfall is threatened to all systems and measures which are antagonistic to the spirit of the age. The Seniority Services of India have not only all the disadvantages and evils to contend with which are inherent in such systems; but they have far more serious difficulties to combat against, than any other seniority services in the civilized world. The royal artillery, engineers, and marines, are all seniority corps, but they possess this inestimable advantage, of which we are deprived, that the regimental rank of major is unknown in those three distinguished, scientific, and splendid corps, whereas with us, the regimental rank is maintained, and after an average period of service, of twenty-eight years, an officer with shattered health and impaired energy, on promotion to his majority, has to serve for some six or seven years more, before he can obtain his lieutenantcoloneley, and attain that rank which his brother in the royal army, especially in the cavalry and line, usually succeeds to in half the period, and which the officers of the seniority corps in the royal army attain per saltum from the rank of 1st captain. In a future paper I purpose to explain how promotion can be accelerated, and a retired list maintained, without injustice to any party or loss to the State. The administration of the noble marquis who rules over our eastern possessions, has been already eminently distinguished by important reforms, which manifest the enlightened policy of one so much looked up to by all in England and in this country. It is not too much to expect that the wisdom of the statesman, who has crushed fierce and formidable enemies, and trampled into dust the aggressions of mighty states, will be directed to promote the efficiency of the instruments of his power, and to eradicate by all possible means the incubas which paralyse the energies of the army. CENTURION.

THE FUTURE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.

The steamer which arrived on the 1st inst. brought out the Hon. Frederick James Halliday, who, in accordance with his appointment by the Court of Directors, has been sworn in as third ordinary member of the Supreme Council of India. Under the new arrangements, which are to come into operation on the 1st of May, 1854, Mr. Halliday on that day will become Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, and measures are already being taken to secure for the future Lieut.-Governor a suitable residence, Government House remaining, as a matter of course, for the exclusive use of the Governor-General of India.

When matters are done in a hurry, it often happens that very important points are entirely overlooked. This, it appears, has been done in the India Bill with regard to the appointment of the new Lieut.-Governor of Bengal. This functionary will, upon the principle that maintains with the Lieut.-Governor of the N.W. Provinces, be the head of the Bengal Government, but it is nowhere provided that he shall continue either as an ordinary or ex-officio member of council. Hence it follows that the old rule with reference to the presidentship of council still remains in force. According to that, the senior member of council, in the absence of the Governor-General, becomes de facto the president of the council of India; and as that appointment is the highest office that can be held by any one in the service, the consequence will be that the senior member of council, in his capacity of president of the council of India, will take precedence of the Lieut.-Gov. of Bengal. The anomaly becomes still more apparent on considering their respective emoluments. The salary of the Lieut.-Governor is to be one lakh of rupees, and that of a member of council Rs.80,000. As the office of president of council has no emoluments attached to it, the senior member of council, in the absence of the Governor-General, according to the present rules, will be the higher authority, but draw less pay than the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal.—Hurkaru.

THE LONDON MAIL of November 8th had not arrived at the time of the departure of the Calcutta mail, but was hourly expected per Oriental, which arrived at Madras Dec. 12th.

ALLAHABAD.—The following is from a correspondent at Allahabad:—The 65th N.I. arrived by boats at Allahabad on the 11th. After leaving Cawnpore cholera broke out, and of some dozen sepoys who had been attacked, more than half had died. A European lady and several camp-followers had had the malady; of the latter several had died, and the lady was in a precarious way. The medical officer in charge recommended that the regiment should disembark; and in this the station medical committee are said to have concurred. At all events, the regiment left their boats on the 11th or 12th, and went across the river to the first halting-place on the road to Benares; for which place they marched on the morning of the 15th. At Benares the regiment will re-embark. By this means it is hoped that the disease may be checked. No cases occurred after the corps left the boats. The first detachment of H.M.'s 52nd regt., under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Hughes, arrived at Allahabad on the 12th. They wait here the arrival of the rest of the corps in steamers, and then march up-country. The Lieut.-Governor leaves Benares on the 21st for Mirzapore, where he stays five days. He is expected at Allahabad on the 2nd December, and will remain four days.—Agra Messenger, Nov. 19.

SIR JOHN CHEAPE.—The Morning Chronicle reports, that Sir John Cheape, K.C.B., in addition to ill-health, has met with a severe accident, having fallen from a gallery and broken his collar bone. Our contemporary thinks these two circumstances will render it necessary to appoint an immediate successor to the command at Burmah, as Sir John will have to proceed to a better climate for the restoration of his health.

DR. W. B. O'SHAUGHNESSY has addressed a letter to the Bombay Times, with reference to Dr. Impey's claim of being the inventor of a telegraphic instrument.

THE LATE MR. THOMASON bequeathed the whole of his magnificent private library to the Agra College.

RETIREMENT.—The Englishman understands that Mr. Dampier, Superintendent of Police, will shortly retire from the service.

MR. THOMAS WYATT.—A correspondent writing from Rungpore, under date of the 14th instant, says that Mr. Thomas Wyatt, late civil and sessions judge of that district, finding that all his endeavours to obtain employment are fruitless, has at length determined to send in his application for permission to retire from the service. Mr. Wyatt acts prudently we think in retiring from the service. Rs. 400 per mensem in India, and nothing to do, is not so bad a state of things as might be; but if there really be no hope of getting employment, 1,000*l.* per annum in England is so considerably better, that no wise man would hesitate, between the two bundles of hay, which to choose.—Hurkaru, Nov. 24.

KUMAON TEA.—The Lahore Chronicle states, that the cultivation of tea in the Kangra district is such as to justify the superintendent in holding a public auction of the produce. In 1851 there were in this district only two small plantations, commenced with seeds from those of Kumaon. The Governor-General, however, was convinced that the project would succeed, and Dr. Jameson was authorized to form a large plantation on a waste plain at the foot of the Chumba Range. The soil and climate are admirably adapted to the cultivation; the tea produced is superior to that of Kumaon; steps have been taken for planting 100,000 trees, and in a short time 500 acres will be covered with the tea-plant.

FLOATING DOCKS AT HOWRAH.—Capt. Henderson and Mr. Greaves have submitted to Government a plan for the construction of floating docks at Howrah. An inland dock is to be constructed north of Howrah, with a basin of 2,500 feet by 1,000 feet. Adjoining is to be a large reservoir 700 feet by 400 feet, from which the loss of water caused by the opening of the gates may be supplied. Below this are to be four narrow slips, 2,500 feet long by 150 feet wide, communicating with a large basin at the end, 1,000 feet long by 400 wide. The docks are to be directly connected with the railway by tram-roads to the station. The probable expense is not mentioned.

THE GAS COMPANY has offered to light Calcutta, on condition of obtaining a site rent-free, exemption from duty for everything they may import, and a contract for some thirty years. The conservancy commissioners have, however, reduced the term of the contract to fourteen years.

MAILS BETWEEN BENARES AND BOMBAY.—The Benares Recorder informs us that a change is to be effected in the mode of carrying the mail between Benares and Bombay. It appears that hitherto the mail bags between Jubbulpore and Nagpore, have been carried by runners instead of horsemen. The men were stationed without reference to the rivers and nullahs, which are unbridged, and which occasionally delayed the mails whole days. Horses are now to be placed on this line, and the bags are to be carried across the rivers on ropes. Mr Riddell has started to organise the new arrangements. The improvement is of consequence to every resident in Bengal, as the express from Bombay travels along this route.

ACCIDENT TO LIEUT. P. STEWART.—The Benares Recorder supplies the particulars of an accident which nearly proved fatal to Lieut. Patrick Stewart, recently acting superintendent of the electric telegraph. He had started with a small party to shoot tigers on foot, in a place in the neighbourhood of Chunar. A tiger was wounded by one of the party, but after a sharp pursuit succeeded in making his escape. On the following morning, the 27th November, the chase was resumed. The party came upon the tiger unawares, and it appears from a somewhat confused account, that the animal sprang on Lieut. Stewart, seized his left leg, and then tried to carry him off. Its strength, however, had been diminished by the wound, and it retreated. Mr. Stewart is doing well. He is not an officer whom the country can afford to lose.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE LATE COL. MACKESON.—A public meeting was held on the 5th November at Peshawur, to adopt measures for erecting a testimonial to the late Col. Mackeson. It was resolved to place a monument over his grave, and a tablet in the church of his native parish. The epitaph selected is taken from the order of the Governor-General:—"The loss of Colonel Mackeson's life would have dimmed a victory. To lose him thus by the hand of a foul assassin is a misfortune of the heaviest gloom for the Government, which counted him amongst its bravest and best." The idea is an excellent one, and we are happy to perceive that more than two thousand rupees has already been collected.

THE HON. MR. DORIN was sworn in as President of the Supreme Council of India on the 9th Dec.

CUTTACK.—We have been given to understand, that on the joint recommendation of the commissioner of the 19th or Cuttack division and the Board of Revenue for the Lower Provinces, the local Government has approved of a new plan for the management of the akbarry muhal in Cuttack, and that by that measure a saving of Co.'s Rs. 236 per mensem will be effected.—Hurkaru.

THE MORMONS.—The Hurkaru publishes an interesting letter from the Honourable L. R. Read, Chief Justice of Utah, the Mormon territory. The date is unfortunately omitted, but it appears to be recent, and the writer denies in toto the reports of the disaffection of the settlement. He considers Bingham Young, the governor and prophet, a decidedly able man, and that he has been grossly misrepresented. The settlement is flourishing, and the people are industrious and orderly. On the other hand, it is allowed that polygamy is openly practised.

BEHAR.—The following is from a correspondent at Shergotty, dated 1st current:—"I have been given to understand that the health of Mr. F. Hogg, the deputy magistrate, is so impaired, that on application to the Governor-General, Lord Dalhousie has been so far pleased as to permit him to proceed to the Cape of Good Hope and the Australian colonies for a twelvemonth for its restoration, but on the distinct understanding that during such absence he will get no pay or any portion thereof. It is believed that Mr. Davies, the postmaster, will be appointed to Mr. Hogg's place during his absence."—Hurkaru, Dec. 9.

COLONEL OUTRAM.—The Governor-General has nominated Colonel Outram to be one of his honorary A.D.C.'s. This appointment can hardly be regarded as an "empty honour," for although it is attended neither with duties nor emoluments, it is highly significant as evincing the estimation of his Lordship for this gallant soldier.

MR. R. T. H. GRIFFITH has been appointed by the Court of Directors to their educational establishments in Bengal, and nominated to the post of Professor of Benares College.

PURNEAH.—A correspondent from Purneah, whose letter is also dated the 1st inst., sends us the following:—"Sickness here is as bad as ever; fever, dysentery, and cholera are very prevalent, at least if I may say so from the many cases brought to my notice. There has been a terrible hubbub here in the collectorate, the officiating collector, from an undue degree of confidence in his amiah, having got into an awkward scrape,—the sum of upwards of three thousand rupees was, on examination of the cash, found wanting. He was, of course, obliged to inform the Board of Revenue of the occurrence, who, in the strict discharge of their duty, brought it to the notice of the Governor-General. The result has been that Lord Dalhousie has decided that the collector should make good the loss, and has issued his mandate to the accountant-general, directing that officer to deduct the amount by monthly instalments of Company's Rs. 200, till the whole has been realized. His Lordship is much praised for thus administering justice tempered with mercy."—Hurkaru.

KURTAPORE.—The Delhi Gazette informs us that the station of Kurtapore is to be abolished, and that the officers of the 7th light cavalry will consequently lose their houses, which they purchased not a year since. This, as our contemporary very justly remarks, is indeed a hard case, and we quite agree with him, that with a little more care these changes, which entail such serious losses upon officers, need not be so frequent as they lately have been. There has been much written about debt in the army, and it would be no very difficult matter to fill a large volume on the subject of the causes and effects of this evil, and we have long thought, and frequently given our opinion, that the army at large is not so greatly to blame as many persons high in power, and some public writers, have thought proper to assert. Our contemporary considers it a hard case that the officers of the 7th light cavalry should lose houses which they have not occupied for a year, and so it is, but how much more so is that of some to whom we could point, who, thrice during the last fifteen years, have purchased or built dwellings, of which they have been deprived by the breaking up of the stations, with the expiry of their tour of duty at them. This fact has never, we think, been sufficiently considered by those who delight to cry down the Bengal army, because its officers are so greatly in debt, neither has due weight been given to the frequent long marches which many corps have had to make, and the expensive campaigns in which others have been engaged. These circumstances, coupled with the fact of such large sums having, in many instances, been paid for steps, are sufficient alone to account for officers being generally in debt, without attributing to a whole body of honourable men, reckless extravagance, which is the fault of only a few, and does not we believe prevail to a greater extent among the officers of the Bengal army, than many other similarly constituted communities.—Bengal Hurkaru, Dec. 7.

BANK OF BENGAL.—Messrs. W. W. Kettlewell and John Deffell have been nominated Directors of the Bank of Bengal, vice Messrs. Jas. J. Mackenzie and J. H. Ferguson, who went out by rotation.

TROOPS TO ENGLAND.—The tenders for the conveyance of H.M.'s troops to England have been accepted.—The Southampton takes the head-quarters of the 18th Royal Irish at Rs. 300 a head; the Barham a draft at Rs. 300; the Agincourt and Holspur the remaining portion at Rs. 320 and Rs. 350 respectively.

SURGEON BOYCOTT. Deputy Assay-master at the Presidency, has been ordered to Pegu for the purpose of establishing a bullion depôt there.

THE INDIGO SEASON.—The unfavourable accounts received by the Bentinck from England, and especially the uncertainty as to the issue of political affairs in Europe, have retarded the opening of sales beyond the usual period. The valuable dye is now being brought down to Calcutta from the different factories; and it being ascertained that the crop at the utmost will not exceed 107,000 maunds, speculators have at last made up their minds to operations, and consequently the first transaction of the season which we have to record, consists of the produce of the Arrangabad concerns, comprising 210 maunds, which were sold on the 9th instant, at Rs. 180 per maund, which is so far a slight advance on last year's rate, as the quality of that mark is said to be somewhat inferior to the produce of the same factory of the season 1852-53, though realising the same price. The transaction has since been followed by the following sales:—

„ Jorad „ „ „	„ 202 8 0

And a parcel of Jessore native indigo at Rs. 170. The above have changed hands by private sale, but we hope that after the mail now due, the public sales of the season will fairly open. The general disposition on the part of the planters seems to hold back, as considering the reduced stocks in Europe, and the decrease in this year's produce, they confidently look forward to an advance, even should the settlement of the Turko-Russian question be still delayed.

SCHEME FOR VERNACULAR EDUCATION.—We understand that the Government has called upon the Council of Education to furnish a scheme for vernacular education, based upon the plan which the late Mr. Thomas adopted with so much success in the North-West Provinces. The purpose of the Governor-General, we understand, is to establish a complete class of vernacular schools, to extend throughout the whole of India, with a view to convey instruction to the masses of the people. We hope to be enabled shortly to give correct information as to the plan upon which the Government is advised to proceed.—Hurkaru, Dec. 5.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The following extract of a letter is dated Agra, 30th November:—“As any remarks about the electric telegraph will always, I fancy, be interesting to your readers, I beg to pen a few words on the subject. As the writer was travelling along the branch of the Grand Trunk Road, he was questioned by old native travellers as to the object of putting up posts, at a distance of fifty feet for bamboos, and 100 for saul ones, on the side of the road, and a thick wire being put on the top of them. I told them it was for the purpose of communication between Agra and Calcutta, by the effects of lightning within the short space of a ghurrie (which is the eighth part of a paur or watch of three hours), both for going and coming. Wah! wah! wah!!! ashib, that is very wonderful. Well, the posts are erected as far as the fifty-fourth milestone out of Agra towards Bhawgong, and the wires had been put on them as far as the 12th milestone. There were eight engineers sent to Agra; four have been clapped on the Bombay line, two on the Allyghar branch, and two on the Mynpoorie road. The telegraph office, I believe, is at either No. 2 or 3 of cantonments, and the engineer resident at the station gets reports daily by the telegraph of the work performed on each line. So it is fancied that the whole arrangements will be soon completed for one wire, and the extra wires will be put up here afterwards for the several branches. The writer saw thousands of posts lying in the compound of the dawk bungalow of Mynpoorie, in charge of the overseer of the road for dispatching to the several stations on the line. As a temporary arrangement, bamboos may answer, but those great destroyers of wood, the white ants, have already commenced their tricks on the posts, notwithstanding the underground part being charred.”

PUBLIC WORKS.—A traveller on the branch Agra of the Great Trunk Road says:—“The works of the Ganges canal seem to be getting on apace. The big branch, or the Cawnpore one, cuts the road about the sixty-first or sixtieth milestone, at an acute angle. The road is being altered by a curve over a bridge of three arches of twenty-eight feet span, and the road will now be at right angles with the canal. The bridge and the altered road will soon be ready, when the present road will be dug up for the canal. There is a very nice pukka house on the upper side of the bridge for the overseer or other canal officer, I fancy, for levying a toll over the bridge. The second, or smaller branch going to Etawah, had a bridge of only two arches, of about the same span and the same curve for the Great Trunk Road as at the other place; this cuts the road between the fifty-sixth and fifty-fifth mile-stone. The report current is, that the canal will be opened by the Lieutenant-Governor in person, about the 1st of next March; not a day too late; it will take months before it can reach its terminus at Cawnpore. A great number of these bridges over the canal are made of big blocks of kunkur, which has been quarried in the neighbourhood, and said to have charge of bricks, and more lasting; the action of both water and atmosphere not corroding the kunkur so much as bricks, it looks more handsome. Well may the country thank Colonel Cautly, by whose perseverance and energy this noble undertaking has been accomplished. The colonel retires, it is said, or goes on furlough.”—Englishman.

MILITARY ON DITS.—The Calcutta Morning Chronicle mentions that the command of the 3rd Europeans has been offered to Lieut. Colin Troup.—The Delhi Gazette states that the station of Kurtpore is to be abolished.—Lieut. Dickens is to proceed to Promé to form a new office there under the orders of the commissary-general. The former officer will be succeeded by Lieut. Dorin, now at the Cape, Lieut. Leven remaining in the mean time in charge of the presidency office.—The Hon'ble General Anson and staff have arrived at Lucknow.—The left wing of H.M.'s 29th Foot arrived off Port William, under the command of Major Wheeler, on the 16th Dec.—Brigadier General Hewitt arrived at Lahore, en route to assume command of the Peshawar division, on the morning of the 12th instant, and left on the 13th by dawk for Jhelum, where he will be met by General Roberts and receive the command.—Colonel Markham, of H.M.'s 82nd regt., is to be the new brigadier in room of Brigadier Salter, removed to Agra.—Captain Watson, of the 33rd N.L., 2nd in command of the 5th Irregular Cavalry, is appointed aide-de-camp to General Hewitt, with permission to retain his permanent appointment in the irregulars.—The 55th reg. Native Infantry were at Ferozepoor on the 15th of December, and to resume their march towards Mooltan this day.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

H.M.'s 15th HUSSARS, 51st L.I., AND 94th REGT.

Head Quarters, Camp Pancept, Nov. 12, 1853.—With the sanction of the Most Noble the Governor-General in Council, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India is pleased to direct the 15th hussars, 51st light infantry, and 94th regiment to be held in readiness to embark for England, and that the soldiers of these regiments desirous of extending their services in India be allowed to volunteer under the rules and restrictions laid down in paras 2 to 6 of General Order, dated Oct. 18, 1853.

The volunteering is to be restricted to fifty men in excess of the regulated establishment of regiments.

The men of the 15th hussars are to be allowed to volunteer into the 10th hussars and 9th and 12th lanciers.—Those of the 51st and 94th regiments into corps of infantry* serving in the three presidencies, excepting the 22nd, 25th, 96th, and 98th.

Officers commanding corps that are allowed to receive volunteers, are requested immediately upon receipt of this general order to prepare returns showing the number wanting to complete their establishment, after adding the recruits of the season, and deducting the number proceeding home as invalids, for discharge, &c., and transmit them to the deputy adjutant-general her Majesty's forces, Madras, for the purpose of guiding the superintending officers in the completion of the establishments of regiments, with the excess sanctioned.

The lieutenant-general commanding in Madras will be pleased to give the necessary orders for the dates upon which the volunteering of each corps is to begin, and appoint superintending officers and boards of medical officers.

Immediately upon the termination of the volunteering of each corps, a return of the number who have transferred their services into the several corps, is to be forwarded to the adjutant-general her Majesty's forces in India.

The officers commanding the 15th hussars, 51st light infantry, and 94th foot, are to report to the adjutant-general her Majesty's forces in India the date upon which the whole of the transfer documents have been forwarded to the several corps, into which the men have extended their services.

By order of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

ARMINE S. H. MOUNTAIN, Colonel,
Adjutant-Genl. H.M.'s forces in India.

* Inclusive of the 43rd, 52nd, 74th, 81st foot.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. WILLIAM CUMMING, H.M.'s 32ND FOOT.

Head Quarters, Camp Gorowda, Nov. 11, 1853.—At a general court-martial assembled at Peshawur on Thursday, Oct. 20, 1853, Lieut. W. Cumming of H.M.'s 32nd foot, was arraigned on the following charges:—

1st. For having, at Peshawur, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock in the forenoon of Aug. 18, 1853, been drunk at the mess breakfast table; he being at the time on duty as subaltern officer of the day.

2nd. For highly unbecoming conduct, in having, at Peshawur, between the hours of eleven o'clock in the forenoon and one o'clock in the afternoon of Aug. 18, 1853, made use of offensive and provoking language to Lieut. H. E. King, of the same regiment, imputing that he was "no gentleman," and saying within his hearing, "I will spit him," or "I will spit or pot him like a garden thrush," or made use of words to that effect.

3rd. For highly unbecoming conduct in having, at Peshawur, between the hours of two and three o'clock in the afternoon of Aug. 18, 1853, on receiving a letter from Lieut. King, demanding an apology for the offensive language referred to in the 2nd charge, written the words "dirty snob" over Lieut. King's signature, and the word "snob" thrice on the back of the letter, and the words "Hit him hard—he ant got no friends," on the inner fold of the paper, and having shown the letter with such offensive words written upon it, to an officer of the regiment, and left it in the billiard-room of the regiment for public inspection.

Finding.—The court is of opinion that the prisoner Lieut. W. Cumming, H.M.'s 32nd regiment, is

On the 1st charge, not guilty, and acquitted thereof.

On the 2nd charge, guilty, with the exception of the word "Aughty," of which he is acquitted.

On the 3rd charge, guilty; but the court find that the note was left in the anti-room and not in the billiard-room, and that it was left accidentally, and not "for public inspection," and of these last words the prisoner is acquitted.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded.

Approved and confirmed.

Head-Quarters, Camp Bootiana, Nov. 9, 1853.

Remarks by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India.—The punishment awarded is very lenient for even the limited offences of which the prisoner has been convicted; but as it is in evidence that Lieut. Cumming offered an apology for his improper conduct towards Lieut. King, with which this officer expressed himself satisfied, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has accorded his approval to the sentence.

Lieut. Cumming will accept the publication of this general order as the reprimand to which he has been sentenced by the court. He is to be released from arrest and to return to his duty.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Dec. 17).—The past fortnight has been rather a dull one in the Cotton Piece Goods market, owing in a considerable degree to a tightness of money in the bazar, as well as in the principal up-country marts; and although no decline in prices has been established, yet, to effect sales to any extent, lower rates than those current would have to be submitted to. The business done in Mule Twist has been very moderate, the reported sales not exceeding 391 bales. The finer qualities of Nos. 50 to 100 are chiefly in demand; 20 to 40 are less wanted; 110 to 200 have lately grown into better inquiry at improved prices. Turkey Red and German Yarns are in good request at former value; Orange is more active; the demand for light shade Green has slackened, and the darker shades remain dull. The Metal market is more lively. Copper, Iron, and Spelter are in improved demand.

MADRAS. 11th Dec.

THE LONDON MAIL of November 8th arrived at Madras December 12th, and left 13th for Calcutta (per Oriental).

CURE OF CHOLERA.—Dr Colin Paterson, surgeon to the rajah of Travancore, has published in the Madras Spectator a receipt for the treatment of cholera, which he has found almost invariably successful. It consists of "calomel, opium, camphor, of each one ounce and one scruple; sugar of lead two ounces and two scruples, aromatic powder four ounces and four scruples, acetic acid one drachm. Distilled water sufficient quantity. The acetate of lead is dropped on the acetate of lead until dissolved, when it is to be rubbed up with the opium and camphor (the latter dissolved by means of a little spirits of wine), then the calomel and aromatic powder is to be added with a sufficient quantity of distilled water to form the whole into a mass, which must be beaten up well for some time in a marble mortar, and divided into a thousand pills." During seven years in which the doctor has watched the operation of these pills, only 28½ per cent. of those attacked have been carried off, while in England the average proportion of mortality to seizures has been 43 per cent. Four or eight pills, one every quarter of an hour, are generally sufficient to check the disease's progress.

MAJOR BALFOUR AND MR. BOURDILLON.—The Spectator states, that the Governor of Madras has offered a deliberate insult to Major Balfour and Mr. Bourdillon. These gentlemen were among those who drew up the able Report on Public Works at Madras, which Sir H. Pottinger considers to reflect upon himself. They presented themselves at the public breakfast-table of the Governor, and afterwards sought an audience. This is the custom of Madras, but "they were told by an aide-de-camp, who must have felt himself humiliated by the transmission of the message, that their presence at the breakfast-table was only owing to a mistake, and that the great man would not see them." We would fain hope that there is another side to this story, and that a Governor himself so sensitive to the slightest discourtesy, has not forgotten so completely the respect due to himself, and those whom he professes to represent.

SIR JAMES BROOKE.—The Madras Examiner states that Sir Christopher Robinson and the Honourable Daniel Elliott, who have been appointed to the commission for investigating the charges against Sir James Brooke, will proceed to Borneo to commence their labour at the latter end of November.

PROMOTIONS consequent upon raising a third European regiment at the Madras presidency have absorbed all brevet captains of infantry.

PORTO NOVO IRON.—The Athenaeum announces that at last there is some prospect of the "Porto Novo Iron-Works" proving a remunerative speculation, and expects that the Madras iron-works will supply the requirements of this presidency in the matter of rails and machinery, for which the orders will be yearly more extensive. The Porto Novo furnaces have recently executed some large castings, and furnished a considerable amount of wrought iron for the Madras Government, as well as completing orders for the Bengal railway.

A DETACHMENT OF H.M.'s 43RD REGIMENT, consisting of 2 Brevet-colonel, 1 captain, 2 lieutenants, 2 ensigns, 1 assistant-surgeon, 5 sergeants, 192 rank and file, 31 women, and 4 children, arrived from England on the ship Earl of Hardwick, and were disembarked on the evening of Dec. 19, and marched into Fort St. George.

LIEUT. HORRIDGE.—A Bombay paper mentions that an accident of a serious nature had happened at Sangor, to Lieutenant Horrridge, the quartermaster of the 24th regiment Madras N.I. It is said that he was infusing gunpowder poured intermittently from a flask on a piece of kindled charcoal, in a somewhat unguarded manner, till a flash accidentally communicated with and exploded the entire contents of the flask, to the serious injury of both hands, especially of the left. Grave apprehensions exist that this hand cannot be preserved, so much being involved in the injury.—Athenaeum.

GOVERNMENT.—If any man wishes to be convinced of the anxiety of the Indian Government to improve the resources of the country, he may obtain proof to that effect, by perusing the manifest of the bark Brasilia on her arrival at this port in April, 1852: At the recommendation of Dr. Wight, 784 bags of New Orleans cotton seed were procured at a great expense, and put on board the ship in question, for distribution in all parts of this presidency; and if the same curious individual alluded to, desired to be convinced as well of the difference between projects and practice, in all matters where our good masters interfere on the public behalf, it would only have been necessary for him to walk down to the beach a few days since, and watch the proceedings of a committee of survey, cited to examine 317 bags of the said shipments. The history of the importation appears to be, that a few samples were sent here and there to the various collectors, not one in ten of whom had the leisure, the means, or the inclination, to make use of them, whilst the residue was left to be kicked about in the government godowns, as not worth stealing, till, to get rid of the incumbrance, a survey is called, and two-fifths of the whole consignment is found to be utterly useless, the heat and moisture having done their work.—Athenaeum.

THE SHIP "ALFRED."—We regret to announce that the ship Alfred, Captain Voss, with detachments of H.M.'s 81st on board, putting in to Vizagapatam for water, struck on a reef of rocks, and sprung so serious a leak, that all her passengers were obliged to be landed and great part of the cargo. Fortunately no lives were lost. The Alfred has been towed up to Calcutta by steamers.

DEATH OF LIEUT. TOMSDAINE.—We regret to observe in the Bangalore Herald mention of the death of Lieut. Lumsdaine, of the 15th hussars, which took place on the 8th December. The deceased officer had been, for some little time, in a critical state, and was on his way to the presidency, with the view of leaving the country, when death overtook him. He died at the Oospottah bungalow.

FOUR MURAL TABLES are about to be erected, in St. Andrew's Church to the memory of the late esteemed physicians-general of this presidency, Drs. Adams and Wyse, and of Lieut.-Colonel Gordon, the deceased adjutant-general of the army; and of Captain Fox, a formerly member and communicant of the congregation of the Kirk.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

LIEUTENANT ALBERT WILLIAM PINSON, 1st N.I.
Head-Quarters, Choultry Plain, Nov. 22, 1853.—At an European general court-martial held at Moultmein on Saturday, Oct. 8, 1853, Lieut. A. W. Pinson, 1st N.I., was arraigned on the following charges, viz.—

Charge.—For scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the following instances.

First Instance.—In having, on May 18th, 1853, when proceeding by water from Moultmein to join his regiment at Stang, conducted himself in a highly outrageous manner, by severely beating and kicking his wife, Mrs. Mary Pinson, and threatening to stab her.

Second Instance.—In having, on his return to Moultmein, on the 22nd day of the same month and year, violently assaulted and cruelly beaten, with his fists, his wife, the said Mary Pinson, inflicting on her forehead a severe cut on the head.

Third Instance.—In having at the same place, on the afternoon of the same day, violently assaulted and intentionally and wilfully pushed or thrown his wife, the said Mary Pinson, out of the boat, on board which they both were, into the Metheun river, to the imminent danger of her life.

Finding.—The court having maturely weighed and considered the evidences before it, is of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. A. W. Pinson, of the 1st regiment of N.I., is not guilty of either the charges.

Moultmein, Wednesday, the 18th day of Oct. 1853.

Confirmed.

(Signed) W. SAVILEY, Lieut.-General, Commander-in-Chief.

Head-Quarters, Madras, 18th Nov. 1853.

Lieut. A. W. Pinson is to be released from arrest and return to his duty.

By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

W. G. WOODS, Lieut.-Colonel, Adjutant-General of the army.

ENSIGN THOMAS HENRY DRURY, 41st N.I.

Head-Quarters, Madras, Dec. 5, 1853.—At an European general court-martial held at Kamptee on Saturday, Nov. 19, 1853, Ensign T. J. Drury, 41st N.I., was arraigned on the following charges, viz.—

1st Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Kamptee, on Oct. 5, 1853, struck with his fist, Ens. W. O. Cox, of the same regiment, and repeatedly called him a liar.

2nd Charge.—For having at the same time and place been drunk when duty as orderly officer of the day.

Guilty both charges.

Sentence.—To be dismissed from the service.

Kamptee, the 22nd day of November, 1853.

Recommendation.—The Court having performed its duty in awarding to the prisoner a sentence commensurate with the offences of which he has been found guilty, begs respectfully but very earnestly to recommend him to the merciful consideration of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

The Court would mention as the grounds of its recommendation, the youth and inexperience of the prisoner; the contrition expressed by him, the character for sobriety given him by his commanding officer, and by an officer with whom he lived, leading to the impression that Ens. Drury was unexpectedly overcome by indulging in an insidious beverage of the strength of which he was ignorant; and to the state so induced, the Court would charitably attribute the conduct of the prisoner as set forth in the first charge.

Approved and confirmed; but at the earnest recommendation of the Court, I remit the sentence of dismissal, so properly awarded for the offences charged, and I trust that the predicament which Ens. Drury placed himself in by his intemperance and violent conduct, will be a warning to him, and to all others, to refrain from a vice now happily of rare occurrence in the army, and to observe, on all occasions, and under ever circumstance, that strict propriety of conduct which characterizes the officer and the gentleman.

(Signed) W. STAVELEY, Lieut. Gen. C.-in-C.

Head-Quarters, Madras, Dec. 2, 1853.

Ensign Drury is to be released from arrest and to return to his duty.

BOMBAY:

THE LONDON MAIL of November 24th arrived at Bombay Government 25th (per Feroze).

GOVERNMENT SAVINGS BANK.—Bombay Castle, Nov. 23, 1852.—Notice is hereby given, that so much of the 12th rule of the Government Savings Bank as directs transfers to be made to the 4 per. cent. loan on a depositor's account accumulating to Rupees (500) five hundred, is cancelled, and, in lieu thereof, these sums will now be transferred to the 3½ per cent. loan, advertised in the Calcutta Gazette of the 28th October, 1853, or to such loan as may be open in the absence of any instructions to the contrary from the depositor.

A. MALET, Chief Sec. to Gov.

LIEUT. R. F. BURTON.—The friends of the talented author, Lieut. R. F. Burton, of the 18th Bombay N.I., will be glad to learn that he was alive and well at Suez on the 7th October, when the mail left. He had just returned to that city after a trip through the Hejaz, having visited Medina and Mecca, and gone through all the ceremonies of the pilgrimage: he does not, however, we believe, intend prefacing his name with that of Hadji, although he has performed the haj. Lieut. Burton had amongst other things collected a variety of geological specimens in his tour; and there can be little doubt that the observations made during his travels will be laid before the world in a short time. He is already favourably known in literary circles.—Bombay Times.

H.M.'s 8th REGT.—We have much pleasure in giving prominent insertion to the following order issued by Brigadier-Gen. Stalker, C.B., under date the 12th instant, on the departure of H.M.'s 8th regt. from Deesa:—"The brigadier-general commanding cannot permit H.M.'s 8th, the King's regiment, to quit the division, without recording the very high sense he entertains of its efficiency in every respect. The uniform good conduct of the men, and the almost total absence of drunkenness, afford the strongest evidence that the discipline of the corps is of the highest order, which reflects the greatest credit upon Lieut.-Col. Hartley, and all under his command. The harmony and gentlemanly bearing, which have been ever conspicuous amongst the officers, and the cordial and friendly feelings which have marked their intercourse with those of other corps with whom they have been associated, will render their departure a subject of deep regret to all, to none more so than to the brigadier-general himself, who has had so many opportunities of forming a correct estimate of their worth. The brigadier-general will never cease to take a lively interest in H.M.'s 8th, the King's regiment, and nothing will afford him more gratification than to bear of success attending their arms whenever employed, and he begs to assure Lieut.-Col. Hartley, and all under his command, that they carry with them his (Brig.-Gen. Stalker's) sincere wishes for their welfare and prosperity."

RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.—The editor of the Bombay Gazette has visited the railway-works beyond Tannah, and supplies us with some curious information upon trifling matters connected with railway management in India. In cleaning an engine and boiler, he says, forty coolies are equal to about one English workman. In Bengal we may assume the same proportion, with one point of difference. The forty natives injure the boiler in the process, while the one Saxon does not. Another authority, however, gave a different story, from actual experience. Sixteen men and eight women have been employed to do the work of two "navvies." Even artisans were inferior, in the proportion of three to one, though in certain trades, requiring trained men, they were nearly equal. The rate of speed generally attained, moreover, is said to be only eighteen miles an hour, including stoppages.

ONE OF THE PRINCES OF CANDAHAR has commissioned an agent in Bombay to engage an Englishman as tutor to his son. His highness will pay the teacher's expenses, and allow him Rs. 600 a month. He must remain five years in Candahar, and will be furnished with suitable lodgings. The opportunity is an admirable one for any traveller who desires to make himself thoroughly acquainted with this portion of Central Asia, and can endure a certain amount of hardship. It would also offer an excellent opportunity for Government to plant an influential secret agent in the very heart of the enemy's country.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

SECURITY BONDS.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 7, 1853.—With reference to the General Regulations published in G. G. O., dated March 13, 1850, No. 184, regarding securities from public servants in the military department, the Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to resolve, in addition thereto, that every public servant of the above description, whose appointment may be held on a security bond, shall, on the 1st of January and 1st of July, in each year attach to any abstract, including his pay and allowances for the month immediately preceding, a return of sureties, in the following form:—

Rank or designation, and Name.	Place of Residence.	Date when last communicated with.

I do hereby certify that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the above-mentioned individuals, whose names are affixed to a bond as my sureties, are now alive and solvent.

The above voucher will be considered by the pay department indispensable, before the salary for the preceding or any subsequent month can be paid or brought into the military disbursements.

It is to be clearly understood that the above rule does not absolve from the necessity of making an immediate report of the death or disqualification of sureties to the Hon. Company's solicitor as already ordered.

It will be the duty of the Military Accountant and Auditor General to communicate, when necessary, with the Hon. Company's solicitor on all matters connected with security bonds; and any irregularities which are not satisfactorily explained or rectified by the parties concerned, are to be reported to Government by these officers without delay.

By order of the Right Hon. the Gov. in Council,
T. MAUGHAN, Lieut.-Col., Sec. to Government.

EXAMINATION OF SUBALTERNs.

Head-Quarters, Poona, Nov. 12, 1853.—1. The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to establish as a rule, that no subaltern officer shall in future be considered eligible for appointment to the command of a troop or company, until he shall have been examined by a committee of officers, in his theoretical and practical knowledge of his parade and other regimental duties, and shall be reported by such committee to be qualified for the command.

2. The qualifications required are as follows:—

For a Troop or Company of Artillery.

—I. A good practical knowledge of Parts I. and II. of the Book of Field Exercises and Evolutions of the Army.—II. A good practical knowledge of the field-battery exercises for horse or foot artillery.—III. A thorough knowledge of the constitution and establishment of a troop of horse or battery of foot artillery, the mode of payment of the men, the rules regulating their enlistment, discharge and pension rules, and Articles of War, the rules regulating good-conduct pay and distinguishing marks for good conduct, the rations and messing, the canteen system and other points concerned, with the interior economy of a troop or company.—

IV. The equipment of the battery, the different kinds of ammunition used, the use of each under different circumstances, use of the several implements and articles of equipment, mode to be observed for the preservation of the ammunition, the repair of the carriages and harness, and of the responsibility of the officer in command as respects his contracts and gun contingent allowance.

For a troop of Light Cavalry.

A good practical and theoretical knowledge of military equitation of Parts I. and II., and Sections XIV., XV., XVI., XVII., XVIII., and XIX. of Part III. of the Book of the Regulations for the Instruction, Formations, and Movement of the Cavalry, an acquaintance with the principles of farriery, the interior management of a troop, and an acquaintance with the Mutiny Act, Articles of War, and general regulations of the service.

For a Company of Infantry.

A good practical and theoretical knowledge of Parts I. II. and V. of the Book of Evolutions and Field Exercises of the Army, the interior management of a company, and acquaintance with the Mutiny Act, Articles of War, and general regulations of the service.

3. Officers commanding brigades and stations will be pleased to receive committees accordingly, upon application from regimental commanding officers, to be composed of a field officer, captain, and adjutant, of which the president and a member should belong to the same branch of the service as the candidate, and one or other of them to the same regiment.

The examination of artillery subalterns will be arranged by the Commandant of Artillery, and as from the detached state of the corps it may sometimes be found impracticable to assemble such committees, the Commandant's opinion as to the fitness of the party for command will be held sufficient until a favourable opportunity offers of testing his acquirements in the manner prescribed, the result of which in all such cases is to be specially reported for the Commander-in-Chief's information.

4. The committees are to frame their reports agreeably to the following form:—

Report.—The committee has examined Ensign or Lieut. A. B., of the — regiment, in the theoretical and practical knowledge of his parade and other regimental duties, as also into his acquaintance with the Mutiny Act, Articles of War, and General Military Regulations, and is of opinion that he is (not) qualified to command a troop or company (as the case may be).

By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief,

(Signed)

E. GREEN, Lieut.-Col.,

Actg. Dep. Adj.-Gen. of the Army.

FIELD EXERCISES OF THE TROOPS.

Head-Quarters, Poona, Dec. 22, 1853.—The field exercise for which the under-mentioned troops have been assembled at Poona being concluded, the Commander-in-Chief cannot forbear from expressing to the army at large the gratification he has derived from the proof given of its high state of efficiency in every respect by that portion of it (embracing every arm) he has thus had the opportunity of personally inspecting.

Horse brigade artillery (2nd and 3rd troops).

H.M. 10th Royal Hussars.

Poona irregular horse.

1st comp. 1st batt. art., with No. 2 light field batt.

4th comp. 4th batt. art., with No. 4 light field batt.

5th comp. 4th batt. art., with battery.

4th regt. N.I. (rifle corps).

19th regt. N.I.

27th regt. N.I.

Detachment of 26th regt. N.I.

Detachment under command of Capt. Hunt.

The excellent manner in which the field movements have been performed, and the perfect acquaintance with their various field duties evinced by the officers and soldiers generally (European and native), merit his lordship's warm approbation; and, together with the exemplary conduct of the men during the time the troops have been assembled, fully attest the admirable discipline that pervades all ranks.

The Commander-in-Chief cordially thanks Brigadier Trydell, the officers of the head-quarters and Poona divisional and brigade staff, and officers commanding regiments, for the able assistance they have afforded him; and his lordship requests that his high approbation may be communicated to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the several corps and detachments of Poona.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 26, 1853.—Whereas the Right Hon. John Lord Elphinstone, G.C.H., hath been appointed by the Honourable the Court of Directors of the East-India Company to the office of Governor of Bombay and its dependencies, it is hereby proclaimed that the Right Hon. John Lord Elphinstone, G.C.H., has on the date hereof assumed charge of the Government of Bombay and its dependencies, and taken the oaths and his seat under the usual salute from the garrison; and all persons are required to obey the said Right Hon. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, January 31, 1854.

THE NAPIER PAPERS.

THE public have now the means of judging between the Earl of Dalhousie and the late Sir Charles Napier, who, it will be recollected, while Commander-in-Chief of the Indian army, assumed the power, of his own mere notion, to set aside established rules; and receiving a well-merited reproof from the Governor-General, took to him high dudgeon and threw up his command. The papers on the subject have been published by order of the Court of Proprietors,—and when we say the papers, we mean the whole of the papers; the Napier have had no opportunity of garbling them. The order which, without reason, Sir C. Napier took upon himself to supersede, had been in force nearly five years; but the Commander-in-Chief choosing to think that it was impolitic and unjust, treated it as waste paper, and coolly revived a rule passed somewhat earlier, but which was in force only seventeen months. Now it is quite clear that Sir Charles Napier's opinion, that the offensive rule was "impolitic and unjust," could not authorize him in thus dealing with it. If his opinion were that such was the character of the rule, he would have been justified in representing it to the chief authority; but he must be a bold man in assertion,—bold as the Napiers themselves,—who would maintain that it was competent to the General to act upon this opinion in defiance of an existing military law, and in contempt of the Government under which he acted. Suppose a civil judge were to say, “The law is quite clear, and I ought to sentence the prisoner at the bar to a certain punishment; but I think the law impolitic and unjust, and I shall order him to be discharged.” The flounderings of Sir Charles in attempting a justification are truly pitiable: he talks of mutiny, and, when it suits him, labours to prove that mutinous feeling was widely spread; yet in the midst of this, at a time when, if ever, the presence of the Commander-in-Chief was most desirable, he galloped away from the seat of apprehension, leaving the mutiny to take care of itself; nay, at the very moment he declared in words that there was nothing like general mutiny, but only some partial ill-feeling, shared exclusively by a few bad characters.

On the 16th January, 1850, he says, “I have seen most of the armies in the world, and I have never seen one that is better paid or better cared for than the army of the East-India Company; neither have I ever seen a more obedient, more honourable army.” Then advertg to the very trifling insubordination that had been manifested, he said, “I will not allow a few malignant discontented scoundrels to disgrace their colours and their regiments by an insolent attempt to dictate to their Government what pay that Government shall give to soldiers, towards whom it has always been both just and generous.” Here is Sir Charles’s sentence upon his own conduct as shadowed forth by that of others. He would not allow “an attempt to dictate to the Government.” Of course not, he would have all the dictation to himself. He might dictate to the Governor-General, and it was the duty of the said Governor-General to obey with lowly reverence. It is true that Sir Charles says, in another place, “I did not dispute the right of the Governor-General to reprimand the Commander-in-Chief; but”—this “but” is like the postscript of a lady’s letter, the most important part of the communication—“but I denied and I still deny the justice of his exercise of that right.” Undoubtedly this is a point to be ever denied. The power of the Governor-General to reprimand is unquestioned, but he must not understand that power to be without limitation. He may at will reprimand Smith, Brown, Jones, and Robinson, but he must keep his pen clear of the Napiers, except in the way of laudation. They are a sacred stock, and must be handled more delicately than old China. But then—will it be believed?—Sir Charles complains that the reprimand was an “intemperate” one. It is in print and will speak for itself; it is decided, but, at the same time, calm and dignified. But, however that may be, think of a Napier condemning intemperance of language! This is positively too rich. We have heard of the Prince of Darkness rebuking sin: now we have a Napier first ascribing intemperance of language in a quarter where it had never been employed, and then reproving it; turning sulky upon its assumed use, and thereupon throwing up an office of high importance, but which did not relieve its occupant from the duty (the first which a soldier should learn) of due subordination to authority.

¶ Almost the only remaining point of Sir Charles’s defence is an attempt to lower the importance of what he did in regard to the order, which he treated with such levity. He maintains that he did not cancel, that he only suspended, the order, pending the decision of the Government; and he argues that to suspend is not to cancel. Now, this is altogether verbal trifling. Suspension was, as to its effect, much the same as cancellation. The dissatisfied men (“the malignant discontented scoundrels”) got what they wanted. When the Government disapproved, would even Sir Charles Napier have been hardy enough to take it back again, had the Earl of Dalhousie prescribed such a course? The Commander-in-Chief was not a simpleton; he knew that what was done was done; and that not only was the extra payment irrecoverable, but that the rule under which he should have acted, but did not act, could not be put in force under the same circumstances for at least a long period of time. He must have known that he was indirectly impeding the successful adoption of a large and comprehensive plan affecting the allowances of the entire Indian army, upon which the authorities, both at home and abroad, felt great anxiety. He knew all this, and he disregarded it. Napier willed, so Napier must execute. But he had not the magnanimity to carry it out with a bold face, but descended to the meanness of quibbling on the difference between suspending and cancelling. Suppose he had ventured a little farther. Suppose he had written something like this:—“My Lord,—Symptoms of mutiny having manifested themselves in a portion of the army here, I have deemed it necessary to act promptly and vigorously. I have accordingly caused the ringleaders to be seized, and by way of example I have ordered one of them to be blown from the mouth of a cannon, pending the pleasure of the supreme Government.” What would be the value of such a saving clause as this? The Government could not have the mutilated remains of the sufferer’s body put together again; and though its attempting to recover the money wrongfully paid under Sir Charles Napier’s orders was not physically impossible, it was morally so, as the Commander-in-Chief well knew. The thing was done, and could not be undone, and to talk of reference to Government, of suspending and cancelling, is sheer nonsense. A rule had been set at naught, the consequences were irreparable; and whether the act be called by one name or the other, makes no difference.

On such word-ringing as this did Sir Charles Napier rest his cause, by such cavilling did he seek to justify himself; that is, when he condescended to affect the semblance of argument, and did not get on the high horse and meet an overwhelming mass of facts and reasoning with such convincing phrases as “I assert,” “I deny,” “I shall not at present vouchsafe an answer,” &c., in fact, in the old Napier style, “we are right, and all the world beside are wrong.”

And now having seen something of Napier’s opinion upon Napier, it will be worth while to look at the opinion of the greatest military authority of our days, one of the greatest that ever existed. What says the Duke of Wellington? Our readers shall have his deliberate judgment in his own words:—

“I have no hesitation in stating my opinion, that there existed no sufficient reason for the suspension of the rule, or order, of the 15th of August, 1845, at Wuzerabad.

“That the Governor-General in Council was right, and did no more than his duty, in the expression of his disapprobation of the act of the Commander-in-Chief, in suspending an order of Government in relation to the pay of the troops, and in ordering the adoption of a former repealed order providing for the same object.

"I regret that the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Charles Napier, should have thought proper to resign the highest and most desired situation in the British army, to fill which he had been selected in a manner so honourable to his professional character. But as he has resigned, and I declare my decided opinion that the Governor-General in Council could not with propriety have acted otherwise than have expressed his disapprobation of the conduct of General Sir Charles Napier, in suspending the order of Government of the 15th August, 1845, at Wuzerabad, I must recommend to her Majesty to accept his resignation of his office.

(Signed) "WELLINGTON."

THE ENGINEERS.

We learn that it has been determined to strengthen the corps of engineers at Bengal by an additional battalion, and to give to each battalion one additional captain and one additional subaltern. At Madras the extension of the number of officers in each of the present battalions will be the same as at Bengal; and it is intended there, also, to add another battalion. At Bombay the old battalions will receive the additional officers as at Bengal; and it is not improbable that, at a future period, an additional battalion may be sanctioned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

KELSALL V. FREEMAN.

[At the request of Mr. Kelsall's friends we insert the following from our brother of the Delhi Gazette. We presume that the paragraph referred to is one which appeared in this paper, not on the 17th October, but on the 29th September.—Ed. Allen's Indian Mail.]

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Dear Sir,—I am very sorry to find, in your paper of the 17th of October, a paragraph copied from the Delhi Gazette of the 6th of August, which reflects on the character of Mr. T. S. Kelsall, merchant, of Calcutta. That paragraph was written by me under the impression that the term "common informer" had been applied to Mr. Kelsall in its colloquial and offensive, rather than in its legal and purely technical sense. On learning, however, from a Calcutta paper, that I had been entirely wrong, and that the term used by the Court was intended to convey no censure whatever on Mr. Kelsall, but merely to describe the peculiar and perfectly unobjectionable form of action by which he had proceeded against the defendant, I published, without delay, a correct statement of the case. This latter statement appeared in the Delhi Gazette of the 20th of August, and will, I hope, be republished by you, together with my assurance of regret that the Delhi Gazette should have unintentionally slandered a man of honour and of reputation.

I remain yours faithfully,

The Editor of the Delhi Gazette.

Delhi, Nov. 28th, 1853.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Sir,—As your Journal is much read by Indian officers, perhaps you will allow me, through its medium, to draw attention to the following comment on the Bengal Military Fund.

It is with much concern and regret, that I observe the state of the Fund to be such as to render it necessary to curtail the pensions to widows; but if the solvency of the Fund depends upon it, it is to their interest to submit. What I would wish to protest against is, that such reduction should be permanent, instead of holding out a prospect to those now on the Fund that the full payment will be resumed on the Fund recovering from its embarrassments; and that however urgent the adoption of such a measure may be, it should not be framed on erroneous principles.

I see that the resolutions have been carried by a considerable majority; but as the Fund, as now constituted, has two objects, the majority of the voters being only interested in one, it is not illiberal to suppose personal interest had weight with many voters, more particularly when ignorant of the claims of the widows, which I will endeavour briefly to state.

Prior to the formation of the present Fund in 1824, the Bengal army had a distinct Widows' Fund, flourishing with a very considerable surplus capital (I believe about eight lacs of rupees). This capital they gave up to the now Military Fund, under a guarantee that the pensions should be secured to the widows, which was supposed to have been done by clause 22 of the rules, as published in the India Register.*

The erroneous impression I allude to is, the managers supposing they have been paying to widows at the rate of 2s. 6d. for the rupee, while they should only have received 2s. 6d., the exchange allowed to the Fund by the Company, whereas the two subjects are wholly unconnected. The rate of pension granted to widows was the retiring full pay of the rank of their husbands, less Lord Clive's Fund; and as retired officers are paid at 2s. 6d., their widows are entitled to the same. Should the Fund never so far recover as to give the full pension, the permanent reduction should only be in prospective, giving officers the option of making up the dowry by other means; and under all circumstances, the widows of members of the original Fund should in justice be exempt from any reduction.

A SUBSCRIBER TO THE ORIGINAL FUND, WHO TOOK CONSIDERABLE INTEREST IN THE TRANSFER.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Sir,—I would once more, very unwillingly, ask the favour of your allowing this letter to be inserted in your next issue.

I was fearful I might have a little understated the charge for a passage from India at Rs. 1,000; but a friend has subsequently told me that he came from Madras, in July last, by the magnificent steamer Indigna, for 80l.

Reverting to the Fund rules, Art. 3, sect. 2, relating to subscribers who may redeem their subscriptions, should be revised; and in justice I do not think it should be limited in its action, viz. from the 1st July, 1846.

I must now allude to a letter signed "A Member," published in another paper, only to thank him for the information he has afforded, viz., that the Indian Government has inflicted the injury complained of! I was ignorant of the cause assigned until he enlightened me. The said cause, or fact, if it really be such, affords me great consolation; for I have that faith in the known liberality of the Hon. the Court of Directors, that I am sure there is not a gentleman of that body who would not scorn to profit by "a ruinous mistake," by which the widows' pension is threatened and an oppressive tax imposed on all their officers. I doubt not that, on a proper representation being made, they will, in the words of "A Member," make every honourable reparation, prevent the ruinous reduction of the widows' pensions, and, in their wise controlling power, see that all is right for the future.

I wish here to state my anxiety not to blame any individual! It is the system of management of which I have complained and do complain (not the men), as being diametrically opposed to the interests of the Fund. I readily allow there have been many talented men in the direction, who, had they remained long enough, or had more power vested in themselves, would have done much to have averted the evils we have arrived at. Indeed, some of them are personally known to me, of whom I could not speak sufficiently well or too highly; but the misfortune has always been, that we no sooner get a clever director than the Government requires his services far away from Calcutta, or he retires from the service. The greatest objection of all, however, is, that the officers elected for directors have as much as they can efficiently do in their several government appointments, and consequently cannot bestow that undivided attention which the Fund demands.

Now to the actuary! The correspondent "A Subscriber to the Widows' Fund" tells us there are two estimates of the deficit, one of which is only 10, on at most 12 lacs. If this estimate be correct (how cheering, contrasted with 28 lacs!), it would appear that neither the increase of donations nor subscriptions was necessary, taking as our guide the following quotation made by him from the actuary's report, p. 74: "I am therefore at present disposed to think, notwithstanding the deficit of 10½ lacs of rupees, there exists no urgent necessity either to increase the rates of donation and contribution, or to diminish the amount of pensions payable to the widows." Whose opinion ought the directors and the army to have followed, their own or their actuary's? It is truly marvellous and unaccountable, as the same correspondent observes, that the actuary's opinion was totally disregarded. In the actuary's opinion lay the safety of the Fund! In that of unprofessional men there could be little besides doubt and insecurity.

Retired brother-officers! you are most of you paying (according to the actuary) higher rates than are actually required; yet you are, I presume, to be called on for increased donations and subscriptions! Rest not until you have the right of voting on every important question affecting the Fund! It is a privilege of all others which we have the greatest right to; and, touching the increased donations and subscriptions, if necessary, let not only us, but every subscriber on-furlough unite with us, and pray the Hon. Court of Directors not to act on the propositions Nos. 1 and 2 until the final report of the actuary appears. Such application to be based on his opinion that they are unnecessary.

Since writing the foregoing I have read the letter in your Journal, No. 334, signed "Fund." I hope my second letter, together with this, will satisfy him that I have never advocated touching the widow's pensions, nor would I on any account do so further than rectifying the exchange, and on which subject the Directors have expressed themselves as follows: "That it is an iniquity for a widow, say, for instance, of a colonel, to receive 342l. a year in England, whilst the widow of another colonel, who happens to be detained in India, receives but 279l. 10s."

More! I deprecate altering in any way the pensions of all widows under the rank of major, unless imperatively called for and recommended by the actuary. I may ask "Fund" if he has read the whole of Art. 26, sec. 3, because he will find it embraces all other claimants on the Fund. Let me add, that article is the chief of the fundamental rules of the institution. It was wisely framed to guard against the possibility of insolvency, and was intended to be the main safeguard of the Fund.

Mr. Editor, pray accept my best thanks for your kindness in publishing my letters. I now take leave of the subject, and in doing so disclaim any other intention than that of securing the welfare and stability of the Fund.

22nd Dec., 1853.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Sir,—Your editorial article of the 19th ultimo gave the word of hope, if not of promise or comfortable assurance, so strongly in favour of the solvency of the Bengal Military Fund, that it is with the utmost alarm and disappointment the widows and their families—for whose painful situation you express so much sympathy—find no less than ten per cent. deducted from the quarterly amount of their annuities now in course of payment. This blow, too, is the more severely felt, as a number of the ladies in question had lately been induced to join in a memorial to the Hon. the Court of Directors, on which they confidently relied for a more favourable consideration being given to their earnest prayer to be spared so severe an infliction. As, however, that memorial has failed of its effect, they have now no other alternative but that of expressing the sense they entertain of the harshness, not to say illegality, with which they have been treated; and, accordingly, the following protest to that effect is now in circulation, not only for their signature, but for that of all subscribers to the Fund who disapprove of the measure referred to, and to whom, as you correctly intimate, the accurate administration of its affairs is by no means unimportant. If, therefore, you will kindly give insertion to this document in your columns, you will confer a benefit upon many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of both sexes, who may not have any other means of seeing it for a considerable period.

Your obedient servant,

G. SWINEY, Lieut.-General.

"We, the undersigned subscribers to, and annuitants upon, the Bengal Military Fund, understanding that the acting agent has, under instructions from the Board of Directors in Calcutta, made a deduction from the last quarterly payment due to certain of the annuitants, hereby record our sense of the cruelty and injustice of that proceeding:—

"First, because Art. 22, sect. 3, of the Regulations states that the benefits 'granted to widows of deceased subscribers are absolute, not dependent on the decision of the directors; but controlled solely by the regulations of the institution.'

"Secondly, because Art. 25 guarantees to the widow of every subscriber three-fourths of her late husband's pay, to be made over to her in sterling money if she resides in England, or in rupees of 2s. 6d. each if she resides in India.

"Thirdly, because the deduction complained of is alleged to be in conformity with Art. 29 (of the old Regulations); which article, however, can apply to forthcoming claimants alone, and not to present annuitants. That article, as interpreted by the Board, would be quite inconsistent with the principle of annuity transactions; since, in making mention of 'annual income,' it confounds the disbursement of annual contributions subscribed for the purpose of additional annuities, with the due payment of annuities already separately funded, and, therefore, totally independent of all current receipts.

"Fourthly, because even supposing Art. 29 to be susceptible of so unwarrantable an interpretation, the alleged inadequacy of the Fund to meet its engagements has never been proved; on the contrary, the professional actuary has formally given it as his opinion that no urgent necessity exists even for increasing the rates of donation and contribution of the members.

"Fifthly, because even if the erroneous interpretation of Art. 29, above alluded to, could be sustained, the sum deducted from the annuitants is not only excessive in itself, but most unfairly assessed; inasmuch as whilst the proposition to that effect was carried by a comparatively small, and therefore incompetent, number of voters in India, the widow's income is taxed ten per cent., when the income of the subscribers themselves is taxed at scarcely one per cent.

"And lastly, because the annuities already paid for and funded constitute an aggregate investment for the exclusive benefit of the widows of deceased subscribers, and are a sacred deposit, over which the Board of Directors has no power whatever but to direct the payment of the stipulated periodical amounts. This fund was long ago declared by the actuary—originally appointed to investigate the affairs of the institution—to 'belong of right to the widows.' If really proved to be deficient in amount, the widows alone have power to consult among themselves as to the sacrifice which each and all may be called upon to make, until such time as the army, in its justice and generosity, shall take measures for replacing the sums which have been lost by* carelessness and mismanagement. There is reason, however, for believing that the losses adverted to have not extended much further than to nullify the "eventual benefits" contemplated in Art. 28, section 5 (of the old Regulations), and that the funded amount—now more than half-a-million sterling—is sufficient to meet the liabilities of the annuity branch of the institution, when the average age of the annuitants and the amount of annuities to be paid are together compared with the tables published in the actuary's report of 1849. But should an undoubted deficit appear, it is confidently trusted that it will not be greater than would be recoverable in less than ten years by the proposed assessment of from 12½ to 25 per cent. upon the contributions of living subscribers, and to which assessment we cordially give our consent.

"For the above reasons we solemnly protest against the harsh and unjust measure of making any deduction whatever from the amount of annuity hitherto paid by the institution, and we appeal, in the first instance, to the Hon. the Court of Directors to interpose, and protect all the parties concerned."

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

A special meeting of the company was held on the 11th instant, at the offices, New Broad-street, to consider a correspondence between the Board of Directors and the East-India Company, respecting the whole of the second 500,000l. of "experimental" capital referred to in the resolutions passed on the 31st of Oct. last, and for raising further capital; Mr. W. J. Hamilton in the chair.

The Chairman said, that at the last meeting of proprietors he proposed a resolution on the part of the Board authorizing the directors to enter into arrangements with the East-India Company for making extension railways in the Bombay presidency, and for raising 1,000,000l. at 4½ per cent. interest. On that occasion a resolution was proposed, which appeared to be founded on an equitable view of the case, under the idea that the East-India Company were bound by their agreement to call up the remainder of the second 500,000l. bearing 5 per cent. interest, before any portion of the 4½ per cent. extension capital was raised. A resolution to that effect was added to that proposed by the directors, and carried unanimously. The directors, being anxious to carry out the wishes of the shareholders, entered into a correspondence with the East-India Company on the subject. The directors did all they could to induce the East-India Company to take the same view of the case as the proprietors, by calling up the whole of the second capital, 500,000l. at 5 per cent., before calling upon them to raise the second million at 4½ per cent.; but the East-India Company maintained that they had full power

* It is now very generally admitted that Mr. Martindell's defalcations, added to some smaller frauds which the institution has had to sustain, would, if they had been carried to our credit up to the present time, amount to more than fifteen lacs of rupees; and that the neglect of our Board of Directors in Calcutta to adapt all payments to the Fund to the altered value of the rupee, as made current by the Indian Government in 1836-37, has, by the same computation, occasioned us a loss of more than ten lacs. If, therefore, the re-adjustment of our rates of contribution in 1829 had been vigilantly superintended, we should now have been in possession of a capital of more than seventy-nine lacs of rupees, notwithstanding our real or supposed losses by remittance. In other words, if our present deficit should be pronounced to be twelve lacs, that sum would be covered, and we should have thirteen lacs surplus to our annuity fund; or if, on the other hand, our present deficit is found to be 24½ lacs, as some wild conjectures affirm, we should even then have a real deficiency of only 3½ lacs; and this I repeat, after setting altogether aside our estimated loss by remittance,—a clear proof that, under the settlement of 1829, our contributions (raised to their equivalents in current rupees) are fully adequate to meet our liabilities, as reported by the actuary in 1849.—G.S.

in the contract with the company to limit the length of the experimental line, as well as the amount of capital to be expended upon it. On receiving a communication to this effect from the authorities, and an intimation of their determination to act upon it, the directors had no alternative but to recommend its adoption by the proprietors. The chairman concluded by moving a resolution, authorizing the directors to enter into a contract with the Hon. East India Company, for making and working an extension line from Calcutta to Shawpoor, or otherwise, and to issue shares for the creation of fresh capital, to the extent of 1,000,000*l.* in the first instance, and such further sum as might be necessary; the newly-created extension capital to become one fund with the experimental capital, subject, however, to the payment of the varying rates of interest respectively.

Mr. Crawford seconded the motion.

Mr. Richmond said it was clear they must look to something else beyond the guarantee of 4½ per cent. to enable them, in the present state of the money-market, to raise the capital for the extension line.

Mr. TWE considered the guarantee was satisfactory.

The resolution was then put and carried.

THE DEODAR CEDAR.

The introduction into Great Britain of this magnificent tree is an object well deserving the attention of country gentlemen, and indeed of all who take an interest in the increase of the vegetable wealth of their country. Attention has been called to the subject by a report from Dr. Royle, who has explored so laboriously and so successfully the botany of the Himalayas and other parts of India, and also by a letter from the same gentleman to Mr. Kennedy. The tree is specifically different from the cedar of Lebanon, with which it has sometimes been confounded. It grows to gigantic size; forests are known in which each tree is from 15 to 36 feet in circumference; trees have been found 160 feet in height; others have been estimated at 180, and even at 200 feet. After quoting a variety of authorities on the value and uses of the Deodar, Dr. Royle thus sums up:—

"Having taken all reasonable pains to inquire into the opinions of others who have had opportunities of judging correctly of the nature of this wood, I think I am justified in concluding, what I have long thought, that the timber of the Deodar, from fineness of grain, strength, and durability, is not only one of the most valuable of the Himalayas, but as good as any other of its class in any other part of the world. Its durability is probably owing to its being so thoroughly imbued with resinous matter, which, though diffusing rather an agreeable odour, of course increases its inflammability. The wood is fine enough in grain to allow furniture, chests of drawers, and even writing-desks to be made of it. It is strong enough to be employed for the vertical pillars of mosques, and not only for the pillars, but also for the horizontal beams of wooden bridges. It bears exposure to the wet, dry, and cold seasons of the Himalayas when employed for the roofs, verandahs, and the outer framework of houses and of temples, seeming without injury for ages; while boats made of it float on the Sutlej for twenty and thirty years. There seems, therefore, no doubt of the Deodar being fit for all the purposes to which any of the pine tribe are applied in Europe. If required, it may form the 'mast of some great Admiral,' be probably as good as the 'hark' for building the hulls of ships, and better than the much-used yellow-deal for spars."

ELECTION OF HOME AGENT FOR THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND.—At the close of the poll on 30th November, 1853, the numbers were as follows:—

Major Henderson	1,056
Dr. Mackinnon	156

The votes from Europe arrived too late for the poll; consequently the above numbers represent the opinions of the subscribers in India only. It is stated, however, that had the European votes been received in time, the majority for the candidate at the head of the poll would have been larger.

BOOKS.

Zohrab; or, a Midsummer Day's Dream: and other Poems.
By WILLIAM THOMAS THORNTON, Author of an Essay on "Over-Population," "A Plea for Peasant Proprietors," &c. London, 1854. Longman & Co.

This small and unpretending volume introduces us to an "old friend with a new face." We have previously met the author in the severe field of political economy, and have expressed our accordance in the general soundness of his views, but more especially our admiration of the humane and kindly spirit which he has carried into a branch of study, the great masters in which, or those reputed such, treat men and women much as they would bricks and mortar, or any other forms of inert matter. It is scarcely necessary to say that he has maintained the like spirit throughout the volume now before us, for poetry is far more akin to its development than political economy; but that which we are bound to notice is the manifestation of a true poetic genius by one who has not hitherto (at least publicly) sought to deck his thoughts with the many-coloured lights which irradiate the conceptions of the bard. In these matter-of-fact days, the appearance of a new poet, that is, of one really meriting the name, is an event. Such is the candidate whose production it is our present duty to announce. The first and longest poem in the volume, entitled "Zohrab," is a tale of war and romance, related with great spirit and skill. The following stanzas describe the author's youthful feelings in regard to the name of Zohrab, for which we think he needlessly apologizes, as we are of opinion that there is no living man who would not be proud of illustrious descent if he could claim it.

"Else might my verse assert its claim
Elegiac cenotaph to rear
To one, whose old historic name
Still my own mother's kindred bear;
And to restore his mouldering tomb,
From me, perchance, were justly due,
Who, in his fame would fain assume Hereditary interest too.

"At least, from his illustrious race
Boyhood's romantic vanity
Feared not our own descent to trace;
And oft, with strange delight, have I
(For sportive fancy, too, was young And rich in wild imaginings,) Dreamed our neglected branch had sprung
From antique stock of Asian kings.

"Baseless or real, such idle boast
Now would my tutored mind deride,
Of boyish follies, scorning most
The folly of ancestral pride.
Yet would I fain with Zalzur's line
Still deem our own associate,
If so the more the hope were mine
Ancestral deeds to emulate."

The succeeding poem, "Stanzas written in Kensall Green Cemetery," are of a different character. They are devoted to the memory of a child of the author's, whose remains sleep in the place where the anguish of the father found bitter solace in breathing the lines which recal her living graces. Some sonnets follow, and, as they are held together by a continuous train of thought, there is difficulty in selecting for extract. We however venture, at the risk of breaking the chain, to take two:—

"No more, as without hope and objectless
Is life denounced, nor, when affliction plies
Her iron scourge, the downcast spirit lies Passively meek in sad submissiveness.

Roused by a summons from on high, we press
Onward to fields of glorious empire,
Cheered, yea elate! if aught our fealty tries;
Zealous to do our Sovereign's will, nor less
Content to suffer pain or loss, if ours
The privilege, our feeble aid to lend
In that great conflict, which, against the powers
Of darkness, angels and archangels wage,
Labouring God's pure dominion to extend O'er realms still held in demon vassalage.

"To slacken labour's rigid chain; to higher
Ambition, and pursuit of worthier prize,
Awakening Mammon's sordid votaries;
To tend the drooping serf, whose life entire
Is thankless taskwork, paid with scantiest hire
Of life's requirements, aiding him to rise
From his brute level, and with doubt aspire
And hope now kindled, to his native skies;
These are exalted aims—be these thy choice;
Thus may'st thou do God service, thus recruit
His armies, and the lingering hour advance
When Earth shall start from bondage, and rejoice,
And glory, might, and majesty impute
To Him who wrought so great deliverance."

All cannot take part in this great moral battle. Some are excluded, not by want of ability, but by want of opportunity. For such the author provides consolation in another sonnet:—

"In the front rank, and in the battle's heat,
To willing champions space is oft denied:
And if thou, too, in privacy must hide
Gifts for wide field and high achievement meet,
Yet grieve not as for talents misapplied,
Nor as beneath thee deem it to complete
The victory over thine own heart, where pride,
Chief among rival passions, has her seat.
So shall thy patient fortitude commend
Thy master's cause; so shall be given strength,
Which shall uphold thy steps, when called at length
To cross death's dreary flood, and to ascend
To loftier sphere—ah! if permitted there
In service, such as angels yield, to share!"

The remaining poems are sentenced by the author to be regarded as "Waifs and Strays." Nevertheless, we should have liked to dwell a little upon some of them, had we not already been tempted to occupy a space considerable for us, inasmuch as we are not professed reviewers. As it is, we must be brief. "A Family Legend" needs no great exercise of anagrammatic skill to determine what family is intended. The volume is closed by some imitations of Virgil and Horace, after the manner of Pope and others. In one of these, the author embodies some of the principles of sound political economy which he has so ably maintained in prose. In a smaller piece (not one of the imitations) he gives vent to this wish:—

"Oh! that I were a poet, and could soar
Aloft on contemplation's eagle wings,

In answer to this, we beg to assure him that he is a poet. If he will not take our word, we turn him over to his readers in general, who we hope will be numerous, and who we feel quite certain will be unanimous in confirming our judgment.

Memorandum of Circumstances connected with the Removal of the Judges of the Sudder Court at Bombay. Bombay, 1853.

This pamphlet apparently emanates from Mr. Warder, and is issued as a vindication of his conduct towards his former colleagues of the Sudder Court.

Papers relating to an Investigation into the Right of Inheritance to certain Private Property of the late Nawab of Surat. Bombay, 1853.

As, within such space as we can afford, it would be impossible to enter satisfactorily into the matters here discussed, all that we can do is to announce the publication.

Speculations on the Eastern Question. By a SOLDIER. London, 1854. Stanford.

These speculations extend too widely for us to find space for following them; we cannot, however, say that we have read the pamphlet in vain, for here is a good story, which we have much pleasure in extracting:—

"I have not alluded to a Greek empire. What it would be, may be imagined from the following anecdote. A Greek gentleman returning to his country after some years spent in America, proposed the establishment in his native city of a debating club.

Several young men expressed their willingness to join, and a meeting was held to settle preliminaries. The first thing to be done was the election of a president. The ballot-box was produced, and each member placed in it a paper with the name of his nominee. On opening the box it was found that no man had a majority of votes, but that each name had one vote. Every member had voted for himself as president!

Letter to John Bright, Esq., M.P., on the India Question. By JAMES WILSON, Esq., Twenty-five Years Resident in Bengal. London, 1854. Stanford.

This pamphlet, from the same mind which has issued so many others equally good or equally bad, has come forth somewhat late. The author, who, we suspect, has been fast asleep for some months, has a personal grievance to act as a spur to his patriotic fervour. He was not examined before the Parliamentary Committee.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

No. 1, KING WILLIAM STREET, CITY, LONDON.

Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament, 6 WILL 4, cap. 54.

DIRECTORS.

SIR HENRY WELLS, K.B., Chairman.
JOHN STUART, Esq., Deputy Chairman.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong,
K.C.B., K.C.T. and S.
John Bagshaw, Esq., M.P.
Augustus Bannister, Esq.
Charles Dashwood Bruce, Esq.
Ellis Watkin Cusack, Esq.
William Kilburn, Esq.

Francis Macnaghten, Esq.
Charles Otway Mayne, Esq.
Major John Arthur Moore.
William Rothley, Esq.
Robert Saunders, Esq.
Capt. Samuel Thornton, R.N.
Brodie Maclellan Wilson, Esq., M.P.

The marked success which has attended the operations of this Society justifies the Directors in calling the attention of the public to the superior advantages held out to all classes desirous of affecting Assurances upon their lives.

The subjoined scale of rates is framed with the greatest care, and will be found to be as MODERATE as is CONSISTENT WITH PERFECT SECURITY.

Annual Premium required for the Assurance of £100 on a single Life, with participation in Profits:—

Age	£	s	d	Age	£	s	d	Age	£	s	d
20	21	18	8	35	£2	14	11	50	£4	5	6
25	2	3	3	40	3	9	0	55	5	5	10
30	2	8	10	45	4	12	2	60	6	13	8

Tables for Policies to be effected in India have been especially prepared from the records of the East-India Company, on the experience of mortality in that country.

During the last twelve years, the reduction of Premium on Policies entitled to participate in Profits has averaged more than 14 per cent., and in the last three years it has been declared at 45 per cent.

An annual division is made of one-fifth of the ascertained profits of the five preceding years; the other four-fifths being set apart to enter into the average of succeeding years.

Of the sum annually divisible, 75 per cent. is apportioned to Policy-holders who have paid six annual Premiums; either in a Reduction of subsequent Premiums, or as a Bonus added to the Policy. The remainder is apportioned to the Shareholders.

Assets of the Society, upwards of £300,000.—Amount of Policies in force, £3,000,000.—Annual income arising from Premiums, exclusively of interest on the invested capital, exceeds £150,000.

Weekly Board-day, Thursday, at 10 o'clock.
Committee sit every Tuesday and Saturday, at 12 o'clock, when Policies requiring despatch may be effected.

A Bonus of Twenty per Cent. from realised profits has been declared for the year 1852; and the like Bonus for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follows:—

Low Rates of Premium calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.

Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of a party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only changed on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents at the other Indian Presidencies.

LADIES' OUTFITS TO INDIA.

JOHN BESEMERES AND CO., Manufacturers of LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, Under-clothing, Baby-linen, and every article required for a family proceeding to India, are now compiling Outfits at their Manufacturing Prices, thus effecting an important saving in the outlay. Wedding Outfits on the same terms.

Ladies' Long Cloth Chemises, 1s. 6d., 2s., 3s. 6d.; Filled Night Dresses, 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d.; Long Cloth Drawers, 1s. 6d., 1s. 9d., 2s.; Petticoats, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d.; Dressing-gowns, 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 10s. each. A detailed Priced List of every article may be ordered by post. The Outfit Department is entirely superintended by young women of competent skill, aided by dressmakers of taste and experience.

All the Under-clothing is made up by selected classes of carefully-trained private hands, needlewomen, who receive constant employment throughout the year, at a liberal and fixed rate of wages. This system, ORIGINATED BY THIS THE OLDEST ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KIND IN LONDON, has effectually redeemed the character of Ready-made Linen for strength and neatness, while its admitted usefulness and economy for garments for family and general home use, have placed it among the successful manufactures of the day.

To the Merchant exporting to Australia and other settlements, these goods, from the high character they bear, are very attractive, and rank among the safest shipments to those parts.

Ready-made Linen Warehouses, 61, 62, 63, and 64, Houndsditch, London.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION OF OPIUM

and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—Thirty years have elapsed since Captain Jeremie, the inventor of this most valuable preparation of Opium, first offered it to the public, since which period most of the respectable Members of the Profession in India, England, and on the continent of Europe, have prescribed it and recommended it as the safest and most efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium. The universal patronage which this medicine has obtained in England in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting, the premonitory symptoms of Cholera, and the great and increasing demand for it from all parts of the continent of Europe, is the greatest proof of its efficacy and good effects.

Prepared only by SAVORY and MOORE, Chemists, 143, New Bond Street, London.

N.B.—None can be genuine unless surrounded with a Government stamp.

Agents for India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, and Co., Calcutta.

LADIES of DELICATE COMPLEXION, who suffer

from exposure to cold winds and damp atmosphere, will find immediate and soothing relief in the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.

This unique Botanical Preparation allays all irritation and tenderness of the skin, removes cutaneous disfigurements, freckles, and tan, and imparts a healthy and blooming appearance to the complexion, and a delicacy and softness to the neck, hands, and arms. Perseverance in its application promotes a free and uninterrupted exercise of those important functions of the skin, so essential for the preservation of health, and the attainment and continuance of a beautiful complexion.

Gentlemen, after shaving, will also find it allay the irritability and smarting pain, and render the skin soft, smooth, and pleasant.

Its purifying and refreshing properties have obtained its selection by Royalty, and the several Courts throughout Europe, together with the "élite" of the aristocracy.—Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR" are on the wrapper, and "A. ROWLAND & SONS, 29, HATTON-GARDEN, LONDON," on the Government stamp, affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS, the most effective Cure for GOUT and RHEUMATISM.—A frequent cause of these complaints is the inflammatory state of the blood, attendant with bad digestion, indigestion, and great debility, showing the want of a proper circulation of the fluids, and that impurity of the blood greatly aggravates these painful disorders. Holloway's Pills are of so purifying a nature that a few doses, taken in time, is an effectual preventive against Gout and Rheumatism; but any one that has an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the powerful properties of which, combined with the effect of the Pills, insure a certain cure.

Sold by all druggists, and at Professor Holloway's, 344, Strand, London; and by all European and native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

stances, would have been highly suspicious. As to the departure of the assassins, whether they walked out as they had walked in, or escaped by some other way, nothing seems to be known; no certain trace of them has been found. Some persons who were about Captain Latter's person are said to have disappeared; and one man has been apprehended who had marks of blood on his clothes, and more money in his possession than he could satisfactorily account for.

Another steamer, the Company's frigate Medusa, has been lost. She struck on a rock, about ten miles from Prome, and sunk in four fathoms water. The Tenasserim also met with an accident in the Rangoon river, but not an irreparable one. Part of her machinery was carried away, and in consequence she was detained several days. The steam-frigate Zenobia, carrying not "Cæsar and his fortunes," but Lord Dalhousie and the interests of the British Government, has been more happy, having arrived in safety, with its noble freight, at Rangoon, where his lordship remained three days, and then left for Prome.

The postal arrangements in the British Burmese dominions are reported to be still under a course of active improvement.

From the North-West there is nothing very exciting or important. Lieutenant Godby has happily recovered of the wound from which, at one time, danger was apprehended.

Oude is in the usual state. The following rather lengthy extract gives an account of another incessantly distracted country. It needs no comment; but the affirmation contained in the first sentence might certainly have been ventured at any previous date as safely as now.

"All is confusion in the Nizam's dominions. Throughout the country the utmost disorder prevails, life and property are insecure, and the government is felt to be totally powerless. The Rohillas and the Arabs have lately had several encounters, with no end of pillage and bloodshed. Two battles, having their rise in money dealings, have been fought in the districts. There was a battle in the district of Ulghole, in which three hundred and fifty Rohillas were concerned on the one part, and seventy-five Arabs on the other. Ulghole, the jagheer of one Syf Jung, is mortgaged to persons known as the sons of Abdoel Wahid. Syf Jung thought they had been overpaid, and employed Rohillas to recover his state. The Arabs keeping the district for the mortgagee surprised the Rohilla camp at night, and the battle which ensued terminated in the entire and signal defeat of the Rohillas. Another hired band of Rohillas gave battle about the same time to a body of Arabs in charge of a jagheer mortgaged by the sons of one Ekteer-ood-deen Khan. The Rohillas were successful at first, but were overpowered by a reinforcement of Arabs sent from Hyderabad to the party holding the jagheer. At Chotee Kullianee the Rohillas renewed the fight,—their third battle. They were, as before, defeated. The Arabs carried the place, killing twenty-five Rohillas, wounding thirty, and taking several prisoners; they themselves losing two Arabs killed and seven wounded. Durmapoorree, a village principally occupied by Brahmins, was sacked by a party of stray and disbanded Rohillas. The women were shamefully abused,—the Brahmins say that thirty have destroyed themselves in consequence. This town is situated about one hundred and twenty miles from Hyderabad, on the banks of the Godavery. The Rohillas completely sacked the place, and carried off property to the value of upwards of two lakhs of rupees, chiefly belonging to rich tellings and merchants who were residents of the place. Mr. G. A. Bushby, the new Resident, arrived at the court on the 15th ultimo, and soon afterwards had an interview with his Highness, from whom he is said to have demanded an ultimatum on two points,—namely the payment in full of his arrears of subsidy to the British Government, and the disbanding of his Rohillas and Arabs, who are ravaging the country. The reduction of the military establishments is proceeding as expeditiously as circumstances will admit of. The principal Arab chiefs about the court have consented to the reduction of their troops; a few will not come to any terms. The measure of remodelling the late contingent of H.H. the Nizam has been promulgated in General Orders by the Resident at Hyderabad. The material points are, that all the local officers are pensioned, and those not in civil employ have been awarded a gratuity of six months' pay. The Hyderabad contingent will consist of four regiments of Sillikar cavalry, 200 strong, the artillery of four batteries of six-pounders and two twelve-pound howitzers, with a large efficient ordnance; and the senior ordnance officer, Major Fitzgerald, is awarded Rs. 200 monthly for the extra charge. The infantry to consist of six corps of 803 privates each, with the usual complement of native commissioned and non-commissioned. The establishment attached are pension-boys 20, which is a rare boon; also mustered followers of moonshees, hurcarras, dobbees, bujams, bheestees, and lascars; thus, retaining all previous existing mustered followers, who certainly ought to be grateful for the government's kind consideration. The medical department is believed to stand intact, and not an individual, high or low, suffers. The superintending surgeon's duties devolve upon the surgeon of the Hyderabad subsidiary force. The judge-advocate's duties likewise devolve upon the shoulders of the same functionary at Secunderabad. The commandants of cavalry and batteries of artillery do not suffer by the revision, nor do surgeons, &c.; but the commanders of infantry corps are losers. The different divisions are all abolished, and two only substituted brigadiers to get Rs. 200, and their staff about 900. Brigadier Mayne commands the northern division, consisting of Aurungabad, Ellichpoor, Hingolee, and Mominabad. Brigadier Mackenzie commands the southern division."

Another paper furnishes the following pretty little incident,—scene the Nizam's country:—

"These Rohilla robbers are most atrocious scoundrels, and we have just heard of the perpetration in the Nizam's country of an act of daring violence and outrage, unparalleled hitherto in the annals even of that lawless country. Lieut.-col. Bremner, of the 15th regiment M.N.I. at Secunderabad, having been removed to the command of the 41st regiment at Kamptee, left the former station, with his wife and grown-up daughter, by palkee dawk, on the 20th ultimo, for Nagpore. They proceeded with safety as far as Neermul, when they entered the hilly and jungle country; but just before reaching the fortress of Yedlabad, about fifty miles beyond Neermul, they were attacked by a large body of Rohillas, at sight of whom the Hamalls, as is their wont, disappeared. The colonel was severely beaten, and plundered of all his property, even to the bedding of the palankeen; every particle of clothing on the persons of the travellers was taken away; and they were indebted afterwards to the good-nature and sympathy of the dawk-runners at the nearest stage for some simple native clothing, with which they were obliged to be content until relief was sent to them from Kamptee and Secunderabad."

The magnificent acquisition of Nagpore of course continues to fix attention, and how it is to be governed is a question which attracts some discussion.

The seats of the Presidencies afford little for notice—Calcutta, we think, nothing. At Madras the fearful question of famine presses. On the whole, however, the reports are not more gloomy than might have been expected. The duties on the importation of rice and paddy have been suspended as to all the ports of the Madras Presidency; and measures have been adopted for affording as large an extent of employment on public works as may be practicable. Supplies of food are arriving, it is said, from the outside; and within, the native dealers are believed to have large stores which they will bring to market—when they can make cent. per cent. The mention of native extortioners brings to mind the Manchester men, for whose especial benefit and delight the following is quoted:—

"Among the events of the past fortnight, we must not forget to mention the birth of a new commercial project, which bids fair to be remunerative, and is consequently gaining supporters. A proposal has been issued in the Athenæum for the formation of a joint-stock cotton company, for the purpose of manufacturing the indigenous staple into twist. At present all the twist used for local consumption is supplied from home. The cost of the article has therefore to bear, not only the manufacturer's and grower's charges, but the cost of a voyage to England and back, while the simplicity of the process with improved machinery renders it as practicable at Madras as at Manchester. At Pondicherry there has been for many years a cotton-mill in the possession of a company, at work upon this very article, and paying a handsome profit. What reason, then, can there be, it is reasonably asked, why a similar project should not yield satisfactory dividends at Madras? No prospectus has yet been issued, but one is shortly looked for, when our readers may calculate on having complete information regarding all the particulars of the new scheme."

From Bombay the chief points of intelligence relate to the assumption of the government by Lord Elphinstone, and his lordship's levees and durbars.

In quiet and prosperous times, but little is heard of any country. This has been the case, as appears from the present arrivals, with Scinde. Little or nothing has been heard of it lately; and the reason appears to be, that it is in a state of calm but steady and rapid improvement, under the paternal administration of Mr. Frere.

At Ceylon, chicory and Trincomalee appear the standard subjects; the former on account of its unwarranted assumption of the name and functions of coffee, the latter in regard to its adoption as a half-way house by the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Something might be said on both subjects, did space permit; but it allows only of the remark, that however free trade may be, it should also be honest: a decoction of logwood and other materials should not be sold for "fine old port," and if chicory must grace our breakfast-tables, it should appear as what it is, and not as coffee.

Of China it is not necessary to take any notice in this place. All that is worth quoting will be found in our selections.

BURMAH.

(From the Englishman, Summary, Jan. 5.)

Private letters from Rangoon do not speak with much confidence of the probability of a pacific arrangement with the court of Ava. The reigning monarch is stated to be a man of monkish habits, averse to war, and incapable of enterprise. His younger brother, who rebelled against the late king, placed the present man upon the throne. He is said to have accepted royalty with reluctance, and declared his intention to resign rather than resume the war. Should he take this step, it is said there will be war immediately. A Frenchman is now in command of the Burmese army, and if his own report may be trusted, musters twenty-five thousand combatants. His advice, it is said, has induced the system now pursued by the Burmese, of carrying on a sort of guerilla war, called by our authorities dacoitee. It is unsafe to go to any distance from the military stations. No revenue can be collected, the inspector of forests has not dared to look at a teak-tree, except those cut and floated down to Rangoon, where he remains. This system, however prejudicial to the country, suits the Indian Government, because they can declare to Parliament that they have made peace, retaining their conquests.

The following is from our correspondent at Rangoon, Dec. 18:

Lieut. Ardagh, magistrate of Rangoon, has proceeded to assume charge of the district, and will doubtless permanently retain it, from his known application to business and abilities. Dr. Morton, deputy assistant commissioner at Pegu, succeeds Lieut. Ardagh, and Lieut. Grant, deputy assistant commissioner at Bassein, proceeds to Pegu. Lieut. Baird is considered irrecoverably unfit for further civil employ, so that two vacancies exist in the commission.

The Governor-General arrived here on the 14th, and left yesterday morning for Prome. During his stay here he has received the heads of departments, but no private visits.

"Within the last week, Rangoon has lost one of its most respectable and enterprising merchants, Mr. Robert Johnstone, who was attacked with cholera about three weeks ago, and never rallied. His loss is much felt, for he was one who gave a higher tone to the merchants than exists among those who have come from a neighbouring port. Mr. Bennett, the Postmaster-General, has been here some time. The benefits of his visit will be felt on his return to Calcutta, as it is believed he has determined to send Mr. Crisp an efficient establishment, who indeed greatly needs it.

The objection submitted by the Chamber of Commerce to Mr. Crisp, as postmaster, on the ground of his being a merchant, and therefore incapable of attending to public and private business, has not carried weight, and Mr. Crisp is to retain his appointment, but is to be strengthened by a good establishment. No news has been received from the camp of the combined forces, gone to catch Nga Pyoo at Borni, except a report that the gentleman has decamped, as might be expected. A detachment of the 80th, under Maj. Christie, proceeds to Calcutta in the Tenasserim, the Berenice is to be sent down for the remainder. A committee has been appointed to lay out the cantonment. It is left for them to decide whether the stockade remains or not. It will of course be considered advisable to knock it down, and to extend the limits beyond the present boundary in an easterly direction, where the ground rises favourably.

"19th December.—All quiet here. The Governor-General is expected back about the 6th of next month."

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

(From the Delhi Gazette, Summary, Jan. 5.)

The accounts from the frontier do not even chronicle a skirmish. The Afreedees have as yet done nothing to show that their submission was not bona fide. A letter from Fort Abouzai, dated the 27th ult., mentions that Saadut Khan was hovering about the neighbourhood with 100 horse, in the hope of picking up a straggling Englishman or two, but it is not likely that his amiable expectations will be gratified. A correspondent in the Derajat, writing on the 20th ult., gives us the following "Camp and Table Talk" of the Punjab irregular force:—

"The brigadier arrived at Dera Ismail Khan a few days ago; he has visited this station to make inquiries concerning the attack on poor Moore, and the camel corps will be fortunate if they escape all blame. There seems to be no doubt that the ruffianly attack was made in consequence of discharges recently refused to those men who wished to leave, and who by the G. G.'s order were entitled to claim their discharge. It was not wished that many men should leave the Scinde Camel Corps, and for the sake of appearances poor Moore was sacrificed. Moore is getting well, but will lose the use of his leg, and be always a cripple. He was wounded at Guznee and at Subraon, and now that he has been nearly cut to pieces in the service, the least the Governor-General can do is to present him with a pensionist paymaster's appointment. Major Prendergast, the senior officer in the force, is the favourite, but knowing people look very mysterious when Coke is spoken of, and the really good authorities hazard an opinion that Major Nicholson will succeed, both Brigadier Hodgson and Major Ross making the civil and military supervision of the whole country. If such be the case, it would do great good, and go far to quiet this frontier. Nicholson has shown himself an administrator of great ability by his management of the Bannoo district, once the most turbulent part of the Derajat, now as quiet and far more free from thieves than Calcutta. The Kohat Pass is open, and the Afreedees quiet for the time. Three towers are built on the Kotul, and garrisoned by friendly tribes. It is not yet decided where the Dera Ghazee Khan cantonments are to be built. The Brigadier recommends the spot near his own house, all other people wish the troops moved across a nullah that divides the force at present from the outposts. General Cortlandt has been granted furlough to England for one year, receiving 1,000*l.* during his absence. He is to return to an appointment in the Punjab. Pollock is expected to succeed to General Cortlandt's district. There will be plenty of work for him, as the people are migrating from the very severe taxes imposed by the general. An expedition against the Murrie tribes is talked of. Bruce's cavalry had a skirmish with some Murries near Asnee the other day. The robbers had several killed, and lost some of their horses. The relief is nearly completed, and shows the force is overworked,—"used up," as the brigadier says. We want some more men like poor FitzGerald in the force; energy is disappearing, love of money and ease fast approaching, and a decided desire to pooh-pooh all work, which is a sure hindrance to improvement."

The Murrees are still disposed to give some trouble in Upper Scinde. A letter from Shikarpore mentions that they meditated a descent upon the plains a few days since, and intended bringing with them the guns they took from Clibborn's detachment in 1846. Maj. Jacob was on the alert, and after them, but they preferred discretion, and did not attempt to leave the hills.

The Rajah of Nagpore died on the 11th ult., without an heir. The Rajah was without issue, and our Government, resolutely, to the last, refused to appoint an heir. Thus the beautiful valley of Berar reverts to the paramount power, and it is the most precious windfall that John Company has had for many a day. In size this territory is little inferior to the Punjab, while its revenue may be stated in round numbers at fifty lacs per annum, derived from a population exceeding four millions and a half.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

The journals of the presidency have been teeming for the past week with suggestions to prevent the deterioration of the medical service, apparently ensured by the recent addition to its ranks. One contemporary calls attention to the condition of the annuity fund, and recommends that the grievances of the service should be kept before the authorities by an agency at home. Another would abolish the medical board, and reduce the superintending surgeons to the rank of divisional commands, by compelling incumbents to vacate them after a five years' tenure. A third recommends the abolition of the grade of assistant, would foster ambition by reducing everything to a dull uniformity, and remove discontent by extinguishing alike hope and anticipation. The question is of importance to the public as well as the service, and though we utterly repudiate the idea, that the comfort and contentment of large bodies of public servants are below the attention of the organs of opinion, it is chiefly with reference to the interests of the community, that we intend to consider it.

It appears to us that the root of the whole evil, of the inefficiency of the Medical Board, and the age of the superintending surgeons, of the retirement of valuable members of the service, and the growing discontent of the entire body, is the difference between the promises and the practice of the Court of Directors, with respect to the age at which pensions are available. It is not a question of pecuniary emoluments. The day has gone by for increase to the salaries of any class of public servants; and even if it had not, the pay is still sufficient to attract able men, who find themselves unsuccessful amidst the fierce competition of English society. The pensions, if they were really within the reach of the members of the service, would compensate for every disadvantage, for the deficiency of prizes, for the injustice of the leave regulations, and even for the disparity between the upper and lower grades, the surgeons and the assistants. By the rules to which all assistant-surgeons look, when entering the service, they are entitled to 500*l.* a year after seventeen years of labour. At that period they are generally about forty-two, and they may enter the English arena in the prime of life, with the experience which must be acquired in India, even by the most inefficient, and preserved from that direct pecuniary pressure, which checks the career in England of the ablest members of the profession. The prospect is not unsatisfactory. It constitutes the only real inducement to enter the service, and it is apparently promised in the regulations which the fortunate candidate reads so often, to so little purpose. In reality it has no existence. The retiring allowance, like that of the civil service, is divided into two parts. The first, or 200*l.* a year, is strictly the pension, and may be claimed at any time after seventeen years' service. The second, or 300*l.*, is an annuity, purchased by the monthly contributions of the surgeons themselves, and claimable also after seventeen years' service. But by the regulations of the fund only six persons can claim the annuity in any one year, and the remainder must either be contented with a pension not sufficient for their support in the rank of gentlemen, or wait their turn, sometimes for years. What with the increasing average of Anglo-Indian life, and the consequent slowness of promotion in the higher grade, the attractions of the colonies, and the success of several Indian surgeons in Europe, there is a gradually increasing tendency to take this annuity as soon as possible. Every year there are more applicants than annuities, every year the balance "stands over," and thus the chance of those low upon the list is every year further removed by the long arrear of applicants above them. Practically, the pension after seventeen years is a delusion, useful only to tempt young men ignorant of the facts into the service. Till this is remedied, all other schemes for accelerating promotion are futile. To alter the tenure of the superintending surgeons—an excellent scheme in itself, and warranted by every military analogy—would only enable an assistant to become a surgeon after a shorter interval. It would not enable him to retire an hour sooner, and this is the object alike of the surgeon and the state. It is his object, because it was his hope when he entered the service, because it offers him the chance of securing in Europe the reputation and position he cannot hope for in India, and because, above all, it enables him personally to assist in settling his children in life. The surgeons, as a rule, marry earlier in their professional life than any other class, and it is after seventeen or eighteen years that they are most desirous of assisting the advancement of their children. This, in India, is impossible. Early retirement is also the object of the state, because it needs in this profession more than in any other, young and active men, who can share the fatigues of the army, who are interested in professional inquiry, and who are not chilled out of "heart and hope" by years of isolated expectation. It is impossible but that the most able and most ardent, residing for years at stations where communion with their brethren is an impossibility, where they can know nothing of medical progress except from books, and where they have no inducement to take one step beyond the routine of a hundred years, should be deteriorated. If a Madras surgeon, as seems possible, discovers a specific for the most loathsome of Oriental diseases, what will it profit him? He may obtain the formal commendation of his government, and the conscientious satisfaction of relieving misery, but the mass of mankind require stronger stimulants than either general orders or philanthropy. It is not for the advantage of the state that this hopelessness should exist, and it can be remedied only by the constant infusion of new blood, produced by rapid retirements.

The only practicable scheme for the attainment of this object is to enlarge the benefits of the Retiring Fund, and slightly to modify its constitution. It is intended, according to the Chronicle, to apply for two new annuities, and we believe the most experienced members of the service consider that one is certain to be conceded. We see no reason whatever for the limit. We do not profess to know what extension the Fund, rich as it is, can safely bear. That is a question for an actuary, and to an actuary we would submit it, and then grant just as many annuities as could safely be conceded. Moreover, we see not why another change should not be introduced. It may be possible—we make the suggestion with deference to the opinion of our contemporary of the Citizen—to allow surgeons who have paid the "half value" demanded, to retire at once, receiving the interest upon that sum, until their turn for the annuity came round. The Fund would lose the five per cent. for the period elapsing between the day on which they retire, and the period to which they would otherwise have remained, but the Fund is based on the hypothesis, that every man shall retire after seventeen years. It could scarcely, therefore, be seriously injured. We have recently had instances of men retiring with their pensions alone, weary of waiting for the annuity, and with this additional inducement, the number would be greatly enlarged. That such a concession would greatly increase the dead weight by increasing the number of pensions, we are well aware, but the Court of Directors promise a pension after seventeen years' service. This is the temptation they offer to secure the ablest men, and it is scarcely just to ward off, by a side blow, the fulfilment of the promise. That the objection would have any weight with the Directors themselves, we cannot for a moment believe.

There is one other objection to concession to which we should be reluctant to allude, but that we have frequently heard it started in society. It is said occasionally that the service has advantages quite equal to its deserts, that India does not and cannot secure the best medical skill, and that the price is good enough for the article furnished. The objection may be easily answered. In the first place, it is not true; for the presidency surgeons, who are not always the pick of the service, frequently achieve both success and reputation. They, alone amongst the profession, have an object and a career, and they prove themselves equal to achieve the one and fulfil the other. In the second place, if the objection had any truth whatever, it would furnish the strongest ground for a reform which would attract the able, and yield a new incentive to the mediocre.—Friend of India.

THE AFREEDIES AND THE MINIE RIFLE.

We have received accounts from the Punjab, which represent the recent foray against the Boree mountaineers, in terms somewhat different from those employed by the Lahore Chronicle. The conduct of the troops, however, was admirable, and we are not inclined to dilate on deficiencies of water, and even of powder, or to debate whether the villages were fired by British troops, or whether the savages themselves set fire to the collection of huts so called. We desire only to call attention once more to the evidence afforded by the skirmish, of the necessity for organizing the trained corps which we have styled the Indian chas-seurs. Throughout the conflict, the superiority of the enemy over the regular troops, both in physique and equipments, is said to have been conspicuous. When the mountain train commenced shelling the villages, they found themselves within range of the enemy's guns at 900 yards, and one of the European gunners was wounded in the neck at that distance. Against such weapons, the native infantry, armed with the regulation musket, the maximum range of which is 200 yards, must be as powerless as so many unarmed men. Ill adapted by habit, discipline, and even dress for mountain warfare, the inferiority of their weapons places them at a still more terrible disadvantage. The most daring courage will not stop a bullet, and in a charge, the mountaineers could pick them off at leisure, as the Chasseurs de Vincennes picked off men of equal valour in the siege of Rome. The Guides and Goorkhas, it is true, succeeded in defeating the mountaineers, but the Guides are picked men, and are armed with excellent rifles. The Goorkhas, besides being mountaineers by instinct and education, as familiar with crags as their adversaries, and accustomed to even rougher scenery, have received the Minie rifle. Their success on this occasion adds, if possible, to the reputation they have long since acquired, but it proves also the advantage derived from special training and superior equipments. It is time that the lesson of experience should not be thrown away, and that, as we must contend with these wild clans, we should meet them with resources superior to their own, as well as with the courage which those resources render almost unavailing. Even if the formation of a separate corps, such as we formerly suggested, is considered inexpedient, it is at least possible to arm the troops employed on this dangerous service with a weapon in which they can place some confidence. Five thousand Minie rifles, which would cost about twice as much as an equal number of muskets, would be as potent to keep these hereditary marauders in check, as an additional brigade of Irregulars.

Sir Charles Napier, we perceive, has pronounced a definite opinion against the Minie rifle. Even admitting all that is urged in its favour, he considers that it will tend to diminish the ancient courage of English soldiers, to restrain their impetuosity in the charge, and to reduce battles to protracted skirmishes, at distances from which the enemy can scarcely be perceived.

The opinion of Sir C. Napier upon the military question must always be treated with profound respect. Nevertheless, it appears questionable, whether the skill of the workman is ever diminished by the excellence of his tools. We do not find that the Chasseurs de Vincennes run away, because they can kill at a great distance, or that the Americans shrink from close combat, because their skill as marksmen enables them to mow down an advancing enemy. Nor, on the other hand, do we find the Afreedie becomes cowardly, because his weapon is twice as good as that which renders useless the courage of the sepoy. Even, however, allowing that Sir C. Napier's theory is well founded, he himself would scarcely have applied it to our frontier contests, to battles among the crags, where discipline is a hindrance, to partisan fights where individual skill and daring must carry the day, or to loose skirmishes where every individual life is of the last importance. The battles of the frontier are in their very nature exactly the "great skirmishes," which Sir C. Napier declares regular battles will become. The American backwoodsman, who is certainly not inferior to the sepoy in courage, under such circumstances would seek cover from which to fight, and though it would not be expedient to introduce that practice in Peshawur, it is scarcely necessary to leave the exposed sepoy without even a weapon. These contests may be continued for years. The empire must ultimately crush divided tribes, however numerous, or however brave. Meanwhile, we cannot consider it unadvisable to hasten victory while saving life, or to place our troops in equipment as well as every other essential, on an equality with their adversaries.—Friend of India.

SUPPRESSION OF FEMALE INFANTICIDE IN THE PUNJAB.

The Lahore Chronicle gives us the following account of a supplementary meeting which was held in furtherance of the measure taken for the prevention of female infanticide.

The six supplementary meeting to the great one at Umritsur, regarding the suppression of female infanticide in the Punjab, was held at Goojranwala on the 5th instant. A convenient spot, between the civil station and the town, was chosen by the Deputy Commissioner, which was inclosed by kunats, and at one end of this inclosure a large pavilion was formed by means of several tents being pitched together, where chairs were arranged for upwards of sixty of the sirdars and men of respectability and influence in the district. There were present the Panches of the towns of Wuzerabad, Goojranwala, Emeenabad, Akalghur, Ramnaghur, and Hafeezabad, together with the Lumberdars of the rural districts, and others to the number of about three thousand.

The proceedings of the meeting were opened by Major Clarke, the Deputy Commissioner, in an address, delivered in clear and impressive language, which was received with marked satisfaction by the assembled sirdars and people; after this Major Clarke read the Ekranamah, which had been agreed to at Umritsur; and, after some discussion and consultation with the leading men, the European gentlemen present (Major Clarke, Mr. R. Berkeley, Mr. Wakefield, Mr. L. Berkeley, and Lieut. McAndrew) retired, and left the natives to discuss the matter amongst themselves. On their return, they found that a set of rules had been drawn up, the substance of which was;—first and foremost, a "pledge" to use every exertion to put a stop to the inhuman practice of infanticide, and striking at the root of the evil, by regulating the expenses connected with marriages, &c. &c. This document was fully explained to the meeting by the Deputy Commissioner and Sirdar Mool Sing and others, met with the most cordial reception, and was unanimously signed by every man of consideration, also by the Panches and Lumberdars.

The arrangements made by the Deputy Commissioner for the accommodation of the meeting were the subject of universal approbation; and nothing could have been more gratifying to his feelings than the success which attended his exertions, and the hearty co-operation afforded him by the leading men of his district.

Capt. Lawrence, who was passing through on duty, kindly attended the meeting. The Deputy Commissioner entertained the people in the evening with a display of fireworks, and presented each sirdar, and man of respectability, with a dalee of fruit and flowers.

Large popular meetings of this description are a new feature in our Indian administration, and the reception which they have met with from the people of the Punjab, speaks volumes in favour of the beneficial effects of its administration; and no one who has been present at such meetings as that at Umritsur and Goojranwala, can for a moment doubt that the objects of humanity will be more effectually attained, and a more sure and speedy stop put to the crime of infanticide, than if a whole statute-book of penal acts and regulations had been promulgated on the subject.

THE INDIGO SEASON.

The uncertainty as to the turn of political affairs in Europe has created a great deal of caution among intending purchasers, and hence, though the season may be said to have opened for some weeks past, only one public sale has as yet taken place, at which 185 chests were sold at about last year's quotations. The sales which have been concluded by private contract, consist, from the beginning of the season up to this date, of the following lots:—

THE MARRIAGE ACT AS APPLIED TO NATIVES.

The danger of legislating for India in England has seldom been more forcibly illustrated than by the operation of a portion of the Dissenters' Marriage Act. That Act, intended partly to relieve European families from a danger to which they were exposed by a legal fiction, and partly to ease the consciences of those who objected to the formulas of the Established Church, was extended to native Christians. We are not aware at whose suggestion the clause was introduced, but it is certain that the Act contains a few words which render it applicable to that class. Those words, inserted doubtless with a view to benefit an important section of the Christian community, overturn the whole system of native Christian marriages, are opposed to prejudices which have become instinctive with hundreds of thousands, and if allowed to remain, may impair the very groundwork of morality. Since the passing of the Act, it has become impossible for the convert to marry until he is of age, except with the consent of parents, bitterly irritated by his departure from his hereditary faith. The difficulty will appear trifling to our English readers, but such a delay is radically opposed to all native ideas of social propriety, and calculated in no slight degree to lower the converts' estimation with those among whom they must for years continue to dwell. The difficulties which are inseparable from the condition of a society in which polygamy is allowed, are rendered more complicated than ever, and it has become impossible for a native Christian to obtain a divorce from an unfaithful wife, or to select another.

This latter point has been submitted by Mr. Parry, Baptist missionary at Jessore, to the Government of Bengal. The application, the reply, and the opinion of the advocate-general have alike been published by the Government. The last is the most important of the three. Mr. Prinsep is of opinion that no marriage registrar can grant a certificate to a native Christian for a second marriage, unless such Christian has procured a divorce by Christian, Mahomedan, or Hindoo law. By English law, such a decree cannot be obtained, for the process would cost sums which it is absolutely impossible for the majority of native Christians to expend. Neither can it be obtained by Hindoo law, for that system scarcely recognises the practice, and certainly provides no machinery for carrying it into effect. There remains the Mahomedan law, which in theory and practice is sufficiently lax; but it applies only to Mahomedans, and very few converts are received from among the professors of that faith. Practically, therefore, the privilege of divorce is abolished by the Marriage Act. Hitherto the grievance has not been very severely felt. The native Christians, ignored by the law, took refuge in the Gospel, and the minister and congregation pronounced a divorce according to the teaching of St. Paul. This practice is now prohibited under penalties, and a distressing complication of difficulties has consequently arisen.

The Government of India has referred the whole question to the Home authorities, "with the view of obtaining their co-operation for the amendment of the existing law on that subject, through the Imperial Parliament, as respects native converts to Christianity, and Christians in India generally." We sincerely hope the Imperial Parliament will not attempt to legislate upon the question. Any law which might be introduced, drawn up, as it would be, by men accustomed to the technical forms of a system utterly inapplicable to India, would be sure to become oppressive. No native Christian holds, or is likely to hold, any property in Europe, and the interference of Parliament in this respect is totally unnecessary. On the other hand, the Indian Government, familiar with all the circumstances, is familiar also with the machinery employed to meet a difficulty almost analogous. All that is required of Parliament is a repeal of the clauses which affect native Christians, and a short Act, enabling the local legislature to enforce any arrangement it may consider expedient. The difficulty may then be overcome in an hour, by placing the native Christians on an equality with Mahomedans. It is only necessary to invest the missionary or pastor with the power possessed by the cazee, and to give his signature an equal validity as evidence in courts of justice, and all this confusion will instantly disappear. The cazee relies on the Koran, the missionary will rely upon the Gospel, and the system of the better creed will at once acquire the authority already conferred upon the system of the worse. The same precautions may readily be adopted to prevent abuse; and we presume it will be allowed that the missionary is as competent to exercise such power as the Mahomedan. As for the question "Who is a missionary?" it has been determined by Government in granting the appointments of marriage registrar.—Friend of India.

THE LONDON MAIL of Nov. 24th reached Madras Dec. 31 (per Bombay), and left Jan. 1, arriving at Calcutta on the 5th ult. The Bengal left Aden Jan. 12th en route for Ceylon, Madras, and Calcutta, with the subsequent English mail of Jan. 8th.

SCENE IN A CUTCERRY.—A curious scene took place a few days ago in the moonsiff's cutcherry at Pertabpore, in the district of Midnapore. While the peshkar was reading some papers to the moonsiff, that functionary found fault with him for the manner of his reading, and began to scold him. The peshkar, who it seems is a man of rough metal, could not brook the treatment, so he commenced abusing his superior officer. Upon this the native judge threw a book at his subordinate, who ran for a ruler, and having got possession of one, returned upon his assailant, and gave him two or three severe blows with it. The scuffle would have become more serious, had not the other amlah interfered and separated the combatants.

LIEUT. P. STEWART.—We are glad to have it in our power to report that Mr. Stewart is quite recovered from the wounds he received from the Suhteeghur tiger. He is now in Benares, and we had the pleasure of half an hour's walk with him a few evenings ago, his leg doing its duty stoutly, so that if he "suddenly expires" now, we shall attribute it to some other cause and not the tiger. We have been informed that the tiger has proved to have come off second best of two in the fight. His remains have been brought in to Chunar, by persons sent out to search; they were found in a cave, and his mate had to be driven away from the cave before the trophy could be secured—this was done by the fellows mounting trees about the cave, and howling and screeching till the tigress went off in disgust; they then descended and got all that remained of the brute. Chapman's bullet did its work, but not clean.—Benares Recorder, Dec. 24.

THE RAILWAY.—There is a rumour that the railway will be opened by Lord Dalhousie on the Queen's birth-day, by which time it is believed that the locomotives will have arrived from England.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPHS.—The superintendent of electric telegraphs leaves Calcutta this day (January 2), for the purpose of proceeding to the Upper Provinces to inspect and direct the construction of the telegraphic lines. It is hoped that at next Christmas the line between Calcutta and Bombay via Agra will be complete for the transmission of messages. Thus, as far as overland communication is concerned, we shall, before 1854 closes, be brought eight days nearer the mother country.

THE DEPUTY-COMMISSARY GENERAL.—We reported a few days ago that the deputy-commissary general, Major Thompson, had returned to Calcutta from his tour of inspection, and we now understand that he will proceed in about ten days on similar duty to Dacca. There seems to be a determination on the part of the commissary general to render the department most perfect.—Hurkaru, Dec. 19.

BENGAL COAL COMPANY.—A dividend at the rate of Co.'s Rs. 100 per share in the company has been declared.

REMOVAL OF THE NIZAMUT FROM MOORSHEDEBAD TO DUM DUM.—In consequence of the atrocities committed by the dependants of the Nawab Nazim of Moorshebad on the two natives who were beaten to death in his Highness's camp and the trial resulting therefrom, the Government has recommended to the Court of Directors the removal of the Nizamut from Moorshebad to Dum Dum; as it is believed that the contiguity of the Nawab's residence to the seat of the Government at the Presidency would check the lawless propensities of his dependants, and prevent their committing mischief.—Hurkaru, Dec. 21.

THE BENGAL DACOTIES.—We are informed on good authority that the dacoit of Baltra, in the district of Howrah, who was an assistant writer in the Military Board's Office, and to whom we have had occasion to advert more than once, having been convicted of the crime charged against him, has been sentenced by Mr. J. H. Patton, the Officiating Sessions Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs, to two years' imprisonment with hard labour in irons, and his two associates to seven and fourteen years' incarceration with hard labour in irons, the punishment to be carried out in several zillahs.—Hurkaru, Dec. 24.

CIVIL SERVICE CHANGES.—We informed our readers some time ago that Mr. Torrens had been appointed to a commissioner-ship, that Mr. Samuells was to succeed him as judge of the 24-Pergunnahs, and that Mr. Fergusson was to succeed Mr. Samuells. But it appeared that this arrangement had been made without the consent of the chief party. Mr. Torrens declined the honour which it was proposed to confer on him, and the juniors necessarily remained as they were. More recently we announced that Mr. Elliott was to be commissioner of Moorshebad, that Mr. Samuells was to be the new chief magistrate, and that Mr. Fergusson was as before to succeed that gentleman. We certainly thought that on this occasion there could be no mistake, as we knew that Messrs. Elliott and Samuells had actually accepted the appointments which we mentioned. It seems, however, that the farce of 'you don't sleep here to night,' is to be enacted again for Mr. Fergusson's benefit. Mr. Elliott, we are informed, has 'ta'en the rue,' as our Northern friends would express it. He is unwilling to forsake the pomps and vanities of this wicked city, and the Government have indulgently allowed him to reconsider their offer. Mr. Samuells is disgusted at being made to play the part of a shuttlecock to Messrs. Torrens and Elliott's battledores, and has withdrawn to the shades of Allipore, where he muses on the vanity of human wishes, while poor Mr. Fergusson is probably at this moment in blissful ignorance of the little cloud which has arisen to darken his prospects.

We know not whether Messrs. Samuells and Fergusson are the authors of any rejected addresses with reference to this matter; but it is clear that they are the victims of rejected proposals. We shall be curious to see how this imbroglia terminates.—Hurkaru.

H.M.'s 18th ROYAL IRISH.—A special steamer went up to Chinsurah to bring down the draft of H.M.'s 18th Royal Irish, which, together with the head-quarters of the regiment, are to proceed in the Southampton. The men will embark direct from the steamer, without landing at Calcutta, and the ship will drop down to Garden Reach this afternoon. All and each of them have our best wishes for a quick, pleasant, and prosperous voyage. —Hurkaru, Dec. 27.

THE GOLD FIELDS OF ASSAM.—The last number of the Journal of the Asiatic Society contains a paper by Major Hannay upon the gold fields of Assam. The writer says that the geological features of the country resemble those of the countries in which gold is most abundant. He believes that the revenue raised in former years from the gold washings by the Government of Assam, cannot have been less than £10,000 a year. The Government should invite Mr. Hargreaves, the Australian explorer. That gentleman is discontented with the reward offered him by the Government of New South Wales, and would perhaps be willing to exert his talents in a wider sphere. —Friend of India.

THE LATE MR. THOMASON.—The Agra Messenger extracts from a minute recently penned by Lord Dalhousie, the following tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Thomason. "The sanction, which the Lieutenant-Governor in these words solicited," continues the Governor-General, "for an increase of the means which experience has shown to be capable of producing such rich and early fruit, I now most gladly and gratefully propose; and while I cannot refrain from recording anew in this place my deep regret that the ear, which would have heard this welcome sanction given with so much joy, is now dumb in death, I desire at the same time to add the expression of my feeling that even though Mr. Thomason has left no other monument of his public life behind him, this system of general vernacular education, which is all his own, would have sufficed to build up for him a noble and ever abiding monument of his earthly career."

PILOTAGE.—The Governor-General, with the concurrence of the marine authorities, has directed that an addition should be made to the marine code. For the future, no pilot will be allowed to refuse charge of a ship, however great may be her danger, so long as the captain and crew remain on board. With their departure his responsibility will cease. The extreme cases therefore of a pilot being required to take charge of a ship on fire, or sinking, are therefore not likely to occur.

MR. BRANCH PILOT STOUT.—The result of the trial of Mr. Branch Pilot Stout is published in the Gazette. He has been sentenced to the loss of two months' pay, being equivalent to a fine of Rs. 1,400.

ACCIDENT TO SIR H. LAWRENCE.—We regret to learn from the Lahore Chronicle that Sir Henry Lawrence has met with a serious accident. In trying to catch a runaway horse, his collar bone was broken, and besides other injuries he is said to have sustained bruises on the chest, and a cut in the face.

THE RED ROVER.—The Penang Gazette mentions a vessel, supposed to be the Red Rover, to be on shore bottom upwards at Silut.

MR. H. B. BERSFORD, of the civil service, has applied for permission to retire from the service.

MILITARY ON-DUTY.—The Agra Messenger reports that new barracks for Europeans are to be erected at that station.—The Delhi Gazette states that the command of the 3rd Europeans has been offered to Colonel Halford, at present in command of the 4th N.I.—The Morning Chronicle reports the officers of the 54th regt. N.I., having agreed to purchase out Major Boscawen with a bonus of Rs. 30,000. The gallant major will retire in May next, on the full pension of a colonel.—The Agra Messenger says that the system of regimental paymasters is to be introduced into the native army. The salary is to be fixed at Rs. 100 per month, and is to be defrayed out of the withdrawal of the sum of Rs. 10 monthly allowed to officers commanding companies for stationery. The 14th regt. N.I., reached Delhi on the 15th Dec., the men being in excellent health.—The last detachment of H.M.'s 81st regt. leaves on the 28th Dec. by steamers from Allahabad.—H.M.'s 96 regt. arrived in Delhi on the morning of the 29th Dec. The 96th will be at Allyghur about the 8th Jan. 1854, Cawnpore the 25th, Allahabad the 8th February, and Dinapore the 13th to 15th.—The 1st and 2nd troops 1st brigade of horse artillery arrived at Rawul Pindee on the 23rd Dec., and halted the 24th and 25th, the public cattle requiring to be changed; the depot and three companies of H.M.'s 32nd, under Major Case, proceeding to Dugshie, and the 62nd N.I. proceeding to Peshawar, arrive on the 24th, and H.M.'s 75th regt., proceeding also to Peshawar on the 25th, all were encamped to the south of the town, out of cantonments, while carriage was collecting.—The 4th irregular cavalry left Jhansi on the 27th, en route to Hansie. They will be at Oorein on the 2nd of January, Calpee the 4th, Oorea 7th, Stawat 10th, Allyghur the 19th and 20th.—

The 34th N.I., en route to Lucknow, under command of Major R. Angelo, left Ferozepore on the 28th Dec. They expect to be at Kurnaul on the 12th of January, 1854, and at Delhi by the 20th.—The 47th N.I. arrived at Dinapore on the 17th Dec., and left next day. The invalids of the season left Dinapore on the 20th.—The 8th irregular cavalry marched out of Allyghur on the 23rd Dec., and expect to be at Cawnpore on the 8th Jan. 1854.—The 24th N.I. leave Goruckpore the first week of February, 1854.—The 14th regiment irregular cavalry arrived at Huttee on the 23rd Dec., and resume their march for the right bank of the Indus on the 24th.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

UNDATED LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Dec. 24th, 1853.—The honourable the Deputy-Governor of Bengal has been pleased to direct, that the following rule be in future observed by all classes of public servants, who may obtain leave of absence from the Government:—

When leave of absence, whether on medical certificate or otherwise, has been granted without specification of the date from which it is to have effect, if it be not taken within one month after the date of the Government order granting the leave, it may not be taken without a fresh order of Government.

By order of the hon. the Deputy-Governor of Bengal,
CECIL BEADON,
Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS COTTON MILL.

Some six years spent in diligent observation of the industrial position of India, has made us extremely chary of advising the application of European machinery to native manufactures. We have practically tested the use of contrivances for abridging labour, which at home are eminently successful, and found them to fail entirely in this country. In numerous instances it can be shown, that articles of great value for which Madras depends entirely on England, are made up from the raw material originally exported by the former, but the advantages naturally on the side of the East, are in one case neutralized by the want of large capital, in another by the absence of refined and various skill, in a third by the difficulties in the way of keeping very complex machinery in working order, and in a fourth, by the want of proper communications, which by ensuring a sufficient supply of the material to be operated upon, can alone enable manufacturers to carry on an extensive business. In the department of pottery, for example, there appears no reason to suppose that a competent person could possibly fail of success, in essaying to supply the wants of India by establishing works in the country itself, where every article that enters into the composition of porcelain and chinaware is to be had in exhaustless abundance. The native workman is quick to learn, and dexterous in all the arts of manipulation, and there is an enormous difference in the wages of Staffordshire and Madras. Where then does the cause of certain defeat lie? We answer, in the command of capital, coals, and hereditary skill enjoyed by the manufacturer at home, which enables him to pay for the transport of materials that here lie upon the surface of the soil; to give to one man the wages which suffice to pay four persons in Madras, and after defraying the charges of merchants and agents, to send out his goods to a market ten thousand miles away and there beat down all competition. The secret of knowing what amongst the vast crowd of European inventions will really pay for transplanting, is, perhaps of all kinds of knowledge, the very hardest to acquire. Men sometimes learn it at the close of a baffled career, but more frequently like the deer that is stricken by the unseen sportsman, they lie down and die, without knowing the cause to which they owe the fate that has overthrown them.

We will take another illustration from the social economy of the East. The value of the oil-seeds produced in this country is enormously great, and numerous establishments are maintained in Europe for the sole purpose of crushing them. The worth of the marc, as the cake is called after all the oil has been expressed, bears in no case more than a trifling proportion to the cost of freight; in the instance of some kinds of seeds, it is quite useless for any purpose whatever. Now, looking at the fact that, on the average, scarce 30 per cent. of oil is obtained by the crusher, it seems little less than madness to pay freight and charges on the remaining 70 per cent., when it is so easy to extract the oil on the spot where the seed grows. On the whole range of oleaginous products, perhaps, the ship-owners' and merchants' charges amount to one-half the gross value obtained in the market, and yet we find that in 1850-51 no less than 2,000 tons of seeds were exported from Madras, the loss upon which, according to the above estimate, was certainly not less than Rs. 50,000. How does it happen, then, that in spite of the eager desire to obtain speedy fortunes which all traders feel, we persist in ignoring the value of cheap labour, a bright sun, and European machinery to such an extent? The reply is, that experience has proved the unprofitable results of scientific processes. Able and persevering men have tested the matter, and found the native methods of working—slow, petty, and cumbrous as they are—to be by far the cheapest mode of production. The details are very trifling, but aggregate is large. The coral insect builds a continent, whilst great engineers, backed by the resources of nations, glory in the formation of a breakwater. Civilization needs the aid of growths of various kinds, and we are just now engaged in the task of planting them in the East. When the Cottons, Rev. Andersons, and others who might be named, have ceased from their occupations on this side of the illimitable, it may be worth while to report progress.

But there is at least one branch of industrial pursuit to which machinery may be applied, even more successfully in Madras than in Manchester, and it is less curious that it should be the very oldest form of human labour, than that the work of improving it should overleap at a single bound the gulf of fifty centuries. In bringing forward a plan, long and slowly matured, for the introduction of the cotton manufacture after the European method, we propose to supersede the first invention by the latest, and pass at once from the rudest to the most refined efforts of human ingenuity. For thousands of years we have borrowed and stolen from India, but here will be an example of paying back, that will go far to annihilate the debt.

When the Bible, Education, Railways, Electric Telegraphs, Power Looms, and the Press, are duly entered on the credit side of the account, we expect that a large balance in favour of England will be acknowledged by the auditors of the next generation.

There was an attempt made we believe in Calcutta, about twenty-five years since, to establish spinning-mills, which failed, but that was before the introduction of the self-acting mule, which almost does away with the need of employing skilled workmen in the manufacture of thread. A few days training now suffices to teach men, women, and children, how to attend to the wants of the iron labourer, whose fingers never tire, and seldom go wrong; but if any warranty of success is needed for the present project, it is furnished in the experience of the Pondicherry cotton mill, which in a very short time repaid, in the shape of profits, the whole of the capital expended upon it, and now yields a minimum dividend of 15 per cent. In comparison with the Government rate of interest, this must be looked upon as a very satisfactory kind of return for an investment that is perfectly safe. If shares in the Bank of Madras, which give 4 per cent., are worth from 20 to 25 per cent. premium, we know not at what rate a discerning public will be content to purchase an interest in the former Madras cotton-mill.

In our next, we propose to discuss the comparative facilities which exist in England and Southern India for carrying on the manufacture of cotton on a large scale. The question of capital is excluded from consideration, because a joint-stock company can easily raise as much money as will be required to erect a single factory, and it will be time enough to think of extending the manufacture so as to supersede the necessity of importing any twist whatever from home, when the first enterprise has completely succeeded. For the present we will content ourselves with saying, that every item of cost in erecting and working a mill has been carefully considered, and that men of substance and reputation are prepared to carry out the undertaking.—Athenæum, Dec. 27.

NAGPORE.

By the death of the Rajah of Nagpore without heirs, either natural or adopted, that magnificent territory has lapsed to the British Government. With an area of 76,423 square miles—half as large again as England—with a revenue of nearly fifty lakhs of rupees, and with a population exceeding four millions and a half, it pays a subsidy to the British Government of eight lakhs, and maintains a military force of 372 artillery, 2,424 cavalry, and 4,163 infantry, besides a police force of 2,274 men. On this military array, and on the senseless pageantry of an eastern court, most of the revenue of the state has heretofore been wasted. The country possesses great resources, is inhabited by a race of quiet cultivators, and might become the principal state of central India. But native rule or misrule (placante Mr. Lewin) is not favourable to the development of any country's material wealth, or to the prosperity of any class of people. What Nagpore has been, is probably just the reverse of what it will be under the British Government.

It is said to be possible that the Government of India, indifferent alike to its own interests, and to its responsibility before God and man, intends to recreate this state, to appoint a new native ruler, and hand over 4,000,000 of its own subjects to the mercies of a native kingling. We cannot believe it. Even Mr. Cobden will in this instance scarcely deny the justice of annexation. We have gained the territory by no war, by no intrigue, by no conspiracy; we enter as heirs by treaty, and by the fundamental law of India. The opportunity is afforded us of bestowing on a fine country a just government; of relieving its finances from the pressure of a needless standing army, and a worse than useless native court; of imparting to the executive the vigour of Anglo-Saxon energy; and of transforming the whole land, as we have transformed the Punjab, into a country where progress is retarded only by the laziness of prosperity. This is not the time for wasting such an opportunity. We know too much of native states. The example of Cashmere is understood. Most of our readers have heard rumours of strange proceedings there, and they need go no farther for confirmation than the pages of a very impartial authority,—the last number of the journal of the Agricultural Society. There they may learn how a native state is governed by an able ruler, how trade is oppressed, and agriculture crippled, and how the mountain passes are guarded to prevent the people seeking refuge in our territories; and if that be not enough as an indication of the truth as to native states, we may refer the reader to the recent evidence of the late Mr. R. M. Bird before the House of Commons, and point to his graphic account of what he saw on the frontier of Oudh, and his subsequent significant conversation with Lord W. Bentinck.

It may be argued that we do enough if we re-establish native government, retaining a resident to control it. But the control is, from the nature of the case, only partial. All the details of government are unchecked. The revenue is collected, and justice is administered, for the most part anyhow. Or the resident may become, under the provisions of the treaty, the instrument, willingly or unwillingly, of wrong. When the first inquirer went to the Nagpore missionaries, the rajah demanded his restoration as "a discontented subject," obtained it through the resident, and imprisoned him. That is not a fact to be forgotten, even if Capt. Ramsay were right in his construction of the treaty. It showed at least the animus of the Native Court. It is the same in Oudh. The wretched system there prevailing, could not have lasted an hour, but for the presence of the British resident, whose power shields the corrupt administration which it is ineffectual to reform. In surrendering Nagpore, the Indian Government will sacrifice the interests of the empire, ignore a grave responsibility, and stultify Lord Dalhousie's declaration, that we should seize every honourable opportunity of increasing our territory.

The case of Nagpore is plain. The path of duty is clear even to the perception of the Manchester School; they want cotton from Berar, and will rejoice to see the revenues of the state applied to its improvement. Even Mr. Lewin can make no grievance out of this case. Our railroad, at any rate, must penetrate the state, but British justice and British enterprise ought to go along with it. The responsibility now rests on the British Government of doing for Nagpore, what it has done for the Punjab, and that responsibility will not be discharged by laissez faire.—Friend of India.

THE BEYPOOR IRON-WORKS.—We are happy to perceive from the Madras Athenæum that the Beypoor iron-works are at last in successful operation. An engineer from England "has got the Beypoor furnace into blast," and it is expected that the experiment will be successful. The iron-works at Porto Novo have recently turned out some large castings for the Bengal Railway. Both these establishments are now in the hands of a new company, with fresh capital, fresh means, and, above all, fresh energy.

REPLY TO THE REPORT ON PUBLIC WORKS.—The Madras Spectator mentions, that the governor and members of council of that presidency have completed their reply to the recent report by the Commissioners of Inquiry into Public Works. It has been printed, but has not as yet crept into circulation. The only journalist who has seen it considers it successful.

CAPTAIN BIDEN, master-attendant of Madras, and an indefatigable correspondent of the local journals, has been appointed sheriff of Madras.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH will, it is expected, be opened between Madras and Bangalore during February next, an example of marvellous celerity, which will astonish Sir Henry Pottinger and the public. Much difficulty has been experienced in obtaining timber at a reasonable rate and suitable for the posts that sustain the wire, the cost of bamboos being five or six times greater in Madras as compared with Bengal. It has been wisely determined to set up the lightning messenger with the utmost possible speed, leaving the machinery to be improved afterwards, and the authorities will, it is said, allow the public the use of the line at a very trifling rate of charge.

MADRAS CONTINGENT.—The orders for pensioning the local officers of the contingent have at last been received at Hyderabad. The pension is on a liberal scale, and a donation will in addition be made to the pensioned officers of six months' pay and allowances. As the measure was unavoidable, it has excited general satisfaction to find that it has been carried out in so liberal a spirit.

DEPARTURE OF SIR R. ARMSTRONG.—On the 29th Dec. our late Commander-in-Chief, Sir Richard Armstrong, left our shores for his native country in the Barham. His departure was unaccompanied by any formal display, the old soldier being merely accompanied to the place of embarkation by the general staff and his personal friends. He was conveyed on board the vessel in the invalid chair, a painful exhibition of the wreck of a strong and gallant soldier, and the contempt of the public interests in the appointment of one so far past the time of exertion to the command of a large army.

SCARCITY OF GRAIN.—Tidings of the now present scarcity of grain begin to flow in painful abundance, and we deeply regret to learn that in one district, that of Nellore, distress has led, as usual, to turbulent conduct. They are still without any signs of rain there, and great distress is already beginning to be felt. Three or four days ago a large mob of the lower classes assembled, and looted all the grain stores in that place. This occurred in the middle of the day, and before the authorities could give assistance, large quantities of grain were carried away. Everything is quiet now, and the grain merchants have been induced to open their stores, and sell at very considerably reduced prices; but they are evidently acting under fear, and no doubt will soon close their stores again. We are very much afraid that the extraordinary success of this mob in the chief town of the district, and we may almost say in the presence of the collector and his subordinates, will have the effect of encouraging similar depredations throughout the district, and render property unsafe.—Spectator.

MILITARY ON DITS.—A military correspondent of the Bombay Telegraph and Courier says, it is intended to station two regiments of European dragoons at Hyderabad in the Deccan.—The Spectator states, that on the departure of the company of European artillery from Trichinopoly, the southern and Mysore divisions of the army will be left with only forty European artillerymen; and we learn that there is not at present at artillery headquarters a single company of artillery available to carry out any reliefs or reinforcements that may be ordered. Such a state of things ought forcibly to remind the Governor-General of the necessity of recommending to the home authorities the absolute necessity of speedily granting another battalion of artillery, as anything short of this increase is unlikely to benefit the coast artillery.—It is said that H. M.'s 43rd regiment will be stationed when the whole have arrived, one wing at Fort St. George, and the other at Bangalore. H. M.'s 74th will be quartered at Trichinopoly.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

RE-APPOINTMENT OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL STEEL ON THE GENERAL STAFF IN BURMAH.

Fort St. George, January 6th, 1854.—The following extracts from letters from the Hon. the Court of Directors in the Military Department, dated Nov. 16th, 1853, Nos. 78 and 79, are published for the information of the army.

Letter dated November 16th, 1853, No. 78.

Reply to Letter dated September 23rd, 1853, No. 119.

Forward an application from Brig.-Gen. S. W. Steel, C.B., commanding Madras division of the army of Burmah, whose tour on the staff will expire on the 15th January, 1854, soliciting that the time may, under the circumstances of the case, be extended for such further time as the Court may be pleased to grant. Government recommend the application for most favourable consideration, and pending the reply have permitted Brig.-Gen. Steel to be continued on the staff.

In consideration of the services of Brig.-Gen. Steel, C.B., during the late operations in Burmah, and of the advantage which the public service cannot fail to derive from his prolonged continuance on the divisional staff, in compliance also with the recommendation of your Government, and of the Com.-in-Ch. in his favour, we have resolved to re-appoint him to the general staff for one year from the 15th January next.

LORD FALKLAND'S ADMINISTRATION.

As the time has now arrived when Lord Falkland is about to quit the shores of India for his native land, we take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded us of redeeming the promise we some time ago made to our readers, to briefly review the principal incidents of his lordship's administration of the government of Bombay during the five years and nine months that he has held the reins of office. Lord Falkland took his seat as governor of Bombay and president in council on the 1st May, 1848, having succeeded Sir George Russell Clerk, one of the most popular and highly talented men that has held the office of governor here since the departure of the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone in November, 1827. It cannot be said of Lord Falkland's administration, as it was of Sir George Clerk's, that it "occurred at a period of public tranquillity such as left no room for the exercise of any particular amount of gubernatorial talent." His lordship landed in Bombay just a fortnight after the murder of Messrs. Agnew and Anderson at Mooltan, which led to the sanguinary campaign in the Punjab in 1848-49, resulting in the annexation of the whole country of the five rivers. It will of course be in the recollection of our readers, that a large body of Bombay troops was sent up to the scene of war under the command of Colonel Dundas (now Lord Melville), where they covered themselves with glory; and an extensive steam flotilla was then, for the first time, organised on the river Indus. We have had frequent occasion to hear official men speak in high terms of praise of the promptitude with which Lord Falkland always acted when any naval or military operations were going on:—at such times he was ever vigilant, and supported to the uttermost all those under him who were engaged in the public service. Under his able rule, the movement of troops, ordnance, and other stores through Scinde and up the Indus, were facilitated in every possible way, and on several occasions the rapidity with which these operations were conducted, and stores and ammunition supplied to the investing army before Mooltan, were so remarkable, as to call forth the hearty thanks of the Governor-General, who subsequently paid a visit to Bombay, the principal object of which was to thank his lordship in person, which he did publicly, for the valuable assistance he had received—at a time of extreme danger to the British power in India—from his government. Again, at a later period, the celerity with which the equipment and despatch of steam vessels for Burmah took place, elicited the warm commendations of the Governor-General, and contrasted well with the dilatoriness exhibited at Madras, which called forth a severe reprimand from the Marquis of Dalhousie. Although it has been the fashion of late years to abuse the Governor for remaining absent from Bombay, we can refer without fear of contradiction, to the great expedition used by Lord Falkland in joining his council at a few hours' notice from Dapourie and Mahabuleswar, when he considered his presence at the Presidency necessary. A remarkable instance of this was noticed in 1850, when his lordship posted down from Dapourie to arrange with his council for the conduct of the naval and military operations which it was then supposed would be required to be carried on against certain refractory chiefs in the neighbourhood of Aden. And again, in 1851, his lordship dawdled down from Mahabuleswar to Bombay, without making the slightest previous arrangement for his comfort or reception, when he thought his presence was urgently required.

But it is not only as regards his energy and activity in fitting out armaments for the field that Lord Falkland deserves the thanks and the praise of the community. He has sedulously cultivated the arts of peace. We write on sure grounds when we assert, that more money has been expended during his lordship's administration, on public works having for their object the benefit of the people, than was spent during a like period under any former Governor. The officers employed on these works have, since his lordship assumed the Government, felt that their labours would not, as formerly, terminate in merely making plans, and framing estimates, to lie over for future "consideration," or to be rejected in consequence of financial pressure. Amongst other works of importance we may mention the new Bunder at Oolwa, called the "Falkland" Bunder, which has been finished within the last twelve months. A steam ferry between Bombay and this Bunder has also been established under his lordship's auspices, which has been the cause of greatly accelerating the transmission of the mails to Poona. Added to this, we must not omit to mention that horse-draws have been substituted for foot-runners on several of the principal lines of road.

One of the most important features in Lord Falkland's administration is, the complete and thorough reorganization of the Mofussil police, which has been removed from the control of the Sudder Adawlut, and a separate department formed. This subject had attracted much of Sir George Clerk's attention, who was anxious to introduce many important reforms into this branch of the administration, but who was uniformly opposed to everything he desired to introduce for the benefit of this country by his civil colleagues then in the council, which rendered all his efforts in this behalf quite fruitless. The chief, if not the entire, merit of introducing the large reforms so much required in this most important department is, therefore, due to Lord Falkland, whose system of police administration differs somewhat from that laid down by his predecessor.

Since his lordship has been at the head of the Government, he has totally uprooted the absurd system of promotion by mere seniority. This is now quite set aside; and unless a man could show meritorious services, he would stand but a poor chance of obtaining preferment at Lord Falkland's hands. In proof of our assertion, we would point especially to Mr. H. B. Frere's appointment to the office of commissioner in Sindh, which was opposed all entrance by the whole Milvill clique; to Mr. Courtenay's appointment as revenue commissioner, who thus superseded some twenty or so of his peers;—to Mr. J. Erskine's recent appointment to the secretariate;—every one of which appointments does the highest credit to the judgment and foresight of Lord Falkland. More able men than these three are not in the whole civil service, out of council, unless perhaps we may except Messrs. Goldsmid, William Frere, and LeGeyt, all of whom have great experience in their respective departments, and bear the very highest characters for ability and integrity. Indeed, all those we have named are men that any Government in the world might be proud to number amongst its servants.

Amongst other important matters that have been settled during the administration of Lord Falkland, is the complete organization of the Inam commission, and the legalization of its proceedings by the passing of Act XI. of 1852. It is true that the merit of this organization is chiefly due to Messrs. Goldsmid and Hart, but it is also due to his lordship to say that he took an active interest in the matter, and urged upon the Supreme Government the necessity for legislating on the subject without delay.

The revenue survey, first introduced under the benevolent rule of the late lamented Sir Robert Grant, has been extended to Guzerat, the Concan, and to Khandeish, by Lord Falkland; and so far from his lordship having availed himself, as he might have done without question, for patronage purposes, of the many valuable appointments which fell to his gift in the formation of the new departments, it is a fact that cannot be controverted, and one that in our opinion redounds greatly to his lordship's honour, and to his sense of right and justice, that he has not appointed either to the Inam commission, or to the revenue survey, a single officer who has not been selected either by Mr. Hart, the Inam commissioner, Captain Wingate, the revenue survey commissioner, or Mr. Goldsmid, the revenue secretary to Government; and then only after he had fully satisfied himself of the merits of the nominees.

The natives, too, have largely benefitted by his lordship's liberal views respecting them. It is to Lord Falkland that the entire merit is due of having procured an Act of the Legislative Council of India to be passed, under which the same powers and authority are conferred upon natives as are enjoyed by members of the covenanted civil service. We refer to the creation of the office of deputy-collector and magistrate, which took place early in 1852. On this occasion also, his lordship waived his right to exercise his patronage in making these appointments. It is perfectly well known that every one of these offices,—numbering some forty-eight, if we remember rightly, —was filled on the nomination of Mr. Goldsmid, the revenue secretary, from the lists of candidates sent up to Government by the several collectors through the revenue commissioners. We defy contradiction when we assert that no appointments ever gave more general satisfaction to the people of the country than those we have mentioned, in the magisterial, Inam commissioner's, and survey departments. The genius of Khutput was then set at defiance, and sent away howling to more congenial haunts.

Indeed, the uncovenanted service of Bombay, both European and native, has benefited more by Lord Falkland's administration than by that of any previous one, and the members of it will be looked upon as the most ungrateful set of men in India if they do not take some early opportunity of testifying their gratitude for the favours he has showered upon them. We will notice some of the most prominent men amongst them:—For instance, there is Mr. F. Hutchinson, appointed Collector of Bombay, on a salary of a thousand rupees a month. This highly-respected citizen is the first uncovenanted servant that ever held that office, it having hitherto belonged, as of right, to the covenanted service of the East-India Company. Then we have Mr. Charles Forjatt appointed superintendent of police at Belgaum: a most able officer as all will allow. Mr. A. W. Clarke, too, has been several times acting deputy civil auditor, and is fully equal to the task of performing the duties efficiently of the civil auditor himself. Next we have Mr. A. Stewart,—one of the keenest sportsmen, more efficient of public servants and hospitable of entertainers, in Guzerat—filling for some time the post of acting collector of continental customs and excise, and carrying on disputations with Mr. R. Spooner and the revenue commissioner N. D., and other magnates, all about salt and other condiments. Mr. Francis Leggett,—the oldest European inhabitant of Bombay, and one of the most respected as well as the blandest of presidency officials,—next attracts our special notice. This very worthy, good man, has a second time been appointed by Lord Falkland Sheriff of Bombay, entirely on the score of merit, and that alone. Last, though not by any means the least—at all events in his own estimation—comes our friend Mr. Manaoockjee Cursetjee, who has been so unexpectedly appointed a judge—the very height of his ambition!

Added to these make-weights in his lordship's favour, we may remark here, that all the principal appointments in the Bombay Custom House have been conferred, since he has carried on the Government, on men who have risen in the department from subordinate offices, instead of being, as formerly was the case with other governors, made patronage appointments. It should be kept in view, when speaking of Lord Falkland's merits as a non-patronage governor, that he must frequently have given cause of deep offence to numerous influential persons by distributing so many important appointments in the manner we have stated, instead of serving men who have powerful introductions, and whose interests his lordship must, for many reasons, have been most anxious to promote.

The fiscal management of the country has occupied a large share of Lord Falkland's attention, and he has caused a great number of reforms to be introduced having the amelioration of the ryots in view. In these matters his lordship's efforts have been ably seconded by Mr. Goldsmid, one of the most competent fiscal officers in the service of Government, as he is decidedly the best-informed revenue officer it can now boast of. A short time ago, we heard a friend refer to Lord Falkland having caused the revenue instalments to be collected so as to enable the ryots to take their produce to market at their own convenience, instead of forcing them, as heretofore, to fly for aid to the village Banian, and sell their little all to him at a ruinous loss. The new "khist-bundy," as it is termed, is, we understand, intended greatly to benefit these poor people; but it is only a very few of the European officers who thoroughly understand how to work out the system, whereas those who do not or will not understand its mode of operation are making confusion more confounded, and are actually working out the ruin instead of the salvation of the unhappy wretches who are left to their tender mercies. This is not caused by any fault in the system itself, but is due to the want of proper discrimination on the part of some of the collectors, who do not choose to be at the trouble to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the simplest rules laid down for their guidance.

We have also heard the manner in which remissions are now granted when the season fails very highly spoken of by men conversant with the details of revenue management. Every thing is now done to prevent vexatious inspections of the ryots' fields, and to put a stop to degrading inquiries as to the means of each ryot, as also to prevent prevarications and extortions on the part of petty officials. The allowances of all our village officers are likewise now placed on a proper footing by Captain Wingate, and their duties clearly and properly defined. This has all been done under the warm support extended towards that able officer by Lord Falkland. But, were we to record all the remedial measures that have been carried to a successful issue under Lord Falkland's administration, we could readily fill many columns. Suffice it, therefore, to say, that wherever opportunity presented itself for benefitting the people under his rule, his lordship has never failed to take advantage of it to improve the occasion.

Before closing our remarks on his lordship's public acts, we cannot, however, forbear noticing thus prominently the fact that it was in the last years of his administration that he caused those selections from the police and revenue records of the secretariat to be printed and published to the world, which have been so frequently and so favourably noticed by the press. This, it must be admitted, is a great advance towards doing away with that secrecy which so much impedes the machinery of Government, and causes the knowledge of so much of what is really good and useful to be lost to the public, who frequently knew nothing of what was going on around them for the general benefit for years together. Lord Falkland has too, we are assured, most warmly urged on the Supreme Government that much larger sums of the public money than can now be sanctioned, should be placed at the disposal of the collectors, to be spent in works of irrigation; and he has strongly advocated a recommendation that a per centage of the revenues should be set aside for public works and native educational purposes, annually.

In the present article, we have purposely avoided two subjects, which we might enlarge upon—Lord Falkland's private virtues, which we do not think are in the line of our duty to dwell upon, and the discussion of those public acts that have raised a small portion of the Indian press against him. Our opinions on the much discussed public acts of the governor have been already published, and are, therefore, known to our readers.

With our good wishes for the future prosperity of Lord Falkland, and his amiable family, we now bid him farewell!—Poona Observer, Dec. 24.

LOSS OF THE MEDUSA.

You will be sorry to hear of the very serious accident that has happened to the H.C. steam-vessel Medusa. Lieutenant H. Fraser, I.N., commanding. The Medusa left this for Meeaday, to resume her station on the river frontier, on the 9th instant, and had proceeded about ten miles, when at about 2 P.M., on the same day, she struck on a sunken rock, and being a very old vessel, she instantly stove her bottom in, close to the second watertight compartment, which instantly filled, and from the very weak state of the ship, the sudden rush of water destroyed compartment after compartment. The vessel filling rapidly, every endeavour was made to run her on a bank, but none being near, and the ship showing symptoms of sinking in deep water, the officers and crew were ordered to save themselves the best way they could, which I hear was done by jumping overboard and swimming to the shore. I am happy to inform you that but one man was lost (I believe, the captain's cook). I hear the treasure chest and most of the ship's papers have been saved, and every effort is being made to save her guns and engines. The authorities here are very busy, preparing casks, rafts, &c. to send to the scene of the wreck. It is most fortunate that the gun-boats of the steam-frigate Zenobia are up here (where they have been stationed for the last two months); for, were they not, our river frontier would have been left quite unguarded, and dacoits would have soon shown themselves in thousands. On the departure of Lieut. Fraser, Lieut. Aylesbury will be appointed to conduct the duties of senior naval officer at Meeaday till the arrival of the Governor-General, when it is supposed one of the steamers of the Bengal marine will be made over to the Indian navy, as it is absolutely necessary to leave a naval officer on the spot, in the event of any disturbance taking place. The most serious loss to the government by the accident to the Medusa is the loss of her services, for she was very old and rotten. The commander and officers will be heavy sufferers by her loss, for they have lost everything, as no time was allowed them to save a particle of clothing, as she went down so suddenly, and has now some twenty-two feet of water over her decks. Lieut. Fraser speaks in high terms of the very excellent and steady conduct of the officers and men on this trying occasion.—Bombay Times.

LIEUTENANT CHAPMAN.

There are circumstances of peculiar melancholy attending the premature death of Lieutenant Chapman, of the engineers. All who during the last three years have had occasion to pass the Thull Ghaut, between Bombay and Nassick, will remember the magnificent road over the ghaut itself, which when continued into the plain country on either side, will make it the finest road over a mountain-pass in India. The execution of this work by Lieut. Chapman, after the plans of the late Major Peat, had gained for him very early in his service a well-deserved reputation, and led to his being selected, towards the end of 1852, to examine a project for connecting Kurrachee with the Indus by means of a canal. This scheme had been originally proposed to Lord Auckland by Colonel Outram before the conquest of Sind, and the plans of the late Lieut.-colonel Le Messurier, which were then submitted to Government, were taken up by the Gov.-Gen. as of great importance to our military position on the Indus, and were printed. But the Afghan troubles and the conquest of Sind led to their being laid aside and almost forgotten, till a cursory examination, of the plans, and the ground the canal was to traverse, by Maj. Turner and Lieut. Fife, of the Engineers, showed that the scheme was at least as practicable and important as had been at first supposed; Lieut. Chapman was elected to complete the examination. The results of his labours during last season were embodied in a very voluminous report, lately submitted to Government, on which we have heard the highest praise was bestowed by those best qualified to judge. The conclusion arrived at by Lieut. Chapman was, that a railway offered advantages even superior to those of a canal; and the data he submitted were considered sufficient to warrant his being directed to prosecute without delay the detailed surveys necessary to form a final judgment regarding the project. In the interval between the completion of his report and the receipt of these instructions, he had been employed in laying out a road over the Lukhee range of hills, which now acts as an almost complete barrier to traffic on the right bank of the Indus, between Sehwan and Kotree. Having completed this duty, he was on his way back to Kurrachee when the melancholy accident occurred which cost him his life. It appears from the reports received by the authorities, that Lieut. Chapman, a sergeant of Engineers, and twenty-seven public and private followers, embarked at Sehwan in a country boat, about 11 o'clock of the night, as the moon rose, of the 21st ult. The boat continued progress for Kotree for an hour, when she struck against a sunken tree, and immediately went under water. Four persons were washed off the boat at the time, but she again rose to the surface. They now cried for assistance, and their cries were heard at the village of Jam-ka-loda; some of the villagers at once proceeded to the river's side, and pushed off a small boat. One rope was thrown to the unfortunates, and they missed it, another was caught and broke, and before a third was procured the injured boat had disappeared—supposed to be about two hours after the accident. Thirteen of the party in the boat were carried down by the current, and eventually gained land; but notwithstanding that Captain Hodgkinson very promptly had mounted police abroad, obtained boats from Kotree with grappling-hooks, and had search made in every direction, the bodies of Lieut. Chapman and others lost with him have not, at the time of our writing, been recovered. By soundings, it was ascertained that the boat sunk in ten feet water.

In Lieut. Chapman the service has lost a young officer of the highest promise, who, had he been spared, would in all human probability, have established a reputation second to none in the distinguished corps to which he belonged. Here, where he was universally esteemed and respected in private life, the news of his untimely fate threw a general gloom over the society of the station.—Scindian, Jan. 4.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 8th arrived at Bombay Jan. 9 (per Victoria).

MESSRS. EDWARD IRVINE HOWARD and James Henry Standen, who were called to the bar, the former on the 17th of November, and the latter on the 6th of June, 1853, were sworn in as barristers of the Supreme Court on the 3rd of January.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN MACLEOD.—We are sorry to observe in the Scindian of the 24th ultimo, the announcement of the death, at Kurrachee, the previous afternoon, of Mr. John Macleod, collector of customs. The deceased gentleman was well known as an active, intelligent, and energetic public servant; and "in him," our contemporary states, that "the province of Scinde has lost a warm advocate of improvement, and the town of Kurrachee, its chief founder and great citizen."

PUBLIC WORKS.—The Bombay Times reports that the Court of Directors have sanctioned an outlay of ten lacs of rupees to reclaim some land from the sea, in the harbour of Bombay. Upon this land it is intended to erect a railway terminus, a bonding warehouse, a custom house, and other public buildings. The remainder will be sold, and it is expected that the profit will more than defray the original cost. The projector of the scheme is Colonel Waddington, C.B.

THE MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA, was opened for business yesterday; accounts were opened, we believe, to the extent of five lacs of rupees, and shares have risen from three and a half to five per cent. premium. From the interest displayed in its establishment by the native community, and its favourable commencement, coupled with the efficient management secured by the directors, we have no doubt that in a short time the institution will be amongst the most prosperous of its kind, and prove of great public convenience.—Bombay Times, Jan. 4.

The Rule, para. 13, page 12, granting the donation batta of a major to a lieutenant commanding, shall continue in force.

Mates, having served as such for three years, shall, under the principle laid down in para. 81, page 91, receive donation batta as lieutenants in the army, those of less than three years' service continuing to participate as midshipmen.

Apothecaries lent from the military department for duty in the marine, shall receive the same rate of donation batta that they would be entitled to if serving in the former department, namely, Rs. 60-14-0 per mensem.

Country-trained engineers shall continue to receive donation batta as authorised by para. 14, page 12, Indian naval pay and audit code,—Rs. 30 per mensem.

By order of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council.

T. MAUGHAN, Lieut.-col. Secy. to Govt.

ENSIGN MARK B. TANNER.

Adjutant-General's Office, Head-Quarters, Poona, Oct. 28, 1853.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Kurrachee, on Wednesday, Nov. 23, 1853, and of which Lieut.-Col. W. H. Law, H.M.'s 83rd regt. is president, Ens. M.B. Tanner, 6th N.I., was tried on the following charge, viz :—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having on or about Oct. 1st, 1853, proceeded on board the Hon. Company's flat, "Euphrates," lying at Kotree, and on the deck of that vessel made use of the following grossly insulting and highly disgraceful language to Mr. G. Hutchinson, Acting Master of the Indian Navy, who was standing on the quarter-deck, viz. : "You are a liar," "You are a damned liar," "I will kick your ——" or words to the like effect.

Finding and Sentence.—Guilty, to be dismissed the service.

(Signed) WILLIAM HENRY LAW, Lieut.-Col.

President, Offg. Judge Advocate.

Recommendation of the Court.—The Court having performed its duty and passed a sentence in conformity with its finding, begs to recommend the prisoner to the favourable consideration of the confirming authority, on the grounds of his youth and inexperience, and that he conceived he had received a great provocation from Mr. Hutchinson having falsely stated in a note attached to these proceedings that he was drunk when crossing the river some days previously—this report having only reached him, Ens. Tanner, two or three hours before he casually met Mr. Hutchinson on board the flat "Euphrates," on the day mentioned in the charge.

(Signed) W. H. LAW, Lieut.-Col. 83rd regt. and President.

Head-Quarters, Poona, Dec. 14th, 1853.—Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) FREDERICK FITZCLARENCE, Lieut.-Gen. and C.-in-C.

Remarks by the Commander-in-Chief.—Ensign Tanner's offence was greatly aggravated by the fact of his having offered the gross insult he did to Mr. Hutchinson, when the latter was standing on the quarter-deck of a vessel belonging to the Hon. Company, in whose service Mr. Hutchinson was an officer, and there present on duty.

Ensign Tanner, by his conduct, not only set at nought the rules of society, but openly violated those laws which are the very basis of discipline, and without which no military service can exist; just and most merited has been the award of the court-martial,—an award in which I fully concur; but I am unwilling that one so young and inexperienced should have his prospects totally blighted on his entrance into life; and as many of the sentiments expressed in his defence bespeak an honourable mind, I pardon Ensign Tanner, trusting that he will, for the future, be more guarded in his conduct, and that he will reflect on the painful position in which he has been placed, and the distress the loss of his commission would have occasioned, not only to himself, but to those to whom he has so feelingly alluded in his defence, as deeply interested in his welfare.

The Court has, by its judgment, vindicated discipline, and proved to the army that no officer can, even in defence of his own character, transgress, with impunity those rules which society require to be observed by every gentleman.

I earnestly implore all young officers seriously to reflect upon the circumstances which have led to the trial, with the view of placing a guard upon their temper, which, by giving way to a moment of irritation, might terminate in their ruin.

(Signed) FREDERICK FITZCLARENCE,
Lieut.-Gen. and Com.-in-Ch.

Ensign M. B. Tanner is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

THE REBELS IN THE NORTH.

(Extracts from the Overland China Mail, Dec. 27.)

The numbers of the Peking Gazette from Oct. 14 to Nov. 1 give more detailed statements of the progress of the rebels from Kau-ching hien in Ching-ting fu to Jin-kiu hien in Ho-kien fu, in Chih-li province, of which we gave a general statement in our last Overland issue. The Gazette for Oct. 11 publishes the report from Shing-paou, stating that on the 8th of October he sent a force to attack the rebels in Kau-ching. The force, on its arrival at that city, found the rebels engaged in crossing the river on a moveable bridge. They attacked those remaining, numbering about 3,000, whereupon they all rushed pell-mell to effect a passage of the river. Many were drowned, and after the greater portion had crossed, the rebels burnt the bridge to interrupt pursuit, and marched on Siu-chau, which they took.

The Gazette of 14th October announces the appointment of King Hwui-tsin, with the title of "The great General with Imperial powers," and the King of Ko-uh-sin, named Sang-kih-lin-sin, with the title of "The great Officer Second in Command," with orders immediately to take the troops in the capital, together with the T'a-ha-urh Tartars from Manchuria, and the Mongols belonging to the Third Eastern League, and unite themselves with Shing Paou, to exterminate the rebels.

The Gazette of the 25th publishes a report of Shing-paou, that on the 21st of October, he, in conjunction with other commanders, attacked the rebels in Siu-chau. He reports that seven or eight hundred rebels were killed during the skirmishes, and that on the 22nd they abandoned Siu-chau and marched to the north-east. They would appear to have taken Jin-kiu hien on the 21st or 25th of October.

The Pekin Gazette from the 30th of October to the 17th of November had reached Shanghai before the 10th of December, which shows that the communication between Peking and Su-chau was not interrupted.

DESTRUCTION OF A PIRATE FLEET BY H.M.'s STEAMER HERMES.

On the morning of the 15th, Mr. F. Williams, of H.M.'s steamer Hermes, arrived in the harbour in a pirate-junk which he had taken, having been blown out to sea eight days before, and during the interim he and four men who were with him had had little else to eat but calavances. He reported the capture or destruction of about forty west-coast junks. In pursuing the pirates, two of the Hermes boats capsized in the surf, and as the crews landed, they were stripped of their arms and clothes by the natives, but were liberated upon payment of a small ransom. Lorcha No. 70 was found in the hands of the pirates, and rescued by the Hermes; the master had received some ill treatment, and several of the crew were hurt. Another and larger pirate fleet had escaped to sea.

We hear also that while off Tong-san, a boat with five seamen was sent from the Hermes to carry an anchor to one of the captured junks, and in the morning was found bottom up; it is believed the crew were all drowned.

RUSSIAN COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS IN CHINA.

Pekin Gazette to the 17th November had been received at Shanghai on the 10th December. They contain nothing of greater interest to foreigners than an order for the promotion of one officer and the decoration of another, for "their efficient services in the transaction of the Russian commercial affairs." According to information we have received, one of the objects of Admiral Pontiatine's mission was to endeavour to obtain for Russia the recognition of its claim to trade at the ports of China open to other nations,—a right which two or three of its vessels, through their consignees, have of late assumed; but either furtively or in defiance of the Chinese authorities. Negotiations on the subject were some time ago opened with the Government, but the affair being in the department of the imperial commissioner at Canton, who may be regarded as minister for foreign affairs, Admiral Pontiatine, on his arrival, addressed himself to Yeh, who returned a courteous but decided negative, in which he took the ground, that as the Russians, long before other foreigners had any recognised privileges, carried on an extensive and profitable inland trade at Kiakta, to grant them the same concessions on the seaboard as have since been conceded to other foreign nations, would be to place them at great advantage, and give rise to difficulties without any adequate benefit to China. This reply, with the admiral's arguments, was reported to Peking, where it was sent to the proper board for consideration.—Overland China Mail, Dec. 27.

THE LONDON MAIL of Oct. 24th arrived at Hong Kong Dec. 12 (per Singapore).

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, February 14, 1854.

EUROPEAN VIEW OF CHINA.

THE China Mail contains an article on a speech upon China made at a city dinner by Dr. Bowring, lately a British official in connection with the country of which he spoke. After a flourish in the usual style about the wanderer welcomed to his home (his health had been drunk), he proceeded to talk about the efforts made in China to diffuse "the blessings of education." Now, when gentlemen talk of the "blessings of education," and refer to China for an example, one might almost suspect that they were actuated by a covert design to discourage education. The Chinese, claiming to be the only civilized people in the world, and possessing a certain spurious civilization, are after all a nation sunk in debasement and moral degradation, incapable of improvement beyond a certain point, if the experience of centuries be any guide, and whose education, if education they have, has never advanced them one step, while Europe has gradually attained its present state. The speaker proceeded to say that not long ago he had the privilege (everything is a privilege now) to see a great struggle for official position in one of the provinces of that country (China), which could only be obtained by literary distinction. So it seems that this wonderful project, which is now so fashionable here, of disposing of places by literary auction, is of Chinese origin. Of all the people on the face of the earth, we borrow from the Chinese! The Doctor went on to declare, that he saw 9,000 of the contentious youths thus summoned to a war of words, who, it seems, arrived at Canton with a retinue of 30,000 friends, affording something more than two seconds and a bottle-holder to each combatant. The 9,000, however, were on the whole to be classed as unfortunates, for only seventy-two of them were successful, or could be successful, consequently there were 8,928 disappointments. Pretty encouragement this; but "worse remains behind." "So earnest were they (the combatants), that some of them died in the struggle." And this is to promote education! Disappointment and death are the means,—means certainly well worthy of the wretched people among whom they are tolerated, but which we trust even yet to see contemptuously shelved in this country. "Such is the practice," says Dr. Bowring, "which has placed the Chinese in a position"—we will conclude the sentence for him—"in a position" which has made them the laughing-stock of the civilized world, the objects of quiet contempt or of loud derision with all mankind.

SLAVERY IN TRAVANCORE.

In our last publication we copied from the Friend of India an article entitled "Facts from Travancore." One of the chief facts noticed was the issue of a proclamation designed (we must hope) to effect some amelioration in the condition of perhaps the most wretched class that exists in any part of the world where Great Britain has any influence. Slavery, everywhere a curse, assumes in Travancore its darkest shade. The miserable bondsman is treated, not as a human being, but as a reclaimed animal, or perhaps not quite so well. All observers speak of the miserable appearance of these victims of avarice and oppression, which is scarcely human; and this atrocious state of things has prevailed,—and we fear, notwithstanding proclamations, will long prevail,—under a prince boasting himself, and lauded by others for his liberality and enlightenment,—the man who maintains an observatory, and publishes scientific works, but whose high literary position does not prevent his holding vast numbers of his subjects in slavery, and permitting other of his subjects to do the like. The proclamation, as the Friend of India appears to believe, and as we are convinced, will be a dead letter. There is the proclamation, and this will be the beginning and the end of the matter. The children of Sirkar slaves born after the date of the document are to be free: who is to see to the fulfilment of this clause? Private slaves are not to be sold under execution: what is to become of them when their master is sold up? They are slaves; they cannot work on their own account, if anybody would employ them. Their master, indeed, may hire them out, and what must be the condition of a second-hand slave, we need not say. It must be worse, if possible, than that of the generality of the miserable race. The slaves are to be at liberty to purchase and hold property: how are they to get it? Injustice done to slaves is to be punished; so says the proclamation: will it ever be carried out? Slave parents and children are not, without their own consent, to be sold and separated more than fifteen miles from each other: not more than fifteen miles! This, it seems, is a trifle, though fifteen miles to either man or woman whose time is occupied in consuming toil from early dawn to late night, form, we apprehend, a virtual barrier against communication. The pay of Sirkar slaves is to be the same as that of free labourers. What of the private slaves? They are left to the tender mercies of their holders, who may starve them at pleasure. Both Sirkar and private slaves are to receive a moderate allowance in time of sickness and old age. A very moderate allowance it will be; and who is to enforce the provision? Who is to decide when a slave is really too ill for work, or when old age has incapacitated him for further labour? Who! why the man that calls himself his master; and how he will decide, need not be asked. Slave children under fourteen years of age are not to be worked beyond their ability. A question similar to that raised by the preceding clause occurs here, and must receive the like answer. Such is this famous proclamation, which will effect nothing, and is, we fear, intended to effect nothing. In truth, even in better-governed countries than Travancore, all attempts to modify and improve a state of slavery are idle and useless. The institution is radically bad, and should be dealt with by a root-and-branch extirpation. Nothing less than abolition will be an effectual cure. We do not recommend a hasty or violent abolition. In the British colonies the work was done too suddenly, and mischief followed. But while we would discourage undue haste, still more strongly would we protest against unnecessary delay. If the work is to be performed, it should be set about in earnest; and this the Travancore authorities have not yet even thought of.

The state of things in Travancore suggests a query to the "progress" men, who deafen us with their clamour. How comes such a system to prevail, to be protected, to be perpetuated, as far as human efforts can go, under a ruler standing alone among Indian princes, with the character of an accomplished and enlightened man of science? Alas for progress! the greatest barbarian that India contains could not in this respect act worse. Moreover, among the slave-holders of Travancore are Englishmen. We could name them. These, it may be supposed, have the average amount of liberal knowledge enjoyed by their countrymen. What has it done for them? What have they done for the wretched helots of Travancore? Nothing, except to rivet their chains faster. In the British territories of India—those misgoverned possessions, as some of the slave-holders will have them to be—there, oppressed, as the people are by the reformers said to be,—the relation of owner and slave is not recognised by the law. The property of man in man is an abomination, of which the law knows nothing. We have done much to suppress suttee, infanticide, human sacrifices, and other horrors in native states. Let us add the extermination of slavery to our other claims upon humanity. We cannot now be reproached with tolerating it in the dominion where our power is uncontrolled, for we no longer tolerate it.

SIR HENRY M. ELLIOT, K.C.B.

THE hand of Death has of late pressed heavily on the great men of India. It is, unhappily, our duty to record the decease of one more of them, and at an age when it might have been hoped and anticipated that a career of high usefulness and proud distinction was yet before him. Regretful feelings are unavailing, but the decease of no member of any of the Indian services could have called forth more poignant grief among either his own peculiar circle, or the wider one of the friends and well-wishers of India, than the subject of our present brief notice.

Sir Henry Miers Elliot was one of fifteen children of the late John Elliot, Esq., of Pimlico Lodge, Westminster, and the third son of that gentleman. He was born in the year 1808. Winchester was chosen as the place of his education, and he entered its venerable college at the age of ten years, little dreaming, in all probability, of the honour which he was thereafter to reflect upon the noble institution of William of Wykeham. He remained at Winchester eight years, and, ere he left, was one of the senior prefects. During his residence there he devoted himself assiduously to the studies of the place, and shared in its distinctions, having gained both the silver medals for speaking. He was not less attached to the athletic sports which are so ardently pursued at our public schools, and which Gray so fondly recalled to memory when contemplating a sister institution. Eight years passed at Winchester prepared him worthily to enter that further temple of learning, which may be regarded, in fact, as an outlying portion of the Wykehamist establishment, New College, Oxford; but there was no vacancy for him. It happened, remarkably enough, that at the very time when his future destination was to be selected, an opportunity presented itself which is of most rare occurrence,—so rare, indeed, that we believe it is the only one that has offered since the establishment of Haileybury,—an opportunity which opened to candidates not specially trained for the purpose, the honours and emoluments of the East-India civil service. Such a concurrence of events is calculated to call forth reflection on the apparent entanglement, but actual regularity, of the great chain of circumstances which determine the lot of human beings, and often change it by means as inexplicable as they are unlooked for. Had the well-instructed Winchester youth proceeded to Oxford, his duties and responsibilities would, most probably, have lain at home; the church, the bar, or political pursuits, would most likely have claimed the talents and energy thus suddenly turned into an unexpected channel.

From a deficiency of civil servants, it became necessary to seek reinforcements, not from Haileybury only, which could not furnish them to the required extent, but from any quarter whence they could be obtained. The measure was unprecedented as it has remained solitary; but under the pressure of necessity it was sanctioned by Parliament, though for a brief period only. Mr. Elliot having been nominated as a candidate by Campbell Marjoribanks, Esq., was the first to pass an examination for a civil appointment direct to India. Classical and mathematical knowledge might be counted upon, but although a year had not elapsed since he left Winchester, where he had no opportunity for pursuing such studies, his proficiency in the Oriental languages was so remarkable, that the examiners at the East-India House placed him alone in an honorary class. He had thus the good fortune to arrive at Calcutta with a reputation that his future course tended not only to maintain but to exalt. After emerging from his noviciate as a writer (the term by which the younger civilians were then distinguished), he was appointed Assistant to the Magistrate and Collector of Bareilly, and successively Assistant to the Political Agent and Commissioner at Delhi, Assistant to the Collector and Magistrate, S.D. Mooradabad, Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue for the N.W. Provinces, and in 1847 he became Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department. While holding this office he accompanied the Governor-General, Lord Hardinge, to the Punjab, upon the resources of which he drew up a most elaborate memoir, completely exhausting the subject, his researches being extended as far back as the time of Akbar. His distinguished services were recognised by the Crown as well as the Company. He received from the former the honour of being created

K.C.B. His progress in India would have been still onward. It was thought that on the vacation of the Lieutenant-Governorship of the N.W. Provinces by Mr. Thomason, he would have succeeded that eminent officer, and when death prevented Mr. Thomason's assumption of the Government of Madras, Sir Henry Elliot was spoken of as his probable successor. But this too was averted by the general destroyer, whose victim Sir Henry became while sojourning at the Cape, where he sought for health but met with death. It came finding him, indeed, rich in honours, but not full of years, of which he numbered but forty-five.

Of his merits as a servant of the East-India Company, the authorities at home and in India have repeatedly expressed their sense. To quote the instances would involve the task of transcribing very largely from their records—so largely indeed, that within our limits the numerous testimonials could not be admitted. During the recent Parliamentary inquiry, he was constantly mentioned as one not less distinguished by general ability and information than as a first-rate Oriental scholar. Those who had known him in India, were anxious to render justice to his claims, and those at home not less so. The eminent authority of Sir James C. Melvill, Secretary to the East-India Company, may be adduced from among the latter class. On being asked as to the results of the unusual mode of admission to the Civil service above noticed as having been temporarily adopted, he specially referred to Sir Henry Elliot, as a very distinguished man and great Oriental scholar, who had been thus admitted.

The literary tastes and literary industry of Sir Henry Elliot were not less remarkable or laudable than his official qualifications. In 1846 he published the first volume of a work entitled "Supplement to the Glossary of Indian Terms, A. J." The Glossary referred to was a work then meditated, and for which we believe some preparation was made. It was intended to comprise all Indian terms in official use. From a personal examination of Sir Henry Elliot's Supplement, we can vouch for its being one of the most curious and learned philological works ever published. The mass of reading displayed is immense. But our humble opinion shall go for what it may be thought worth; and we must in this case depart from our resolution not to quote from the Government records. It was submitted in manuscript to the Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W. Provinces, who thus speaks of it:—

"The Lieutenant-Governor has perused this interesting volume with much gratification, and is very desirous that the curious matter it contains should not be exposed to the risk of loss from the existence of a single copy, or to perversion from the ignorance of transcribers. His Honour therefore requests the Board* will take measures for having it printed at once under the immediate eye of the Secretary."

We must break our rule once more by quoting the opinion of the Sudder Board:—

"The Board have perused this Supplemental Glossary with feelings of very great interest and satisfaction, and are persuaded it will be found to contain, so far as the limits allow, nearly all, if not all, the terms of known acceptation in the North-Western Provinces relating to the revenue and agricultural concerns of the country; which, together with the very excellent commentary on the various tribes coming within the assigned limits, cannot but be regarded as a highly valuable addition to the original glossary."

The latter part of the above quotation from the report of the Sudder Board explains, in some degree, what the book really is, which the title certainly does not. In 1849, Sir Henry Elliot published the first volume of a "Bibliographical Index to the Historians of Mohamedan India." When it is recollected that these works were prepared during moments wrung, with difficulty, from official duties, which were never neglected, the energy, not less than the erudition, of the writer will excite admiration.

At the Cape, where Sir Henry enjoyed greater leisure, though unfortunately embittered by ill health, he resumed his literary pursuits; and it is believed that he has left ready for the press three additional volumes of his "Bibliographical Index." If he have left no materials remaining for the completion of his philological work, it is greatly to be regretted.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INCREASE OF ENGINEERS IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—It appears that an increase of the engineers at the various presidencies is a measure deemed necessary, as, under present circumstances, it undoubtedly is. It is said it will take place as soon as there are enough supernumeraries to form the battalions. As delay is inexpedient, allow me to ask, Why not take a certain number of 2nd lieutenants of artillery, such as shall be found best qualified? When the expedition against the Isle of France was commenced, Lieutenant John Cheape of the artillery, now Colonel Sir John Cheape of the engineers, and Lieutenant John Colvin, were selected for engineer service. Lieutenant-General Tickell was also removed from the artillery. Why is the same course not taken now, when officers are wanted? The artillery possesses as able officers as ever it did; and if a selection were judiciously made, there can be no doubt that the result would be beneficial to the public interest, by enabling the Government to take a necessary step immediately, which must otherwise be postponed to an indefinite period.

AN OLD BENGAL OFFICER.

Oriental Club, Feb. 1st, 1854.

THE EAST-INDIA DIRECTION.—On Wednesday last, the 8th instant, Mr. Loch announced to the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, that it was not his intention to offer himself as a candidate for a seat in the Direction at the election of fifteen Directors, which, pursuant to the Act of last session, will take place on the 8th of March next. Mr. Loch's address, which intimates this intention to the proprietors of East-India Stock, will be found in another part of this paper.

BOOKS.

Memoirs and Correspondence of Henry St. George Tucker, late Accountant-General of Bengal and Chairman of the East-India Company. By J. W. KAYE. Vol. II. London, 1854, Bentley.

THIS volume has made its appearance since our last issue; and as its character is essentially "Anglo-Indian," it would be wrong not to devote a column of this number to the consideration of its claims to notice. It was heralded, last summer, by a valuable collection of Mr. Tucker's Minutes on questions relating to the government of India, which was launched very seasonably at the time of the Charter discussions, and which was calculated to throw considerable light on all those vexed administrative questions, then the theme of popular discourse. It should, however, be mentioned, that to a certain extent this volume appears under false colours. It is brought out as complete in itself; but it is certainly a second volume of "Memorials of Indian Government," though it is nowhere stated to be such.

The present volume is nothing less than a "Memoir" of Mr. Tucker's public and private life; and if all the "Memoirs" which swamp the press, and pour themselves through the literary outlets of the metropolis—from the publisher's boutique to the bookvender's stall—contained half as much in them to interest and to improve, there would be little occasion for caustic comments on the memoir-writing mania under which a section of our countrymen unhappily labour.

The book comes most entirely within our province, inasmuch as it contains much that might be quarrelled for and claimed by the historian of India, and much that cannot fail deeply to interest the Anglo-Indian—be he the literary lounge of Hanover Square, tasting the delights of the dolce far niente, at the close of his Eastern career; or the responsible "man in office," up to his ears in ponderous despatches, in a secluded corner of a ponderous mansion in Leadenhall Street.

The first chapter mainly consists of quotations from an unfinished "autobiography," penned by Mr. Tucker himself. This "fragment" is full of interesting matter connected with his early life in Bermuda, school-life at Hampstead, and midshipman-life on board the William Pitt, eastward-bound; and regarding it as an introduction, at the outset, to the character of the subject of the Memoir, nothing could be better. The perusal of it, indeed, predisposes us, in no common degree, to look with a friendly eye on the future career of the youth whose early years were steeped in trouble, and to follow him to the end with no common degree of interest.

We can afford in this place but a cursory glance at the history of his official life in India, embracing as it did a most important period; and must perforce leave our readers to make themselves acquainted with the narrative of his rapid rise in the service, of the great things done by him as accountant-general on two memorable occasions, and of his final departure from India, where the best years of his life had been spent, and where he had laboured so long and so successfully for the prosperity of the Government and the good of the people.

It is a narrative of duties performed—services executed—and honour won; and the present generation of civil servants of the Company in India will do well to lay hold of it as a text-book, and to profit by the lessons which it conveys.

Anecdotes of the imperial Governor-General, and of others besides, alternate very pleasantly with private correspondence and historic detail in this part of the volume; and although the subject of the Memoir stands, as he ought to stand, ever in the foreground, and our attention is never wholly diverted from the contemplation of his character and career—there is room on the canvas for sketches of some of his friends.

The second section carries us home to the India House; and we find ourselves plunged—not by any means disagreeably—into its elections, its politics, its systems, and its struggles with the Board. A capital chapter is evoked by those stirring encounters between the two administrative authorities in this country which rendered the years 1832 and 1834 memorable in the annals of Leadenhall Street. Then was it that the "mandamus" lowered over the horizon; and Cannon Row, in a more than usually warlike mood, threatened greater things than destiny chose to fulfil.

Certain very spirited minutes, from the pen of Mr. Tucker, are here inserted; minutes which appeared in the Blue Books relating to the Hyderabad and Oude cases some twenty years ago; but which, were it not for their present resuscitation, might have shared the fate of all those able documents which—condemned to these Parliamentary sepulchres—too often remain unread, “save by the daring few.”

These very interesting protests—presented as they are in their own original form—will vividly recall to the mind of many a reader old days, when they listened in Court to the spirited addresses which fell from the lips of the writer, and when they heard him enunciate, with the fervour of earnest sincerity, those views of the right, those convictions of justice, which the records of his pen still powerfully pronounce.

A subsequent chapter of the book is devoted to the “Afghan War.” Here the public are given some insight into the proceedings of the Leadenhall Street Conclave during that never-to-be-forgotten season. Here we are made still further acquainted with the active part taken by Mr. Tucker to avert the impending disasters. We mark his steadfast, consistent adherence, from the first, to the principles of non-interference with the affairs of Persia—we note his early opposition to the project of establishing a commercial agency at Caubul—(an opposition which dates as far back as the year 1834); and we listen to his warning remonstrances against that fatal policy, which closed, as he predicted it would close, in disaster and disgrace.

Forcibly does the book expose the “rare justice” with which the East-India Company have been visited. Ministers involve themselves (noles volens) in ruinous undertakings, destructive alike to their finances and their fame, and then cast on their treasury the whole burden of measures, against which they might indeed protest, but which they could not prevent.

And Mr. Tucker did protest. He protested right manfully; but his efforts carried with them little reward, save in the witness of his own conscience and the approving testimony of such men as Metcalfe. “You,” wrote this able statesman, “were one of the few who condemned our mad policy in Afghanistan, when all the world applauded; and although you could not prevent it, your opposition must ever redound to your honour.”

We are given some remarkable letters addressed by Mr. Tucker to the Duke of Wellington and others on this momentous subject, and a quotation from one of them will not be unacceptable to our readers:—

“About five years ago,” writes Mr. Tucker, in the year 1838, “when I held the situation of chairman of the Court, I ventured to urge an opinion that our concerns in Persia, in consequence of the position and movements of Russia, had become an European, and not an Asiatic question—that it was impossible to meet and counteract Russia at Teheran—that we might lavish our money upon a weak and corrupt Court—but that we could not assist it with a military force sufficient to secure its independence as against Russia, whose armies were at hand; and that, therefore, our obvious policy was to operate upon Russia in Europe.”

“I was also adverse to the project of establishing a mission at Caubul. The professed object was to extend our commerce with Central Asia by the Indus; but it appeared to me certain that our agency would assume a political character, and that we should soon be mixed up in all the perplexed politics of the Afghans; and even if we should succeed in opening a commercial road through the Punjab, or otherwise, to Afghanistan, we should only make a military road from that country to Hindostan, which appeared to me to be by no means desirable.

“Your Grace is aware that, about this time, the Persian embassy was transferred to his Majesty’s Government, the East-India Company undertaking to defray the charge, to the extent of 12,000*l.* per annum; while the idea of establishing an agency at Caubul was for the time abandoned.

“But that which I had deprecated, and which it was my great object to prevent—a military movement from India—has now actually taken place; and from certain indications, I am persuaded that it has taken place under orders from this country. The transfer of our Persian relations to his Majesty’s Government has, therefore, I apprehend, brought upon us the very evil which it was intended to prevent. The late Sir Robert Grant would never, I am satisfied, have made that pitiful demonstration in the Persian Gulf without authority from hence; nor would Lord Auckland, who has shown great prudence in other instances—have embarked, I think, in so fearful an enterprise without express authority from home. The evil, then, originating here, it is only in this country that its progress can be arrested.”

After a brief summary of what appeared to him to be the then state of things, and the position in which we had placed ourselves, the writer proceeds to say:—

“In fine, if some decided steps be not speedily taken for the purpose of averting the evils which seem to impend over us, we shall not long, I fear, be able to say that the sun never sets upon the dominions of Great Britain; or at least, we shall not be able to say that its widely extended possessions are the source of strength, power, and prosperity to the parent country.”

And in a letter addressed to another English statesman in the following year, we find this stirring passage:—

“I have been in India under critical circumstances; but I have never had the same apprehension of danger as at the present moment. Your Lordship will perceive the feeling which prevails on the spot from the accompanying extract; but although there may be some exaggeration in the statement, it is corroborated in its leading features by the information which I receive from other quarters. I do hope that your Lordship and others, who really know India, will take some decided step. To know what is right, and to see what is wrong, without endeavouring to enforce the one and to avert the other, is to incur, I think, serious responsibility. We all deprecate the loss of Canada as a national calamity; but what is Canada to our Eastern empire?”

Much that is historical—much that is political—may be garnered up by the reader of this “Memoir” by one of India’s best friends and ablest champions; but the book has an interest beyond this. It reveals to us a page of domestic history, and shows us that, besides that “outer life” of political struggle and administrative action in which Mr. Tucker was continually immersed, there was an inner life granted to him, into which no official cares, no perplexing debates, no public distractions were suffered to enter. All these he cast off, as he entered his home, at the close of the day of labour: and happy, indeed, is the man who has strength of will sufficient to enable him so to do! Too often is the statesman the slave of his work; rarely can he pass at once from harassing thought to home enjoyment—rarely shake off the last remnant of official care, and possess himself in undisturbed serenity of mind.

Our limits restrain us from lengthening our notice of this book. Its circulation will, we think, be great among the ever-widening class of those to whom “India” is becoming more and more a very “household word.” We rejoice that Mr. Tucker has found a biographer. It is for the good of the various Indian services that the career of those who have especially distinguished themselves therein should be set before them for example and imitation. It is meet that public devotion and private virtues should not be left unnoticed and unknown. The name of Henry St. George Tucker will be held in honour as long as shall endure the remembrance of how faithfully he served the State, how diligently he laboured in his official sphere, and how bravely he contended for the rights of that people whose welfare was the object of his most earnest aspirations throughout the whole course of his distinguished career.

The Bhilsa Topes; or Buddhist Monuments of Central India: comprising a brief historical sketch of the Rise and Fall of Buddhism, with an Account of the opening and examination of the various Groups of Topes around Bhilsa. By Brevet-Major ALEXANDER CUNNINGHAM, Bengal Engineers. London, 1854. Smith, Elder, and Co.

THIS is a book which antiquaries will be eager to devour. To etymologists and those anxious to trace the descent of nations and to investigate the various marks, lingual or otherwise, which connect the great family of man, the work will also be most acceptable; and not less so to those specially interested in the East, its history, traditions, manners, habits, and superstitions. It is pleasing to find the military servants of the East-India Company occupying their leisure in liberal pursuits, rather than in drinking and smoking, with perhaps the additional stimulus of gambling, avocations which not only consume time and money, but yield no return save a diseased body and an enfeebled or distracted mind. Throughout India are dispersed objects of rational curiosity suited to every variety of taste, among which officers like Major Cunningham promptly make their selection, in accordance with their peculiar mental constitution or acquired habits.

Hungary, Past and Present; embracing its History from the Magyar Conquest to the present Time. With a Sketch of Hungarian Literature. By EMERIC SZABAD, late Secretary under the Hungarian National Government of 1849. Edinburgh, 1854. A. and C. Black.

WE suspect that there are few people, even among those called the educated classes, who know much more of Hungary than they know of the moon. Indeed, all that most persons even profess to know is, that it is a country which a few years since was the scene of political convulsions, which furnished endless columns of newspaper report and newspaper discussion, that were in the usual mode duly read and duly forgotten. If any one were to ask where he could learn something of the history of this country, even a tolerably well-read person would find it difficult to inform him. Here is just the book that is wanted. It supplies a gap in our literature; it is brief, and it will neither occupy much time in the perusal nor overload the memory with that which is not worth remembering; for the various divisions are duly proportioned to the respective interest and importance of each; those having the better claims to notice being more full, those relating to less stirring matters more contracted.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Had it pleased Parliament to preserve the present constitution of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, I should, while honoured with your support, have continued to be a member of that body, so long as Providence vouchsafed to me health and unimpaired faculties.

But the Act of last session has prescribed that the number of Directors shall be immediately reduced to fifteen, exclusive of three to be named by the Crown, and that the first three vacancies in the fifteen shall be also filled up by her Majesty. Although, from the kind feeling manifested towards me by my colleagues, I could with reasonable confidence have offered myself for election as one of the fifteen, yet, I must confess, that at my advanced age it would not be satisfactory to my feelings to occupy a position so important to your interests, which might otherwise be more permanently filled, and not less beneficially.

The Act has imposed upon the Directors and ex-Directors the selection from among themselves of the reduced number. This is a task which I would be desirous of avoiding; but, as a public man long connected with India and deeply interested in its good government, I cannot reconcile it to my sense of propriety to shrink from the performance of this important duty, however painful and invidious. I shall therefore remain until the close of the official year, to assist my colleagues in their endeavour to make the best selection of members for the new Court.

Permit me to express to you my deep sense of gratitude for the confidence with which you have so long honoured me. It has been my endeavour faithfully to execute my trust. I resign it not without regret, having always felt a deep interest in the duty it involves, and I shall to my latest hour cherish an earnest solicitude for the prosperity of our magnificent empire in the East, and the happiness and welfare of its vast population.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful, humble servant,

JOHN LOCH.

East-India House, February 9, 1854.

SECRETARY.—Geo. Keys, Esq.

ACTUARY.—Griffith Davies, Esq., F.R.S.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE of PREMIUM without participation of profits.

The next division of profits will be declared in June, 1855, when all participating policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1854, will be allowed to share in the profits.

At the several past divisions of profits made by this Company, the reversionary bonuses added to the policies from one-half the profits, amounted, on an average of the different ages, to about one per cent. per annum on the sums insured, and the total bonuses added at the four septennial divisions exceeded 770,000l.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The extra premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their lives at the tabular premiums, may have their lives insured at extra premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under 50l.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge will be made for policy stamps.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances effected upon every description of property, at the usual rates.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA, &c.

DRAWN BY JOHN WALKER,

A New Map of India;

Showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the Position and Boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys executed by Order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 4 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

*.* The object kept in view in compiling this Map, has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all Stations—Civil and Military—are inserted, as well as those of all Towns and places of note, likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various Districts and Collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The Railways are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the Map clear and easy for Reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been shunned.

A General Map of India;

Compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Hon. East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

Map of India;

From the most recent authorities. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

Map of the Routes in India;

With Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this Map are given the whole of the Military and Civil Stations, together with the principal Towns, the villages being omitted so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies.

Map of the Western Provinces of Hindoostan;

The Punjab, Cabool, Sind, Bhawalpore, &c.; including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 38s.; or on cloth, in a case, £2; or on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

Map of India and China, Burmah, Siam,

the Malay Peninsula, and the Empire of Anam. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

Map showing the Steam Communication and Overland Routes

Between England, India, China, and Australia. Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 4 in. high; on cloth, in a case, 14s., or with rollers, and varnished, 18s.

Map of Arabia;

Compiled from all the most recent authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 8 ft. 3 in. high; on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

Map of the Punjab and Sikh Territory.

On one sheet, 5s.; or on cloth, in a case, 6s.

Map of Afghanistan and the adjacent Countries.

On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

Map of China,

From the most authentic sources of information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 8s.; or on cloth, in a case, 11s.

Map of the Burman Empire,

Showing the annexed district of Pegu. One sheet 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

Those who find shaving painful and difficult will do well to try the above, it being well known that Mechi has been eminently successful in rendering shaving an easy operation. Superior shaving-brushes, Naples soap, and every article of first-rate quality for the toilet. Caution.—Do not buy any strop as genuine unless Mechi's name is on them, there being so many counterfeits. Elegant case of razors for presents, from 25s. to 10 guineas. Ivory-handled and Scotch strops.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION of OPIUM

and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—This most valuable preparation stands highly recommended by the faculty both in India and England, and also in several large cities on the Continent of Europe, as a safe and efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium, but more especially in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting which so generally precedes EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.

As disgraceful attempts have been made in this country and in India to impose a spurious preparation by counterfeited labels and directions, it becomes the duty of Messrs. SAVORY and MOORE to caution the public against such impositions, and to inform them that JEREMIE'S SOLUTION of OPIUM is now prepared (EXCLUSIVELY) in their laboratory in London, by desire of the representative of the late Captain Jeremie, and that every bottle will be surrounded with a Government stamp, without which none can be genuine.

London, December 1, 1853.

Agents in India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, & Co., Calcutta.

THE TEETH AND HEALTH.—A good set of teeth ever insures favourable impressions, while their preservation is of the utmost importance to every individual, both as regards the general health by the proper mastication of food, and the consequent possession of pure and sweet breath. Among the various preparations offered for the purpose,

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, stands

unrivalled in its capability of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface; remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and from its aromatic influence, impart sweetness and purity to the breath. It is important to observe that, when used early in life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realizes the chief attribute of health and beauty.—A FINE SET OF PEARLY TEETH.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

CAUTION.—The words, "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," are on the label, and "A. ROWLAND and Sons, 30, Hatton Garden," engraved on the Government stamp affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS for the CURE of BILE, GIDDINESS, and DETERMINATION of BLOOD to the HEAD.

—These Pills, so well known, supersede all other medicine for the suppression of an undue secretion of bile; they give relief to that sensation of fullness frequently felt after eating, cure head-aches, prevent pains, giddiness, and determination of blood to the head. Habitual constiveness is obviated by their use, and for dropsical complaints they stand pre-eminent for strengthening and cleansing the stomach. Holloway's Pills are the very best remedy ever discovered; they also increase the appetite, and promote digestion, giving an hilarity of feeling and buoyancy to the spirits.

Sold by all druggists, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

BURMAH does not send by the present Mail any news that will stifle the interest excited by "the Eastern Question." The Governor-General has been looking about, and is said to be satisfied. We hope there is reason for his satisfaction. The assassination of Captain Latter still continues to occupy attention. A very dark story in connection with it is circulated, and will be found in another part of our paper. We hope it will turn out to be unfounded; and this not less for our country's character than from regard to the deceased officer's memory. A party of the Arracan battalion is reported to have been involved in an affair of no great importance, but melancholy in its results. Engaged in the pursuit of a band of dacoits, it was led, by treacherous guides, into an ambush, and had a considerable number killed and wounded. Among the victims was Captain Barry, 71st N.I., shot through the head; and Lieutenant Thompson, so severely wounded in the arm as to render amputation necessary. Another officer is also said to have been wounded. Lieutenant Proctor appears to have summarily shot two of the guides, and if there were sufficient evidence of their guilt, they were rightly served. An inquiry, however, into his conduct was to be instituted. The officer above mentioned, it is said, got into other difficulty from a somewhat similar cause.

Before quitting Burmah, we must not omit mentioning that the Governor-General, while at Rangoon, proceeded a few miles beyond Meeaday, fixed the boundary-line, caused a pillar to be set up on each side of the river, and, under a royal salute, took formal possession of the country in the name of the Queen. This was not so remarkable as the achievement of a gallant Arctic voyager, who, some years since, in a book in which he recorded his exploits, announced that he took possession of the North Pole in the name of King William, the brave explorer having left George the Fourth reigning, and having received no intelligence from home in the mean time.

From Caubul there is at any rate something stirring, whether it be true or not, as the following extract from the Delhi Gazette will show :—

“Since our last we have received most important news from Cabul, bearing date the 23rd of December. Our correspondent informs us that Dost Mahomed was about to proceed on a tour, the ostensible object of which was to inspect his late conquests in Toorkistan, and to settle some boundary disputes in Khoolum and Mazar. His real object may be guessed from the following statement, furnished by a Cabul correspondent, whose communications have hitherto proved trustworthy :—The Russian army had halted within two marches of Khiva, and was employed in the construction of cantonments. Four Russian agents had reached Dost Mahomed, bearing a message from the Russian general. The message was to this effect :—Dost Mahomed was solicited to proceed with his camp to the banks of the Oxus; there to meet two Russian envoys with letters from the Czar; one addressed to the Ameer himself, and the other to the king of Bokhara, proposing the formation of a quadruple alliance between the Czar, the Khan of Khiva, Dost Mahomed, and the king of Bokhara; the alliance to be agreed upon on the right bank of the Oxus. Should Dost Mahomed agree to the proposal, the Russian general would come in person to the right or northern bank of the Oxus (in the neighbourhood of Chargoor, we presume), and await an interview with the Dost. Dost Mahomed's reply was that he consented to the proposed negotiations; but that he would not cross the Oxus to meet his old enemy the king of Bokhara, unless the Russian general would in the first place cross to the Afghan side of the river, bringing with him as temporary hostages, the son and the prime minister of the king of Bokhara. On these terms he would not only treat with the king of Bokhara, but would forgive all his past offences, holding that the importance of the quadruple alliance should throw all private quarrels into the shade. On these terms then, a treaty of alliance between Russia, Khiva, Bokhara, and Cabul, was on the point of settlement. It is also given out that the Persian prince Alee Morad, who is said to understand 'the European language,' whatever that may be, had quarrelled with his sovereign and fled into the dominions of the king of Bokhara, where he had taken service. A marked alteration had taken place in Dost Mahomed's demeanour since the completion of these arrangements. He seems to have become unusually cheerful on the strength of the promised alliances."

The Bombay Times, in referring to this news, suggests, and we think rightly, that it should be received cum grano; yet it adds, and we think rightly also, that "it shows how wide-spread are the machinations of Russian intrigue." Wide-spread indeed they are, almost as light itself, though their origin and object be alike darkness.

As we are just now travelling westward, it may be as well to go a little further, and bring Persia within our view. The glasses furnished for us are not perhaps of the best, but, in the absence of others, they must do. The following is from the Bombay Times.

"Intelligence has been received from Persia, which seems to warrant the opinion that a Bombay column must shortly be despatched for service in that country. The Persian forces at Tehran had, it was stated, marched en route to the Russian provinces, and when they had proceeded nine marches, they were recalled. On returning to Tehran, the British and Turkish agents were directed to quit, and their flags were lowered. The army in Tehran is kept ready to march at a moment's notice, and it appears that some important move is anticipated, although the precise nature of it has been kept secret. Some allege that a junction is to be formed at Orgunje with the Russian force already in that quarter, and that the whole will march to Candahar and Cabool; others state, that after being joined by the troops raised at Sheraz, the occupation of the sea-board on the Meckran coast would be effected; but the favourite opinion was, that a descent on Bagdad and Bussorah was contemplated, to anticipate which a force of 11,000 men had been thrown into the latter place. Bushire was in a ferment, and it is even said that Captain Kembell, our Resident, had been obliged to leave the town and was living on board one of the ships in the harbour. The island of Karrack is represented as being fortified by the Persian troops, and stores and munitions of war of all kinds had been conveyed there. The above intelligence is no doubt exaggerated, and we may look for authentic information by the H. C. steamer Auckland, now hourly expected. In the mean time the H. C. corvette Falkland is under orders to proceed to the Persian Gulf on the 1st proximo [February], and will be immediately followed by the Augusta; the latter vessel it is understood will convey important despatches from Government to the Resident in Bushire. The intelligence that may be brought by the Auckland will, doubtless, determine the course the Government may deem proper to pursue."

The Presidency towns are not more liberal of news than they have been for some time past. The Governor-General has returned to Calcutta. From the tone held at Madras, it may be inferred that agricultural matters are better than people have been led to expect. It may be mentioned, whether anybody care to know the fact or not, that some of the Madras papers are "full of sound and fury" about Mr. Danby Seymour, who, in the last session of Parliament, dabbled rather considerably in the same commodities himself. By the way, an admirable article on this gentleman, extracted from the Friend of India, will be found elsewhere. He goes to India to seek information, and no doubt he will find it of any tone, of any kind, of any shade that he pleases to select. In this country, when a gentleman wants coat, waistcoat, or nether garments, he communicates his wish to a tailor, who forthwith produces his pattern-books, whence the customer selects the article which hits his fancy. It is much the same with gentlemen wanting information on India. They can have it as readily and as much to their taste, only the informant does not, like the tailor, produce his sample-book of various patterns and colours; he first sounds his customer to ascertain what he would like, and then forth comes the identical article, as perfect as if the news-hunter had manufactured it for himself, and with, of course, far more verisimilitude. Among the things that may be regarded as permanently settled, this is unquestionably one—that a man paying a flying visit to India to pick up information, or what he may call such, will return, perhaps, with stronger prejudices, if that were possible, but certainly with no greater amount of knowledge as to the state of the country, than he took out with him.

The China papers contain much about the usual mass of prosing about the rebels, or whatever they may be. The following, about the American Japan fleet, is in our view more interesting.

"The United States squadron under Commodore Perry, which has for some weeks rendezvoused in this harbour, much to the gratification of the folks here, is under immediate orders for Loochoo and Japan, a portion of the sailing vessels having already started."

The Marquis of Solana, late Governor of Manilla, sojourned two days at Hong-Kong on his way homeward; he carries with him the stamp of royal approbation, and of that of the Anglo-Chinese journalists.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE ARMIES OF INDIA, REPORTED SINCE OUR LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s TROOPS.—Lieut. J. Baldwin, H.M.'s 22nd regiment, at Peshawur, Jan. 2; Capt. J. D. Young, H.M.'s 29th, at Fort William, Jan. 8.

BENGAL.—Maj. G. R. Talbot, 2nd Eur. Fus., at sea, on board the Lady Jocelyn, Dec. 24; Capt. H. Barry, 71st N.I., killed by dacoits in Pegu; Lieut.-Gen. P. Byers, 33rd N.I., at Tonley, aged 76, Feb. 1.

A CANDID WINE-MERCHANT.—A Bombay native shopkeeper, advertising the other day, specified his wines with a degree of veracity equally commendable and unusual among his class, as being by "the best London makers." We wonder whether he really told the truth willingly, or whether it was merely a case of "in vino veritas." Truth, however, it most certainly was.—Bombay Times.

BURMAH.

PEGU.

It is with extreme regret we learn, that in a skirmish with a band of dacoits, in pursuit of whom he had been detached, that fine officer, Capt. Barry, commanding the Arracan local battalion, has lost his life. If we have been correctly informed, our party was led by a treacherous guide into an ambush, and taken thus unawares, maintained an unequal conflict, in which poor Capt. Barry, 71st N.I., was shot through the head. Lieut. Thompson, 68th N.I., received a wound in the arm, which rendered amputation of it necessary; another officer was, we believe, also wounded, though as we are not certain of having heard his name aright, we refrain from mentioning it. The other casualties on our side were twenty-three men killed and wounded. The officer on whom the command of the detachment devolved was represented as being in full retreat, and, as his acquaintance with the country and the road may well be doubted, there is room for apprehension as to the fate of the little party! When is this state of things to end? When will the only proper and sensible course be taken? It is a shameless waste of human life to persevere in our present course. We are not only postponing the final settlement of the province sine die, but are sowing, with our own hands, the seeds of an organised resistance, which will bear bitter fruit ere long. Every triumph, however partial on the part of the dishonest or the disaffected, is so much filched from our honour, and from the prestige of our military fame. Let those, whose province it is, look to these matters. We can only give it as our unprofessional opinion, that bush-fighting and detachment dours will not bring real peace and quietness to Pegu.—Rangoon, Chron. Jan. 7.

Connected with the intelligence we have given above, we have just learned that Lieut. Proctor had two of the treacherous guides tied to trees, and shot for their perfidy, a fate they well merited.

LIEUT. PROCTOR, when out in camp, caught two Burmese in it, whom he considered as spies, and treated them as such he says, according to the laws of war, viz., hanging them forthwith. He reported the matter to Capt. Smith, Deputy Commissioner, as if he had done a very meritorious act. The Governor General ordered him to be placed in close arrest, and an inquiry is to be made, &c.

No clue yet to the murderers of Capt. Latter.

Capt. Ardagh, the new deputy commissioner, arrived in the Mahamuddy, and took charge of his office the same day. Capt. White, late of the military cash chest, has been appointed assistant commissioner vice Baird. Capt. Ardagh proceeds into the districts in a day or two.

The commissioner has been making inquiries to find out the murderers of poor Capt. Latter. A Mr. Cohen, a Jew merchant, has, it is said, thrown a great deal of light on the affair, which will enable the commissioner to discover the murderers.

We can hardly believe that there is truth in the report, that the commissioner has expressed his determination to try Lieut. Proctor for wilful murder in this case. We have no fear as to the result of an inquiry into Lieut. Proctor's conduct, which, as far as we can learn, was perfectly justifiable.—Rangoon Chronicle, Jan. 7.

A party under command of Major Chitty left Prome on the 23rd, on some secret service; the force consisted of 350 Sikhs, 250 2nd Bengal fusiliers, rifle company, 67th N.I., and Ramghur irregular cavalry, with two guns and detachment horse artillery.—Rangoon Chronicle, Jan. 7.

A dacoity attended with serious wounding occurred at Tantabien. Dr. McClelland, accompanied by a large establishment, has proceeded on a tour of inspection to the Tharrawadie forests.

It is rumoured that Pegu will immediately become a division of the Madras army, and that instructions to that effect have been issued by Lord Dalhousie, as Sir John Cheape's health will not admit of his longer retaining the command in Burmah.

PROME.

Extract from a letter from Prome, dated 28th December, 1853:—

"This is a very pretty place and healthy just now, but not cold. Thermometer up to eighty-five degrees in the day time; nights cold. The walks among the hills are very romantic and not too steep. A party of about 800 of all arms went out on the 26th instant under Major Cotton; they go S. E. from this, and will be joined by Captain Smith, deputy-commissioner, and 300 of the Arracan battalion with head-quarters. Two companies of 10th B.N.I. from Henzadah also co-operate. The country is to be cleared of dacoits and one or two rebel chiefs;—after establishing posts of the Sikhs and Arracan battalion, the party is to return to Prome, &c. Judging from reports there will be little or no fighting. Moungh Koungh Gee is said to have already moved back towards the hills, and has opened roads for a retreat there when pressed. His force is stated to be about 500.

Sir John Cheape was at Rangoon. One report says he has come down to apply for leave to sea, on sick certificate; another that he will return to Prome shortly, and proceed with a land column to Tonghoo.

Preparations are being made for the conveyance of H.M.'s 51st K. O. L. I. to Madras.

MOVEMENTS OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The Hon. Co's inland steamer Nerbuddah, with flat Sutledge in tow, having the Governor-General and suite and the commissioner of Pegu on board, arrived from Prome late on Wednesday night last. The Governor-General landed at seven o'clock on Thursday morning under salutes of nineteen guns from the Hon. Co's steam frigate Zenobia and the battery of the naval dockyard, respectively. A guard of honour from H.M.'s 51st K. O. L. I., with the band of the fusiliers, received the Most Noble Marquis at the Custom House Wharf. Brigadier Elliott, K.H., and the officers of the general staff, with all the civil functionaries, were in attendance. A goodly concourse of native merchants and others lined the road on both sides to some extent, through which the Governor-General passed receiving and returning the obeisance of the motley group with great affability and politeness. Having passed through the town and observed the progress of the roads on his way, his Lordship entered the stockade gate, where he was also received by a guard of honour and a salute of nineteen guns from the artillery on the platform. His Lordship then went to the quarters made ready for his reception, being the house in which he resided when last here.—Rangoon Chronicle, Jan. 7.

AVA.

Accounts from Ava represent everything as quiet; and the king and his bellicose brother, the heir apparent, are said to be living in great harmony. Meah Toon continues at Amerapoora. The news of Capt. Latter's murder was received at the palace at noon on the 12th (Dec.), even the very means of obtaining access to his bed-room were known.

The Englishman mentions, on the authority of a private letter from Rangoon, that a plenipotentiary is about to be sent to Ava. It is said, that the choice will fall on Capt. Phayre. A better officer could scarcely be selected. We only hope he will not, like a former plenipotentiary, be put off with endless delays, and at last be allowed an audience on what the Burmese call "the day of humiliations," as the ambassador of the humbled Indian Government.

CAMP WOINGHYEE.

The following is from a correspondent, dated Camp Woinghyee, Dec. 27th:—

"On the evening of the 23rd inst. Capt. Nuthall with the Peguese light infantry and seventeen men of the Madras fusiliers, left this in pursuit of Nga Pyoo, levanted to the northward. Information reached us the day before yesterday that the party had captured twenty eight rafts laden with rice, and "things" belonging to Nga Pyoo. Until the return of this party we are halting here, or hereabouts, as scene-shifting by moving the camp ground occasionally, and each called Woingyee, is included in this farce of an expedition. The locality Nga Pyoo occupied, it cannot be called a stronghold, is a spot of ground, about a furlong in length and breadth, enclosed within a kind of ha-ha of felled trees. If the fight had come off, which didn't, on account of Nga Pyoo's being indisposed, I doubt whether many widows would have been made, or many maidens lost their dear Augustus's. The place evidently would have required a very numerous body of men to have kept the British lion out for five minutes. Some letters were found in Nga Pyoo's house, and one of his state umbrellas—a very seedy canopy, which might have been very well belonged to one of those gentlemen who tell you they have fine cigars to sell, as you walk down Regent-street. If Nga Pyoo committed any atrocities, they must have been in the Showay-gyne district, or at any rate elsewhere than in his own. He seems to have encouraged cultivation here, and altogether to have governed very well. The detachment is expected to leave this on the 29th, en route to Shoay-gyne, as the party of Europeans which went out with Capt. Nuthall will not have wherewithal to eat, if it does not rejoin us by that date."

ARRACAN.

We also learn that the blockhouse in the Aeng Pass is now completed. It is a two-storied building with loopholes, and is provided with two three-pounders. We also hear that the barracks at Akyab are progressing rapidly, and are expected to be ready by the first of May next, when the detachment at Kyonk Phyoo will move up to Akyab, which is a much healthier station.

COURT OF INQUIRY ON THE ASSASSINATION OF CAPTAIN LATTER.

A court of inquiry assembled at Prome to investigate the circumstances attending Capt. Latter's assassination; and although we purposely abstained, in our last summary, from commenting on his melancholy end, in the hope that circumstances of a less painful nature than those then before the public would be brought to light; yet, as such has not been the case, we now think it proper to lay before our readers what seems to us to be the most correct version of the sad affair. In his political capacity, Capt. Latter, nearly a year ago, found it necessary to proceed against the leader of a band of dacoits, whose head-quarters was a village fifteen miles to the south-east of Prome. With his usual promptitude he set forth; but rumour was too quick for him, and when he arrived at the village, he found it deserted and the chief fled. So nearly, however, had he accomplished his purpose, that the chief had no time to remove his family; they all therefore fell into the hands of the captor. Capt. Latter is dead, and we would deal lightly with his memory; but if accounts be true, we fear that his passion overcame his prudence, and that the outlawed chief sustained at his hands disgrace and dishonour. This determined the dacoit to take a deep and signal revenge; and he seems to have carried out his schemes with that silent steadiness of purpose and moderation that guarantee success, and prove to the world, that when "desperation urges and subtility guides," few, if any, are safe. Some time after the flight of the chief, Captain Latter made the acquaintance of a Burmese female, who is said to have been in the pay of the dacoit, and from whom he learned the habits of the British officer. She kept up a correspondence all the time with her employer, and when everything was ready, and the time had come to strike the blow, the hired assassins, disguised in female attire, entered unquestioned into the officer's house, and, guided by the information which she had furnished, found no difficulty in gaining his sleeping-apartment and executing their task. It seems that there were four assassins employed, the blood-money being one thousand rupees, and that at a given signal they fell upon their victim, one stopping his mouth, and the others stabbing him at the same moment. A British spy, who had been seized on suspicion at the village of Emah, near Prome, heard, while in the stocks, the Burmese discussing the particulars of the murder, and, on being released, he made his way to the house of the dishonoured chieftain, and there heard the details in full length. He also saw the assassins, and from the way they were enjoying themselves, it is certain that they must have received the promised reward. Each of the four men claimed to have given a wound, but this was only done by the man who stopped the murdered officer's breath in order to make good his claim to the promised recompense. On making sure that they had despatched their victim, the murderers made their way back to the village from whence they had come, and would have decapitated the dead body, but for the hurry attendant on their flight. On these matters becoming known at Prome, the authorities sent a strong detachment secretly to the village to arrest the assassins; but although the village was surrounded in silence and without exciting the least alarm, yet not a soul was to be found in the house in which the murderers were said to have been. It is added, that the chief who instigated the murder has fled to Ava, whither the news of the assassination reached, but it is not known with what effect. We regret to state that Lieut. Pruter when out in camp a Prome caught two Burmese, whom he considered as spies, and whom he forthwith hung. He then reported the matter, alleging that he had treated them according to the laws of war. The Governor-General has ordered him to be placed in close arrest, and an inquiry is to be made. A mission is about to proceed to Ava; Captain Phayre to go as plenipotentiary, when, it is hoped, that a final settlement will be made with the Burmese without further bloodshed. The Governor-General, after an absence of five weeks, returned to Calcutta on the 17th inst. During his stay at Rangoon, he proceeded about six miles beyond Meeaday and fixed the boundary-line, causing pillars to be built on either side of the river, and he took formal possession of the country in the name of the Queen, under a royal salute. The deputy quarter-master-general of the Bengal army has been appointed special deputy commissioner for the demarcation of the frontier line in Pegu.—Bombay Times, Jan. 28.

FAREWELL DINNER TO MAJOR HILL,
THE DEFENDER OF PEGU.

Tonghoo, Dec. 12, 1853.

On Saturday, the 10th inst., the officers of the 1st Madras Fusiliers entertained their commanding officer, Major Hill, at dinner, prior to his departure for the high post to which he has been appointed by the Most Noble the Governor-General of India. Of course, all the station was invited to meet the defender of Pegu; and a more pleasant and enthusiastic entertainment we hardly recollect to have enjoyed in the course of our eastern social experience. It was in every way worthy of the distinguished guest of the evening, and the gallant regiment in which he rose, and in which, for two-and-thirty years, on service and in cantonment, he has proved himself an active and zealous officer. The speeches, though brief, were of a highly appropriate character. In proposing the health of the gallant major, Captain R—, of the fusiliers, after a few words on the services of his brother officer in the first and second Burmese wars, alluded to the loss the regiment would sustain by the departure of one of its best friends. The grand toast of the occasion, coupled with a sincere wish from the gallant captain that its distinguished subject may flourish in his new position, was received with a martial enthusiasm sufficiently audible, one might fancy, to have roused the 'Apotheosis' rapturous of some great mortal who had seen Tonghoo in all its pristine splendour, but who now wished, under British rule, to dwell upon earth! After some spirit-stirring music, Major Hill rose. We shall merely give the concluding remark of his speech, and a very beautiful conclusion it was—that wherever he might be, whatever might be his lot, his heart would always remain with his regiment! In the course of the evening, a Pegu march, composed with infinite tact by M. Meyer, was played in honour of the small garrison which had so highly distinguished itself at the defence of Pegu. After the march, Colonel A—, Madras artillery, rose and proposed "The First Madras Fusiliers"—a regiment which had fought for a century by the side of his own. The colonel remarked that it was nearly twenty-eight years ago since he saw Major Hill in India after his return from the first Burmese war, when he envied him the honours he had won on the field. At length the gallant major had met with his reward, on which he very highly congratulated him; and was sure that if, in his new post, any opportunity should occur, Major Hill would lead on his force to victory and to glory! In reply to this, Major Hill said, that if the gallant colonel had envied him the slight distinction he had won at an early age, there was good reason for the former—from the several distinguishing marks which he wore—being the envy of soldiers now. Wherever service was to be seen, there Colonel A— was to be found at the post of honour and danger! On "the Madras Artillery" being proposed, Lieut. L— having been deputed by Colonel A— to return thanks, alluded to Clive's famous defence of Arcot—a name which adorns the colours of the Madras Fusilier regiment. Upwards of a century later, while our splendid dominion was pushing its way slowly in Eastern Asia, that corps had shared in an admirable defence of Pegu. It is on such critical occasions as those—when a few Europeans and natives keep their ground against overwhelming thousands of the enemy—that the true metal of soldiers is tried. It must be highly pleasing to the Madras army to find that, through the liberality of the head of the Indian Government, one of its officers was selected, on account of gallant conduct, for such a high command as that of the Gwalior Contingent!—Captain R— gave the Pegu Commission, on which Mr. O'R— returned thanks, alluding to the kindness he had ever received from the Fusiliers, also to the bond of union which always exists between the civil and military. With half of such a regiment as this, he would not fear to go to Ava, if required in that quarter. Major Hill proposed the toast of "Lieut. S— and the Madras Sappers"—a gallant band, ever foremost in the fray—who could do as much work in ten hours as ordinary natives in six-and-thirty. On many occasions they had been highly distinguished; and even in Scinde, while with Major Henderson, they drew forth praise from Sir Charles Napier. Lieut. S—, after repeated bursts of generous admiration, returned thanks, in which he alluded to his departed brother officer, Lieut. Harris, who distinguished himself at the defence of Pegu—where Lieut. S— had not the honour of being present—but, should occasion require, he trusted that his Sappers would ever be found of real service to the State. "The absent members of the Fusiliers" was proposed by Dr. B—, and very warmly received. About the last toast was that of "Lieut. M— and the Madras Engineers." Lieut. M— regretted he had not shared in the active business of the war, but trusted that, should occasion require, he would not be found wanting. He much regretted not having marched with the Martaban column. At a late hour the party broke up, every one being highly delighted—and not the least so the gallant major—with the evening's entertainment.—Chronicle, Dec. 28.

BENGAL.

MR. DANBY SEYMOUR, AND HIS MOVEMENTS.

We hailed the arrival of Mr. Danby Seymour in India, with a pleasure which was not diminished by the fact, that he was understood to be the accredited agent of the Indian Reform Association.

It is always for the advantage of India that her condition should be noted and commented on by inexperienced eyes, by men who bring with them the fresh intelligence of Europe, and to whom habit has not rendered everything, good and evil, alike familiar. It was peculiarly for her advantage that she should be visited by Mr. Danby Seymour. The works of tourists in general, incorrect as they may be, still familiarise the public mind with Indian facts, enable the people of England to estimate some few of the difficulties with which we have to contend, and prepare them for at least a partial comprehension of the policy of British rule. All this we expected to obtain in an unusual degree from Mr. Danby Seymour. That gentleman, himself a prominent though not an influential member of Parliament, was known to be bitterly prejudiced against the existing Government of India. On the other hand, he was an educated English gentleman, capable from his own ability of forming a fair estimate of the things he saw around him, and from position, of securing a fair hearing before the most powerful audience in the world. The mere fact, also, that he had undertaken a toilsome journey at an inconvenient season, in order to hear with his own ears, and see with his own eyes, was greatly in favour of his character for impartiality. If his verdict had been favourable, it would have proved that even prejudice required only a knowledge of the facts to acquit the Indian Government. If it had been unfavourable, we should at least have had the satisfaction of hearing the worst at last.

We regret that information has reached us which is calculated to diminish, if not destroy, all these amiable illusions. Mr. Seymour's proceedings since his arrival have been such as to weaken, if not dispel, all confidence in his judgment or his motives. On his arrival, he was readily assisted in his endeavours to obtain the information of which he declared himself desirous. The records of Government were thrown open to him, and he was invited to search for himself among archives the most voluminous and free-spoken in the world. Like George Thompson, under similar circumstances, he neglected to avail himself of the invitation. He determined to visit the interior, and see everything for himself. There was no lack of companions, but Mr. Seymour selected two.

One was a native, Lutchmun Pursoo Chetty, proprietor of the Madras Crescent, and the great supporter of Mr. Malcolm Lewin in his attacks upon Lord Tweeddale, and the "proselytizing administration." He is also chairman of the Madras Association, a fact which may serve to explain the bitterness of that body against the "Anglican priesthood." The second was an East Indian, connected with the office of the Madras Athenæum. With these two gentlemen in his train to act as interpreters among the people, of whose language he did not know a word, Mr. Seymour started for the South. Wherever he proceeded, it was announced that the Queen's Commissioner had arrived, charged to redress all grievances, and listen to all complaints. Printed manifestoes were scattered broadcast, announcing that all wrongs were immediately to be redressed, that all burdens were to be removed, and that Rs. 50,000 were required for the expenses of the association. All this might have been excused. The exaggeration is not much greater than is frequently heard in platform speeches in England; and to the majority of Englishmen, active philanthropy and a great subscription appear to have some natural connection.

Mr. Seymour may have been but partially aware of some of the statements issued in his name, but of the next method of obtaining information, he must have been thoroughly cognizant. It is so absurd, that were our authority less reliable, we should hesitate to repeat the statement. Mr. Seymour carried with him from Madras a great picture, on which had been depicted all the varieties of torture the fertile imagination of the artist had been able to invent. This picture is hung up in the kind of catcherry maintained by Mr. Seymour, and the ryots, as they come up, are asked to which of those tortures they have been subjected. Let any one who knows the Madras ryot, and the hopeless stupor with which an uneducated native regards a picture of any kind, imagine the reply. Complaints of all kinds, petitions, and remonstrances are daily received, the people are condoled with on the incapability of the European officers, and informed that every document they present will speedily be laid before the Queen. Any one with the slightest acquaintance with the native character, can imagine the result. Every amiable dismissed for peculation, every ryot in arrears, every tenant whose land has lapsed to Government, and every suitor whose suit has been decided against him, flocks to the tent of the English commissioner, who listens with a grave patience worthy of a better cause to the tales of aggrieved ryots,—through these interpreters.

We do not say Mr. Seymour is cognizant of half the absurdities committed in his name. He certainly does not talk nonsense about the Queen, or represent himself as the delegate of Parliament. But he suffers himself to be deceived; and whatever his verdict may ultimately be, it will be impossible to place much confidence in his impressions of Madras.—Friend of India, Jan. 12th.

A REVOLTING TRAGEDY.

Umballa has been the scene of a tragedy so revolting, that the pen can hardly describe it; and the author of this tragedy is a British officer! We should not trust ourselves to publish the following statement, but for the high character of the officer who sends it:—

UMBALLA, Jan. 8th, 1854.—What I have to relate is very necessary for a public journalist to be made acquainted with as soon as possible.

It appears that an officer (who has just been so fortunate as to find himself acquitted by a court-martial) had paid up and dismissed a servant who had been in his employ as bearer, and I believe saacs. For some reason or other, some say on suspicion of the man having robbed him, others say that he wanted him again to enter his services, he sent for him about two or three on the morning of the 6th. The man, who resides in the bazaar of the 9th Lancers, at first refused to come; Mr. — then sent again either through the bazaar chowdry or otherwise, and the man considering himself "lacher," went in spite of the entreaties of his wife;—he never returned alive. Mr. — on his coming, ordered his bhiste, mehter, and dhobie, to tie up the man; the last named refused, and ran away; the two first did what was ordered, and Mr. — commenced flogging the man with a heavy hunting-whip, and at last turned the weapon and struck him with the butt end on and behind the head; the man's skull was completely fractured, he was fearfully wounded in the body, and then only Mr. — left him. It is to be inferred that if he were ever really tied up that he was then liberated, for it appears Mr. — called him, and the two servants before mentioned said, "What is the use; the man is dying." Upon this Mr. — told them to take the man out, and put him in the road, in order that he might not be known as the perpetrator; and to be sure and tell no one.

He assisted, it appears, in taking him out of the house, and the two servants, who had not spirit or proper feeling to take means to stop the first proceeding or alarm others, had so much compunction that, although they laid the dying man in the road, they told all they saw that the sahib had killed the man. The poor fellow died in agonies, biting and clawing the dust; in fact, to hear the description, it is heart-rending. His cries were heard two compounds off. Mr. —, after considerable persuasion, was induced to make a report to the officiating cantonment magistrate of what he said had occurred, and after doing so, he told another officer that he had been robbed, his room having been entered at 2 A.M. by this bearer and six other men, and that he had unfortunately killed the former. The evidence on the matter appears to have been very plain and concise.

P.S.—I re-open my note to tell you that a guard of one sergeant, one corporal, and four privates of the 9th Lancers is placed over Mr. —, one as a sentry being with him in the room; besides this there is a sepoy guard, I believe, and some chup-rassies. There is an idea gaining ground that the unfortunate man committed this murder to prevent the servant from telling something that he knew; and the bheesee and mether, who are also confined, stated, I understand, that Mr. — first tried to shoot the man, but the gun missed fire; he then took the whip and beat him.

The case will, of course, speedily come before the proper tribunal, when we devoutly hope that something may turn up in mitigation of a crime, the aspect of which at present is so appalling.—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 11.

INCREASING TEMPERANCE OF THE EUROPEANS.

It is seldom that we can find either space or inclination to record details of improvements in the commissariat. A reform has, however, been recently effected on a point of vital importance to the health of the European soldier, and we are happy to believe that it has been completely successful. The Government has diminished drunkenness in the army, as it is proposed to diminish it in England, not by rendering the sale of spirits a misdemeanor, but by diminishing the cost of liquor less injurious to the constitution. Often been argued that it is the duty on wine which London artisans to the gin-shop, and it seems certain that the porter has induced the European soldier to abandon rum.

Up to 1851, rum was the only liquor allowed to soldiers; the army drank rum in the Peninsula, and the Indian Government contracted with local distillers for an annual supply of fixed strength. The liquor was kept for a period of three years in store, and then, after receiving an admixture of ten per cent of water, sold to regimental canteens at thirteen annas and four pie per gallon. Another, and not inconsiderable, profit was derived from the circumstance that the liquor was bought at one and sold by another measure. At first the arrangement produced no financial advantage, but by degrees the soldiers found out that the rum kept in store for three years was of a much superior quality to the stuff obtainable from licensed liquor venders.

The demand increased steadily, and in 1851 it actually yielded a net revenue of nearly two lacs of rupees. However gratifying that result might have been financially, yet it on the other hand afforded a painful proof of the increasing predilection of the soldier for spirituous liquors. The maximum quantity issuable to each soldier was fixed by the rules, and of course could not be exceeded; but, nevertheless, it was surmised, and by subsequent information fully proved, that the desire for liquor increased, and was gratified by the consumption of the "diluted prussic acid" of bazars. The glaring increase which the annual reports of the Military Board thus exhibited, attracted the attention of Government, and the Governor-General determined at once to check the growing evil by raising the price of rum, and by placing ale and porter within the reach of the soldier at a moderate cost. The Court of Directors were therefore recommended to contract at home for the annual supply of malt liquor, to be delivered at the risk of the contractor in India, and accepted after approval by special committees. The proposal met with the cordial approval of the home authorities, and the Governor-General, on the 17th July of 1852, passed an order "fixing the price of rum at 2 rupees per gallon, old wine measure, and directing that the difference between the above charge and the cost be credited to a general fund, from which a monthly allowance is to be made to canteens, for the purpose of reducing the retail price of malt liquor." This order was shortly afterwards followed by a public notification, stating the terms on which porter and ale would be supplied by Government to canteens, and in a General Order by the Commander-in-Chief, issued on the 18th March, 1853, it was determined that the monthly allowance payable out of the rum profits for the purpose of reducing the retail price of malt liquor, should be Rs. 140-14-7 for each hundred men. It was also ordered that the maximum issue to any one man should not exceed three quarts of malt liquor, without spirits, and two quarts with one dram in one day; or one quart of beer with both drams of spirits.

We are happy to learn that, although the arrangements must still be considered in their infancy, there are already unmistakable proofs that they will work well. The accounts of the commissariat, it is said, show a steady decrease in the sale of rum against a large increase in that of ale and porter, whilst the recent improvement in the standard of rations absorbs the three annas and four pie deducted from the soldier's pay. He buys, therefore, porter at the canteen, and cannot afford to purchase rum in the bazaar. The change must soon be apparent, but it has not been effected without loss.

In fixing the monthly allowance to the canteen it was expected that the profits derived from the sale of rum would more than cover the outlay, and that Government would suffer only the loss of the two lacs of rupees formerly obtained from the traffic in rum.

It is, however, clear, that in its practical result, the loss will be much greater, inasmuch as the beer-cheapening allowance is a fixed monthly expenditure payable out of a fund, the profits of which decrease as the taste for the less injurious liquor extends. This fact will be better seen on a reference to figures. Supposing 100 soldiers to avail themselves of the option allowed to them by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's order of the 18th March, 1853, and take on an average two quarts of beer with one dram of spirits, their monthly consumption would be as follows:—

Beer: 2 qts.  $\times 30 = 60 \times 100 = 6,000$  quarts.
Spirits: 1 dram  $\times 30 = 30 \times 100 = 3,000 = 75$  gallons.

The average profit derived by Government by the sale of rum is about Re. 1 5 a per gallon, and at that rate the above 75 gallons would yield Rs. 98-7, but as the beer-cheapening allowance is fixed at Rs. 140-14-7, Government will be a loser to the extent of Rs. 42-7-7 for each 100 men consuming beer and spirits in the proportions mentioned above. It may perhaps be premature to suppose that those proportions will be the result of the average consumption in all the regiments in India, but nevertheless a modification of the present arrangements may become recommended. We question, however, whether a loss of this kind will be weighed against the improved health of the soldiers, more especially as that health is ultimately a financial question of no ordinary magnitude.—Friend of India.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 8th arrived at Calcutta Jan. 14th (per Hindustan).

MR. ACTING MASTER PILOT LAYTON, who has been first praised by the Governor-General for having taken charge of the unfortunate ship Sir George Seymour, and afterwards arraigned before a Marine Court for the very same reason, has been fully acquitted by that tribunal.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has raised its rate of discount from 4 to 5 per cent.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.—The accounts of the Asiatic Society of Bengal were submitted to that body at the annual meeting on the 4th January. It appears, that notwithstanding certain heavy expenses, after providing for repairs, and striking off Rs. 2,000 for bad debts, the society has still a disposable capital of Rs. 10,000. Its estimated income for the current year amounts to—

Contributions from 123 resident members.....	Rs. 7,872
Government grants.....	7,368
Journal.....	1,000
Sale of society's publications.....	2,200
Ditto in England.....	200

Total..... 18,640

The expenditure, it is believed, will be Rs. 14,644, of which Rs. 1,000 is for books.

NATIVE IDEAS OF THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The Hurkaru repeats an amusing story as to native ideas on the subject of the Electric Telegraph. A crowd gathered round to see it laid down in Calcutta. Opinions were divided as to the intention of the wires, when Young Bengal stepped forward, and gave his opinion, that "they were conductors to a galvanic battery by means of which the Gas Company had contracted to light the city with Belatee batee" (English lightning).

THE OPIUM CULTIVATION OF Bhagulpore district will be forty-five per cent. in excess of that of 1852-53. It is the fashion in England to assert that the opium cultivation is compulsory. Nevertheless, the instant the restrictions are removed, it increases in the ratio of nearly one half within two years.

CALCUTTA BIBLE SOCIETY.—We perceive from the report of the annual meeting of the Calcutta Auxiliary Bible Society, that the aggregate number of scriptures issued during the past year was 40,887. Of these, 25,208 were in the Bengalee language.

LIEUT. G. B. MALLESON, the first officer who has been ordered to study the new system of accounts in the office of the auditor of commissariat account, has passed an examination with the highest credit, and in consequence been appointed to the charge of a commissariat division in Burmah.

MR. HODDAY has been ordered by Government to survey the country lying between Moulemin and the Sitang river.

CIVIL CHANGES.—It is said that, on the retirement of Mr. Gough, revenue commissioner of the Patna division, Mr. Crawford, agent to the Governor-General in the S.W. frontier, is to succeed him, Mr. Binney Colvin being confirmed in the Patna commissionership, but continuing to occupy a seat on the bench of the Sudder Court.

MR. HOUSTON has been removed permanently from the list of Bengal civilians. It is stated that the Court of Directors have desisted from calling upon that gentleman to resign the service, from a charitable supposition that he must be labouring under an aberration of intellect.—Hurkaru.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN J. D. YOUNG.—Our obituary yesterday announced the death of Captain J. D. Young, of H.M.'s 29th regiment, and brigade major, Queen's troops, Fort William. His remains were interred yesterday morning in the burial-ground at Alipore, with the usual military honours. The procession moved out of the fort about sunrise, composed principally of the officers and men of the 29th, in full uniform, accompanied by the Governor-General's band, playing Handel's "Dead March in the Oratorio of Saul." The effect was very solemn and imposing. The burial service was read by the fort chaplain, and three volleys discharged over the grave closed the services of the melancholy occasion. The deceased officer has long been in bad health. His age, we are told, was forty-seven.—Englishman, Jan. 10.

RAJMAHAL.—ASSASSINATION OF LIEUTENANT GODBY.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that Kad'r Khan, who received Rs. 6,000 per annum from Government, is in custody on suspicion of having instigated the attempted assassination of Lieutenant Godby.

REWARDS FOR HIGH PROFICIENCY.—We understand that the following civil servants have received rewards from Government for certificates of high proficiency, as follows:—Mr. A. Jenkins, Rs. 800, for a certificate of high proficiency in the Oordoo language; Mr. C. C. Chapman, Rs. 800, in Sanscrit language; and Mr. W. Waterfield, Rs. 800, for a degree of honour in Sanscrit.—Hurkaru.

CANDIDATES FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF BRIGADE MAJOR.—There are, as might naturally be imagined, already numerous candidates in the field for the appointment of brigade major, Queen's troops, Fort William, just vacated by the lamented death of Captain Young. We think that if all the applicants except one would apply to us, we could "tell them something to their advantage," as Joseph Adie would say, that is, if they would consider the saving them the useless trouble of writing for what they cannot get, a kindness on our part. We don't mind staking our reputation for correctness of prophecy in the military line, on the assertion that Captain L. H. Hamilton, of the 87th Royal Irish fusiliers, late assistant adjutant-general with the Burmah field force, and now commanding the Darjeeling dépôt, will be the new brigade major, Queen's troops, at the presidency. Those who may choose to expend foolscap and hope on the appointment after this, are of course at liberty to do so, and we wish them every success.—Morning Chronicle, Jan. 11.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief arrived at Cawnpore on Friday morning under the usual salute. His Excellency's camp took up their position on the mydaun facing the old cavalry barracks. At noon on Saturday, his Excellency held a levee, and Lady Gomm received the ladies resident in cantonments. The levee and reception were numerously attended, and his Excellency entertained a select party at dinner in the evening. On Sunday, Sir W. Gomm and suite paid a visit to St. John's, where the Rev. H. Hamilton officiated in the evening. Lady Gomm left for Lucknow on a visit to the resident. It is expected that the camp will not break up till Friday next. A review and some fireworks in the artillery fort are said to be in contemplation. The heads of departments are invited to a banquet on Tuesday. The absence of Lady Gomm and the paucity of the fair sex has destroyed the hope and expectations of a "leetle" dance.—Mofussilite, Jan. 19.

ABOLITION OF THE OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.—It will be interesting to the public to learn something of the changes which are likely to occur consequent upon the abolition of the office now held by Mr. Dampier as superintendent of police. It has already been announced that the duties of this office will be apportioned among the various commissioners, and that a new revenue division will be created, to be called the Burdwan division. In carrying out the new arrangements, the Bhaugulpore Division will consist of Bhaugulpore, Monghyr, Tirhoot, and Purnea. —The Rajshahye Division will consist of Dinapore and Malda (taken from the Bhaugulpore division), together with Rajshahye, Pubna, and Bograh (at present in the Moorsshedabad division). —The Burdwan Division will consist of Moorsshedabad, Bheerboom, Burdwan, Bancoorah, and Hooghly (taken from the Jessore division), and Midnapore, taken from the Cuttack division. —The Cuttack Division will consist of Cuttack, Pooree, Balasore, and the Tributary Mehals. —The Calcutta Division will consist of the 24-Pergunnahs, Nuddeah, Jessore, Calcutta, and the Sunderbunds.

BUNDELKHAND.—We have already announced the death of three rajahs in Bundelkhand, viz., at Jhansee, Theree, and Chutturpoor. All of them died without any issue. We have heard that the widow and the dewan of the former adopted one little boy without the knowledge of the late Rajah, and the usual ceremony of the adoption, with the view to grasp all the power of the state in their own hands, while the adopted boy remains minor, and are intriguing to set aside the claim. "Keeshun Row," the only nearest relation of the late Rajah, or the son of "Thama Bace," the grand daughter of "Shew Ram Bhow," who was of great service to the English government in subjugating the refractory chiefs of Bundelkhand, and who was to succeed in the Raj of Jhansee, first by his second son Boog Nath Row, and again by Gunga Dhur Row, the late Rajah of Jhansee. There has appeared another claimant for the "Jhansee Guddee" in the person of the descendant of the brother of "Shew Ram Bhow." So there are now at Jhansee three candidates for one "Guddee." The widow and the adopted lad of the second, or of the "Theree Rajah," have already commenced fighting. The former has applied for the British protection; and the latter, to establish his authority in a firmer ground, has committed some cruelties, and put the widow in confinement. The advice of the political officer has been rejected; and whether the report is true or not, we are informed that some troops are called from the Gwalior contingent, &c. We have heard nothing of the third "Raj," or of Chutturpoor. All the chiefs or rajahs, since Mr. Bushby's departure, are in suspense; whether the resolution of the Governor-General in Council, dated December, 1852, is to come into operation regarding the nomination of Sir Robert Hamilton as political chief of Bundelkhand, Gwalior, and Indoree, or has gone to the wind. This delay has really done much harm by keeping the chiefs in suspense, who expecting change in the political administration, are hesitating to come to an amicable settlement at once, which our political assistants are now inculcating. The time has really come, that Sir Robert Hamilton (who is a matchless authority in conciliating, knowing the feelings, civilizing, keeping in order, and winning the affections of the native rajahs) ought to make his appearance in Bundelkhand, and make every principality in this country rise in prosperity and civilization.—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 11.

PESHAWUR, 4TH JAN.—A new fort capable of containing 600 men, is to be built on the site at present occupied by the bungalows of Dr. Cox and the late Col. Mackeson. It is a most fortunate thing for the estate of the latter, as otherwise his house, which probably cost some Rs. 15,000, would not have realized more than Rs. 2,000 or 3,000. All quiet in the station, and no robberies, thanks to the police arrangements and new chowkeedaree system. The prevailing rumour is that Col. Taylor will be posted to this brigade. At one time Col. Markham was the favourite, but there is some difficulty arising from the prescribed number of Queen's brigades being already filled up. Our society is very much changed, owing to so many arrivals and departures. The 32nd marched this morning. Three companies of the 53rd I hear start on the 10th, and the remainder of the regiment about the 20th. The 75th is expected during the week. The 1st Sikhs are to take the forts of Shubkudr, Michnee, and Abuzae, and the present castellains, I am sorry to hear, lose their appointments.—Delhi Gazette, January 11.

KOHAT.—A letter from Kohat, dated the 1st of January, 1854, affords the following:—"All is quiet here. Some officers' servants were rifled in the Pass not long ago; but as they were only rifled, not shot, it is assumed to be a sign of the dawning of civilization among the Afreedies! If they take to pillaging without bloodshed, they will doubtless settle down to be very pleasant neighbours. By the way, the Chronicle of to-day tells us of a still better sign of reformation. A British deputy-commissioner ate his mutton-chop at an Afreedie picnic the other day. I wonder how the Boree chops were relished just before? Our deputy-commissioner has 'broken bread' with them long enough ago, and I suppose they dipped into the same salt-cellar; however, whether he ate any of theirs or not, it is pretty sure that they have eaten a lot of his! The Wuzerees were said to be 'up' not long ago in the Bunnoo district, and the fort of Bha-door Khel—that ultima Thule—was said to be threatened; but, like Outram's Beloochees, they turned out to be 'in backram.'"—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 7.

MILITARY ON-DITS.—The Commander-in-Chief is expected at Cawnpore on the 14th January.—The 65th regiment N.I., which arrived from Umritsur, is encamped outside the fort at Calcutta.—The Commander-in-Chief is for the future to reside at Calcutta, taking his seat in the Supreme Council, and his movements are to be held at the disposal of the Governor-General.—The artillery head-quarters embarked on board the Lady Thackwell, at Cossipore, on the 19th Jan.—The 1st irregular cavalry will march from Segowly on or about the 18th Jan., and be at the following places about the dates mentioned:—Ghazepore, 31st Jan.; Benares, 4th, Allahabad, 13th, and Cawnpore, 25th Feb.; Alleghur, 16th, and Delhi, 24th March; Umballa, 7th, Ludiana, 18th, Jullundur, 21st, and Goordaspore, 28th April.—The 3rd cavalry arrived at Agra on Monday the 9th Jan. They halt the 10th and 11th, and march again en route to Meerut on the 12th. They were halted for eight days at Jhansi on account of the Tehree Rajah's death. They expect to reach Meerut in twelve days from Agra, making one halt at Allyghur.—The 12th irregular cavalry were at Ghazepore on the 2nd Jan., en route to Segowly. They expected to reach their destination about the 17th.—The 8th irregular cavalry were at Cawnpore on the 8th Jan.—The right wing of H.M.'s 8th regt. from Deesa were to halt at Dowlutpore. The other wing was to follow in three days under Major Gheathead.—The left wing of H.M.'s 81st remains in camp at Cawnpore till further orders.—We hear that the 17th irregular cavalry are to be stationed at Attock. There is evidently a desire on the part of Government to strengthen that frontier.—H.M.'s 96th regiment arrived at Allyghur on the 9th Jan., and expected to reach Cawnpore about the 23rd.—The 14th N.I. arrived at Ferozepore on the 9th Jan.; they were to halt on the 10th and 11th, and march on the 12th for Multan.—The 32nd N.I. were at Goorshai-gunge on the 9th Jan.—The 31th N.I., in progress from Wuzerabad to Lucknow, arrived at Kurnaul on the 12th Jan. They were to resume their march on the 13th, halt at Paneeput on Sunday (to-morrow), and be at Delhi on the 20th Jan.—The 38th light infantry from Seihel, en route for Cawnpore, reached Dacca on the 3rd Jan. They were to halt for a day or two to change boats. The regiment left Sylhet on the 20th of December. We are glad to learn that there was scarcely any sickness in the regiment.—The 51st N.I. marched into Rawul Pindee on the morning of the 8th Jan. The Khelat-i-Ghilzie regiment was to march from the same station on the morning of the 11th.—The 62nd N.I. arrived at Nowshera on the 3rd Jan.

EXAMINATIONS IN HINDUSTANI.

Head Quarters, Camp, Agra, Dec. 14, 1853.—The Committee of Examiners in the college of Fort William having represented to the Commander-in-Chief that, with reference to the reports of the oral examinations as well as the written exercises which passed under the review last July, "it is their opinion very much greater attention should be paid to the correct and idiomatic rendering of English into Hindoostanee by candidates for passing the military interpreter's test," Sir W. Gomm desires to call the attention of future candidates for this examination to the subject, and to express his concurrence in the views of the college committee to the effect, that it is indispensably necessary candidates shall prove themselves to have acquired a thorough proficiency in the above particular, before they be pronounced qualified to perform the important duties of the office of military interpreter, and that not even the highest qualifications in book-learning can compensate for deficiency in colloquial knowledge, or their written exercises.

2. His Excellency, under this view, calls on station committees of examination to perform conscientiously and impartially their duty to the State, towards ensuring competency on the part of officers who desire to fill the situation of interpreter,—as from their reports on the oral examinations must the college committee be to a considerable extent guided in forming the final opinion they are called upon to give as to the fitness or otherwise of the candidates for passing this test.

3. The Commander-in-Chief regrets that the experience of last year renders it necessary to take this opportunity to enjoin upon these committees a more strict observance of the orders of Government, which require their personal supervision of the candidates while performing their exercises. This rule admits of no modification; and in future all reports which do not contain an explicit declaration that the exercises have been performed actually in the presence of the committee, will be considered incomplete and returned accordingly.

4. The college committee having resolved that they will consider as vitiated the examination of any candidate whose exercises afford evidence of his having communicated in any way with another candidate, or otherwise improperly obtained aid, this resolution is now notified for general information; and his Excellency cautions those who may be found to have had recourse to any such disingenuous measures, and thus endeavoured to impose upon the authorities appointed to pronounce upon their qualifications, that they will incur such further penalty as may be deemed adequate for such improper and derogatory conduct.

5. The attention of officers commanding divisions and stations is called to the 6th paragraph of the General Order by the Governor-General, of 3rd October, 1851, which directs that the half-yearly committees of examination shall be assembled at all stations on the same day; and the Commander-in-Chief desires that for the future, whenever circumstances may render it impracticable to convene these committees on the prescribed dates, viz. the 10th January and 10th July, a report explaining the reason for the deviation shall invariably be made to head-quarters, for his information and eventually that of Government.

FOUR PER CENT. LOAN.

January 11, 1854.—Notice is hereby given, that proprietors of promissory notes of the four per cent. loan of 1842-3, who may be bona fide resident in Europe, will be entitled, during the pleasure of the Honourable the Court of Directors, to a remittance of their interest half-yearly by bills to be drawn on the Honourable Court at twelve months' date, and at 1s. 10d. for the Company's rupee.

By order of the Honourable the President in Council.

C. ALLEN,

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'s 51st K. O. L. I.

Head Quarters, Promé, Dec. 20th, 1853.—On the approaching departure of H.M.'s 51st K. O. L. I. from Burmah for England, Brigadier-General Sir John Cheape, K.C.B., commanding the division, begs to record the great satisfaction with which he has viewed the excellent conduct of the regiment since it has been under his command.

The discipline, good order, and soldierly qualities of the men cannot be exceeded, and the Brigadier-General has observed that they have been equally ready in forming posts and in defending them—in taking up quarters and accommodating themselves to the circumstances of the country, or in acting against the enemy whenever called upon, or opportunity offered.

The annals of the regiment may tell of fields of greater note; but of none in which the sterling worth of the regiment has been more fully tried and shown than in its service in Burmah.

On many occasions the greatest gallantry has been displayed, and in particular by a detachment under the command of Captain Irby, of this distinguished regiment, in storming the enemy's position in almost the last action fought in this war.

The Brigadier-General thanks the regiment most cordially for all their good conduct, and his especial thanks are due to the commanding officer, Captain Anderson, for the good discipline and efficient state of the regiment, which is so highly creditable to him.

He begs to offer to Captain Anderson, and to the officers and men, his best wishes and assurances of the warm interest he will ever entertain for their happiness, welfare, and prosperity.

FREIGHTS.

Our quotations are, to London and Liverpool, 4l. to 4l. 10s.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Jan. 18).—Cotton Goods, &c.—The amount of business reported during the last fortnight is considerable. Plain Staple Cloths of nearly all sorts have been in good demand at fully former rates. The light imports of December will, no doubt, keep dealers on the alert for some time. Grey Shirtings.—Business in 40 inch goods has been extensive at fully previous rates. 45 inch have been brought forward freely and sold. Only one transaction in 51 inch is reported, and that at a low price. White Shirtings remain in excellent demand for all qualities. Reported sales amount to 12,300 pieces, at 4'3 to 12'8 per piece. Grey Jaconets have continued in excellent demand at good rates, and sales to the extent of 39,502 pieces at Co.'s Rs. 1'7 to 2'14 per per piece. These are selling much on a par in regard to quantity with White Goods. White Jaconets.—There are plenty of buyers, and good prices are obtainable. Copper.—Stocks must be very small, hence prices are well maintained. Lead brings long prices. Sales of Pig Stamped are at Sa. Rs. 8-0-0 to 8-6-0 per maund. Sheet Sa. Rs. 10-2 0 per maund.

MADRAS.

NAGPORE AND THE INDIAN PALATINATES.

Lord Dalhousie, in the course of an administration of six years, has decided on great questions. He has annexed the Punjab, and converted a nation of warriors into quiet cultivators of the soil, has conquered Pegu, and commenced the work of civilization in Indo-Chinese Asia, has begun an electric telegraph for all India, and has laid down the principles which are to govern the construction of Indian railways. Yet we question whether he has ever had before him an affair of such vast importance, as that which will be submitted to him on his return. We allude to the absorption of Nagpore. It is not in the importance of the territory that the magnitude of the question consists, though it is in itself a prize for which any other government in the world, would deem hostilities protracted for ten years a trifling sacrifice. The Madras Athenæum has collected facts sufficient to prove that a more splendid gift has seldom been offered by Providence to an Anglo-Saxon Government. In size equal to half the presidency of Madras, though with a population steeped in more than Asiatic degradation, it produced under a government which utterly neglected the resources of its territory, a net revenue of 500,000l. a-year. Added to the Madras Presidency, it would increase its revenue to six millions sterling, open a field for the introduction of a new system of administration, and above all, relieve that presidency from that tone of thought, and those contracted views, which are inherent in governments, where the energy of the ablest is diminished by want of scope, and the mediocrity of the feeble is concealed by the insignificance of their responsibilities. For these reasons, we with our southern contemporary consider the annexation one to be desired. But we do not consider that these reasons are the most important, or that they ought to be allowed more than a momentary weight in the presence of the arguments, it is our duty to adduce.

With the fate of this great province the ultimate fate of this vast empire is inseparably bound up. The decision of the Government will involve not only the misery or happiness of four millions of British subjects, the civilization of a territory as large as Great Britain, or the future improvement of the second presidency, but it will determine the policy which is hereafter to be pursued in India. It will decide whether the country which has been committed to our charge, is ultimately to be fused into one great and progressive empire, or to continue for ever, split into principalities, in which two hundred and eighty rajahs exhaust the energies left them by debauchery, in every species of oppression. It will determine whether the Government which defends India is to receive its revenue, whether English energy and English justice are to accompany the physical improvements upon which Englishmen are resolved, and though last, not least, whether a British Government is to acknowledge the duty of protecting those to whom it stands in the light of a second Providence. For nearly eighty years we have in this respect been searching for a policy. While we were masters only of Bengal, the absorption of new territories was a matter only of State expediency. If we obtained them, the people benefited. If we allowed them to remain under their native rulers, we could at least console our consciences with the reflection, that the British Government could not protect those who owed it no allegiance. But from the moment we assumed the paramount power, stood forward as the representatives of the Mogul, and exercised authority over the entire Peninsula, our position and responsibilities were alike reversed. The whole population of India became British subjects. The obligation to protect them was acknowledged in treaty after treaty. It forms the basis of the arrangement of 1805 with the Hindoo State of Travancore. It was repeated in language which is almost eloquent in the revised treaty of 1838, with the Mohammedan ruler of Lucknow. It was reiterated when we crushed the power of the Mahratta families, and it forms the sole justification for the practical absorption of Mysore. The Government has, in short, acknowledged the responsibility in its great public acts for half a century. Still the acknowledgment was for a period almost theoretical. The empire had grown so fast that the authorities shrunk from duties which they acknowledged to rest upon their consciences. They claimed the right of protection, while dispensing with the power which would have made the theory a fact. They were fettered also by that strange English fancy, which represents the Christian rulers of Hindostan as less scrupulous and more oppressive than the Mahomedan and Hindoo princes.

Between conviction and expediency, their policy continued without aim or principle. Sometimes they annexed, as in the case of Coorg. Sometimes they re-created an old family, as in Sattara; sometimes, as in Cachar, they recognized claims at which an English lawyer would have smiled, and sometimes, as in the Punjab, they "protected" the dynasty, and not the people. To enable our English readers to understand in what position this hesitation leaves millions of natives, we may use an illustration which is not our own. They have the germ of the same evil in England. The Palatinate of Lancaster once resembled in some degree these exceptional jurisdictions. It is now only a phrase, for the separate jurisdiction has been swept away. Let them imagine that county, purely British in population and in habits, ruled by an hereditary despot, who may be an able man, but who more frequently resembles Louis XV. in everything except refinement. Imagine a separate standing army, half disciplined, and often mutinous, the taxes farmed and collected at the sword's point, battles constantly occurring in Liverpool, the estate of the Stanleys held by armed ruffians, and murder by the soldiery too common for record. Let them add to this the wealth, exacted as we have said, squandered on the palace of the ruler, and the population and finances alike slowly decaying, and they will obtain a faint idea of the condition of the Indian County Palatine of Oude. How long would it be before Mr. Cobden's voice would be raised in denunciation?

At last a policy was found. The line of the founder of the Mahrattas wore out, and Sattara fell a second time to the British, who had given it away. Lord Dalhousie, either less timid than his predecessors, or, as we believe, filled with a deeper sense of his responsibilities, formally laid down on that occasion the doctrine, that we should seize every opportunity of honourably increasing our territories in India. Sattara was annexed on that minute. That policy, justified by the ordinary principles of political equity, by the ancient constitution of India, and even by the feudal law, which is the only analogy to be found in Europe, will ultimately give us India. Without violence, without fraud, without even an appeal to the principles upon which the Times has declared that the Indian treaties are effete, the whole of India must gradually pass under our rule. The proprietary right over great kingdoms, which we so strangely concede, will be respected, yet we shall gain province after province, just as our progressive development enables us to apply to them more generous principles of government.

But to render this policy something more than verbiage, it must be acted on. This we are aware Lord Dalhousie is prepared to do; yet there appears some faint possibility that Nagpore may not become British after all. In the first instance in which a conscientious policy has been successful on a great scale, it may be abandoned, and with it no slight portion of the future prosperity of India. In no one instance have we had so clear a claim, and in few have there been so many material reasons for enforcing it. We cannot believe that Lord Dalhousie will yield one inch to the clamour of an ignorant section of the last of English political parties, or hesitate to maintain a policy which is at once great, righteous, and his own.—Friend of India.

TYPHUS FEVER.—The Madras Spectator informs us, that the typhus fever is raging among the Burgher population of the Neilgherries. In some parts of the hills, the population has been decimated. Whole villages have been deserted, and the villagers, in their extreme terror, leave the sick and the dying almost untended. The number said to have perished is 600, but the two statements appear almost incompatible.

RYOTS OF TANJORE.—Arrears to the extent of two lakhs and fifty thousand rupees have been remitted to the ryots of Tanjore. Their losses in the storm of 1852-53 were severe, and the price of produce during the year has been unusually low. They prayed therefore for remission, and the request was backed by the collector. Tanjore is the model district of the ryotwarree.

THE CROPS.—We are happy to perceive from the Madras Athenæum, that in the opinion of the local authorities of that presidency, there is no danger whatever of a famine. There may be scarcity in some districts, but it will be felt only by the poorest class, and for these Government is exerting itself to provide. They will be employed on works of public utility, at the discretion of the collectors, and the importation of grain has already commenced on a large scale. The districts chiefly affected are Bellary and Nellore. In the former, the harvest has fallen one-half, owing to a deficiency in the fall of rain. It was only 9½ inches in 1853, against 28½ inches in 1852. In Nellore, the wet cultivation has fallen off fifty-seven, and the dry cultivation eighteen per cent.

THE 12TH ROYAL LANCERS AND 74TH HIGHLANDERS.—H.M.'s 12th Royal Lancers and 74th Highlanders paraded for inspection by the Commander-in-Chief, pursuant to order, on Tuesday evening, and, as stated by a cotemporary, "presented a very fine appearance." His Excellency arrived on the ground precisely at five o'clock P.M., and was received with the usual salute. The Lancers were dismissed on the conclusion of the inspection; but the 74th Highlanders were then put through a few movements which they executed with much steadiness. Their marching past in double time to music was greatly admired. After the general salute, the regiment formed square, and we hear that the Commander-in-Chief expressed himself highly pleased with them. The head-quarter division of the 74th embarked on board the Earl of Hardwicke for Negapatam yesterday morning, and the remainder of the regiment, about 120 men, will follow about the 26th instant in the Lord George Bentinck. A correspondent wishes to know whether H.M.'s 74th Highlanders are a kilted corps? No, they are not, the three pipers alone wearing the kilt, the regiment at large wearing the trews both in dress and undress. They have the Highland cap with a tuft, and are equipped with the new pattern single cross-belt. The 74th certainly appear a very fine corps, and we were much taken with their appearance.—United Service Gazette, Jan. 20.

THE NIZAM'S SERVICE.—The order for pensioning the local officers of the Nizam's service was published at Hyderabad, on the 14th Dec.

THE 34TH L.I.—The Athenæum states that the "accounts received from the 34th light infantry, who have just completed their march from Vizagapatam to Secunderabad, are of the most distressing nature. We are afraid to mention the number of deaths among both sepoy and followers occasioned by cholera during the journey, and hope it may prove to have been exaggerated. We are glad to hear that none of the officers have fallen victims."

H.M.S. SYBILLE.—There is a story current regarding H.M.S. Sybil, to the effect that she is sailing with sealed papers, and is by them destined for some service connected with Japan. About the papers we know nothing, and those who affect to know can simply guess in the dark, but this much is certain, that her captain desires to have an interview with the Governor-General, and that the vessel will sail for Calcutta on Thursday next.—Madras Spectator, Jan. 16.

THE MADRAS MEDICAL SERVICE.—A local cotemporary drew attention the other day to the promotion of Dr. Shaw, of the Bombay army, to the rank of surgeon, as soon as the additional European regiment was entered on the rolls, and inquired why no similar promotion had taken place among the Madras doctors. We would, keeping to the same subject, give the inquiry a much more comprehensive bearing, and ask why the Madras medical service do not agitate for that augmentation of their strength for which they can urge so reasonable a claim. We observe from the Calcutta papers that an increase of the Bengal medical establishment is talked about as under contemplation; whether it is so or not we are unable to say, but have no hesitation in affirming that such a measure ought to be under contemplation for this Presidency, where the paucity of medical officers, in comparison with the duties devolved on them, is obvious at a glance. The number of full surgeons allowed under the present arrangement is seventy-three, who are distributed as follows:—

For the medical board .. ..	3
Superintending surgeons .. ..	10
Garrison surgeons .. ..	5
Surgeons with staff appointments .. ..	15
On furlough and sick certificate .. ..	14

making a total of forty-seven withdrawn from regimental duty, and leaving only twenty-six actually present and available for eight regiments of cavalry, five battalions of artillery, one horse brigade, three regiments of European infantry, and fifty-two of native infantry; in all sixty-nine regiments. This large deficiency in the number of surgeons has of course to be made up from the assistant-surgeons, which so far from leaving a medical officer or two available for any extraordinary or emergent occasion, necessitates often the imposition of duties and charges, which ought only to be entrusted to regularly trained professional men, or members of the subordinate branches of the service. There is no class of the state's servants in India in whose complete efficiency, both numerically and professionally considered, the public at large have a more direct and immediate interest than in that of the medical service; we are therefore not afraid, in urging this question on the attention of the authorities, of being charged with the advocacy of a mere class interest. The weal we would promote, in calling for a liberal addition to the number of surgeons, is the common weal; as for that of the Medicos themselves, it is coincident with the former, and needs therefore no separate looking after. Still we must confess to some little surprise at the indifference our Æsculapian friends manifest to this obvious defect in their service; an indifference which must be an obstacle in the way of the desired augmentation. Will they not take up the question themselves? If they could be persuaded to "agitate" in the matter, never mind how selfish the motive might be, attention could not be refused; conviction must follow attention, as remedy wait upon conviction, and thus the doctors and the public might rejoice together.—Athenæum, Jan. 17.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—The Bank of Madras is in a curious position. Three several meetings of shareholders have been called, for the purpose of filling up vacancies in its direction, but called in vain, no party having presented himself as a candidate for the office. Under these circumstances another meeting has been summoned, for the consideration of the subject. It appears that the disinclination of qualified persons to sit at the board, arises from an offensive letter addressed to it by government, some year or two since. Folks do not like putting themselves in the way of another affront of the same nature. While they are discussing the question of their relation towards the state, we hope that the shareholders will not neglect to take steps for the removal of the disabilities under which the bank labours in respect of its business. Power to extend the field of operations at the discretion of the directors, ought to be had. The bank has a plethora of unproductive cash, apparently perennial, and is in consequence but a poor paying concern. Were it suffered to deal in exchange and other business now denied to it, the half-yearly balance-sheets would soon show a different result.—Spectator, Jan. 18.

COL. COTTON.—It is rumoured that Lieut.-Col. A. T. Cotton, Chief Engineer, will shortly proceed to Europe, when Lieut.-Col. E. Faber, Superintending Engineer, Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, will succeed to the Chief Engineership.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL EDWARD ARMSTRONG.

Fort St. George, Jan. 17, 1854.—No. 17 of 1854.—The Right Honourable the Governor in Council directs the publication in General Orders of the following garrison orders issued by the Right Honourable the Governor of Fort St. George, on occasion of the embarkation to Europe of Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Armstrong, town major.

Garrison order by Lieutenant-General the Right Honourable Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., G.C.B., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the garrison of Fort St. George, dated 20th December, 1853.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. Armstrong having reported his intended departure to Europe on medical certificate by to-day's steamer, and consequent resignation of the appointment of town major of Fort St. George, which he has held for eleven years, the Right Honourable the Governor has great pleasure in publicly testifying to the untiring zeal and ability with which that officer has conducted the very onerous and responsible duties of his department, and the perfect satisfaction he has afforded his Excellency on all occasions, during the six years he has served under his immediate orders.

The Right Honourable the Governor sincerely hopes, the change to England may have the beneficial result anticipated, in its early restoring Lieutenant-Colonel Armstrong to the active duties of an army, with which he has served with so much distinction during the lengthened period of thirty-three years.

C. A. BROWNE, Lieut.-Colonel,
Secretary to Government.

BOMBAY:

THE TRAFFIC ON THE BOMBAY RAILWAY.

Only one question in connection with Indian railways now remains to be determined. Will they pay? It has been proved that they will be beneficial to the state, that they will increase its military resources, centralise its administrative power, and allow scope for that endless expansion against which Government, Press, and Parliament, alike protest in vain. It is proved that they will be beneficial to the people, that they will facilitate communication, the very source of commerce, that they will prevent the possibility of famines, and open up regions in which the British power is known only by the omnipresence of its taxation. It remains to be proved that they will be beneficial to the shareholders, and this proof is the most important of the three. Neither policy nor philanthropy, the welfare of the state or the advantage of the people, will accelerate the construction of railways half so fast as a ten per cent dividend. Indian railways are now "promising speculations." Let the promise be once fulfilled, and the difficulties with which we have hitherto had to contend, will be instantly removed. Capital will be forthcoming, with or without a guarantee, and the energy of the city anxious for so profitable an investment, will speedily break down the few remaining barriers of official conservatism.

Hitherto, we have had but few data upon which to build an hypothesis. Railway engineers have been satisfied, for they are aware that traffic, even if it does not exist, is created by a rapid communication. The press has been satisfied, for it has some knowledge of the enormous traffic which must exist among a hundred and fifty millions of people, and which will discharge itself upon these great arteries of the empire. The public generally is satisfied; but there still exists a class who doubt the extent of the returns. They question whether cheapness will not counterbalance speed; whether the habits of generations can be abandoned in an hour; and, above all, whether natives will consent to be carried on the railway. They made little use of the steamers. We are enabled to offer a contribution towards a consideration of the question. It is an analysis of the returns of the traffic on the Bombay line, from April almost to the close of 1853. The month of October, unfortunately, has not been received, and the returns stopping with November, are by no means so favourable as they would have been, had they included those of the following month. Enough remains to satisfy our readers of the extent to which the natives are ready to avail themselves of this new method of communication. It must be remembered, that these returns show only the traffic of passengers. Only twenty-two miles have as yet been completed, and the line, though it begins in a presidency town, as yet ends, in a commercial sense, nowhere. It carries no merchandise, no cotton, and no wheat; it has not superseded the native carts, or connected Bombay with the great cities of the interior. Commercially speaking the railway has no existence. It carries only the natives desirous of reaching Bombay from the villages along the line, and occupies in that respect a position somewhat resembling that of the Blackwall Railway. Nevertheless, with these great drawbacks, the receipts from passengers alone have been at the rate of nearly eight per cent. per annum, on the total outlay of £7,000 a mile:—

	Passengers.	Parcels.	Proceeds.
Week ending 24th April .....	12,349	3-12-0	5411-10-8
" May .....	49,646½	125-1-0	16,539-14-6
" June .....	26,627½	85-14-0	7495-14-6
" July .....	31,156	154-4-0	8601-3-9
" August .....	28,185½	181-3-0	7942-14-0
" September .....	33,222	215-12-0	8615-8-0
" November .....	33,937½	177-15-5	8986-2-4
	215,124	943-13-5	63,593-3-9

It will be perceived that immediately after the first rush of aroused curiosity had subsided, the numbers gradually declined. The fifty thousand persons who had travelled by rail in May, became only twenty-six thousand in June, while the receipts diminished in an even greater proportion. From that moment they gradually recovered, and up to the present date have steadily increased. The ordinary estimate for working expenses is fifty per cent. upon the receipts, and from figures before us, it appears that this estimate, as nearly as we can calculate without absolutely complete information, is correct. We obtain therefore the gratifying result, that without merchandise, and before it is connected with any great city, the Bombay railway from passengers alone returns some four per cent. per annum of clear profit. Indian railways will pay.

This result, however satisfactory it may appear, is as nothing when compared with the facts indicated by the following analysis. The upper table proves, it is true, that the passenger traffic is sufficient of itself to support a railway; the lower proves that that profit is derived not from the upper classes, but from the mass of the population:—

	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
April,	917	4,107	7,325
May,	1,876	9,637½	38,131
June,	636	3,665	22,326½
July,	601	4,344	26,211
August,	695½	3,166	24,324
September,	704	3,508½	29,009½
November,	713½	3,253	29,971
	5,643	31,681	177,298

Omitting May as an exceptional month, it will be perceived that, while the number of first-class passengers has scarcely changed, and that of the second class has been decreased, the number of the third class has been steadily progressive. The fares may have been altered; but when these tables were compiled, they were two annas, ten pie, and three pie a mile for the three classes. The last is more than double the rate current among the boatmen on the Hooghly, yet at these rates, the Bombay Railway, which ends nowhere, has obtained third-class passengers at the rate of 400,000 a year. We do not intend to ascribe to these facts an exaggerated importance. There may be local circumstances at Bombay with which we are not acquainted, the population may be less immovable than that of Bengal, or may have some religious motive for paying visits to the neighbourhood of Tannah. Nevertheless, they are in our judgment conclusive as to the success of Indian railways. If the lowest class can be induced to travel in millions, and pay third-class fares, railways in India become from a "promising speculation," a "certain investment of our surplus capital."—Friend of India.

COMMANDER STEPHENS, I.N.

In the squadron orders of the 26th instant, by the Commodore commander-in-chief, will be seen the sudden supersession in the command of the Falkland, of Commander John Stephens, by Commander H. H. Hewett. This proceeding has taken us by surprise, and we can discover no reason whatever for such a piece of arbitrary conduct. If officers of twenty-five years' standing are thus to be thrown out of their rightful commands without trial, inquiry, or reason of any kind whatsoever assigned, all we can say is, that the sooner officers throw up their commissions the better; nay more, we conceive that Government is bound to protect and shield from injury its naval officers, and that in this case its head should satisfy himself, that there has been good and sufficient reason for the supersession of Commander Stephens, particularly as Government confirmed that officer in the command of which he has just now been deprived.

If faults be urged against the commander, let a court-martial be assembled to test their accuracy. At present it appears, as if secret influence was at work to ruin an old, and so far as we know, meritorious officer of long standing, an officer, who, on his return from a three years' cruise in the China seas, was highly complimented by the very person who has virtually now pronounced him unfit for command. Can it be possible that the supersession of Captain Stephens is in consequence of the disturbance which took place a week ago on board the Falkland, on account of which some of the ringleaders have been transported for refusing to obey the command of a black boatswain? Why, Commander Stephens was only carrying out the Articles of War, and acting in accordance with the spirit of his commission as a commander of the Indian navy, which runs—"and you are therefore duly to exercise as well as the officers and soldiers in arms under you, and to use your best endeavours to keep them in good order and discipline, and we do hereby command them to obey you as their commander." Now it is notorious that the refractory seamen, on the occasion we allude to, did disobey the lawful command of Commander Stephens, and the conviction which the court-martial recorded proves such to have been the case. In the face of these facts, to punish Commander Stephens on this account would be to punish him for doing his duty, and to punish him too in an illegal manner.

If the commander has been guilty of any offence, let him be arraigned before a court-martial, or let a court of inquiry be assembled to investigate the circumstances of his supersession, but let us have no secret condemnations, or no stabbing in the dark. We call upon Lord Elphinstone to institute inquiry why an officer has been dismissed from a command by Sir Henry Leeke, on his own authority, in which he, the disgraced officer, had been confirmed by the head of the Government. More than this, Commander Hewett, who has been appointed to the Falkland, is on sick leave, we understand, at Mahabeshwar, and will not be here until the 1st proximo; and this makes the appointment the more singular, as no one has heretofore heard of a sick officer being nominated to a command.

While on this subject, we may mention that complaints have reached us of another act which Sir Henry Leeke has recently perpetrated; we allude to his ordering the pay abstracts of the captain, officers, and crew of the Falkland for December last to be stopped at the pay office; and this has accordingly been done. We very much question Sir Henry Leeke's power over the pay and allowances due by Government to any of its servants. If such a power is vested in him we have yet to learn it. It may be that Commander Stephens remonstrated with the Commodore on his stopping the pay abstracts, and got superseded in consequence; if so, his disrating is unjust, and in either or any case we call upon Government to step forward and show the world that if its servants are publicly punished, the cause of such punishment shall be publicly announced. We have had long too much Khut-patism amongst us, and we hailed Lord Elphinstone's arrival as the death-blow of such. A case has now arisen for the exercise of his interference, which we hope to see taken advantage of by him. We cannot at present discuss this matter further, but we are far from being done with it.—Bombay Times.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 24th arrived at Bombay Jan. 7th (per Queen).

A JOINT STOCK COMPANY is about to be formed for the construction of a Wet-Dock Company at Bombay.

MOVEMENTS IN THE PERSIAN GULF.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier states, that the recent movements in the Persian Gulf continue to occasion considerable excitement in that presidency. The relief for the year has been suspended, and the troops ordered to stand fast. The marine department have received orders to report upon the number of steamers, at the disposal of the government, in the event of an emergency. Further intelligence is anxiously awaited, and we perceive that instructions are expected to arrive from England.

ACCIDENT TO COL. TRITTON.—The Bombay Gazette of the 31st Dec. records a very serious accident which occurred on the Panwell-road on Monday, the 26th ultimo. It appears that Col. and Mrs. Tritton were on their way down to Bombay, and when within a stage of Panwell, their carriage fell over the side of a bridge, from the want of adequate protection to it. The colonel had his arm broken, Mrs. Tritton was seriously injured, the coachman is in a precarious state, and a servant has suffered severely.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—A portion of the electric telegraph establishment arrived within eleven miles of Malligaum on the 5th instant, but as usual found nothing ready for work. No time, however, was lost in making the necessary preparations, and at the date of our correspondent's communication, operations had commenced, and the wire was being laid down at the rate of a mile a day. In Candish the weather is represented as being delightful just now, the thermometer ranging from 53° to 90°.

THE LATE MR. MACLEOD.—We have learned from very good authority, that the fishermen of Kurrachee have presented a petition to the commissioner, bemoaning in terms of the greatest feeling, the loss they have suffered in the death of Mr. Macleod, who, in the flowery Persian style of the petitioners, they declare to have always looked upon in the light of a father. This in itself speaks volumes as to the estimation in which the lamented deceased gentleman was held, even by the very poorest of those over whom he exercised control.—Scindian, Jan. 18.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Jan. 27, 1854).—Since the departure of last mail, the market has been unusually dull, and in piece goods no improvement has taken place, except in the lower descriptions of Grey and Bleached Shirtings, Madapolams, and Jaconets. The smallness of the amount of business done during the last fortnight is chiefly attributed to the very unsettled state and threatening aspect of political affairs in Persia, which deters traders from shipping to that market. The Marwarries likewise have held aloof much more than is usual at this season.

CEYLON.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

(Colombo, Jan. 26.)

The annual report of the Chamber of Commerce contains a despatch from the Duke of Newcastle on the chicory question. Below is the petition which was in course of signature in Ceylon during January:—

"To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled,—

"The petition of the undersigned Merchants, Planters, and others interested in the trade and prosperity of Ceylon,

"Humbly sheweth,—That coffee, the staple production of Ceylon, is subject on its importation into Great Britain to an import duty of 3d. per lb., which is a charge of about 75 per cent. on the average selling price of the native quality in London, after freight and insurance have been paid.

"That chicory, which is used for the adulteration of coffee, is sold in London at a less price than the duty alone on coffee amounts to, and is subject to no charge of duty whatever.

"That contrary to the general principle of British legislation, which prohibits the adulteration of costly taxed products with untaxed spurious substances, authority has been granted to retailers (by a minute issued by the Right Honourable the Lords of her Majesty's Treasury suspending the operation of Acts 43 Geo. III. ch. 129; 3 Geo. IV. ch. 56, secs. 1 and 7; and 8 Geo. IV. ch. 53, sec. 61), to sell as an avowed substitute for coffee, a mixture which may consist of 99 parts of chicory and 1 part of coffee.

"That without dwelling on the manifest temptation to fraud afforded by the countenance of such adulteration, your petitioners humbly submit that the support of such a practice by the Government is felt to be a flagrant injustice to the growers of coffee, and is calculated to lessen that perfect confidence in the Imperial Legislature which your petitioners sincerely desire should be felt here and everywhere throughout the British dominions.

"Your petitioners humbly submit to your lordships their belief that the representations that have at different times been made to Government, with the intention of showing that the mass of consumers prefer a mixture of coffee and chicory to coffee itself, have no other foundation than the interests of the dealers and others who profit by the consumption of chicory. Your petitioners are satisfied that if an inquiry were instituted to test the opinion of the public on this subject, and not the opinions of the dealers, the evidence would show that a large majority are in favour of genuine coffee, rather than coffee adulterated with chicory or with any other substance, or of any mixture intended as a substitute for coffee.

"That your petitioners have already petitioned your lordships' House on this to them momentous subject; they have also petitioned the other House of Parliament, and likewise memorialized the Secretary of State; they have, in fact, exerted themselves to the utmost to obtain a repeal of the minute favouring chicory, but they lament to say that hitherto their efforts have been in vain.

"That your petitioners, nevertheless, remember with gratitude and satisfaction the sentiments expressed in your lordships' House on the 2nd of August last, when, on a discussion of the chicory question, the interests of the honest trader were advocated, and to your petitioners in particular was exhibited an encouraging desire on the part of your lordships' House to ascertain and accord equal and strict justice to all the interests concerned.

"Your petitioners now most humbly and earnestly pray that your lordships will give your favourable attention to the prayer of this petition: which is, not that the Treasury Minute may be suspended, nor that the duty on coffee may be repealed, but simply that a committee of your lordships' House may be appointed to take evidence and inquire into, and report upon the whole question of the adulteration of coffee.

"And your humble petitioners will ever pray."

The mail of 25th December—giving full confirmation to the reports of a short crop in Brazil, and announcing large sales of Ceylon coffee in London with Native at 50s.—reached Ceylon on the 23rd Jan. The notice of the death of Mr. R. Langslow, formerly district judge of Colombo, has been received with much regret by the Ceylonese. A copy of a testimonial in favour of the deceased was published in the Observer.

NARRATIVE OF THE FRENCH EXPEDITION TO NANKING.

We extract from the North China Herald of the 24th December the narrative there given of the French minister's visit to Nanking, the substance of which we understand to have been obtained from the British Consulate at Shanghai, where Monsieur Bourboulon is residing:—

As the steamer (the Cassini, which started from Shanghai on the 30th November, and seems to have reached Nanking on the 5th or 6th December) neared Nanking, a shot was fired at her from one of the batteries on the low land which is in advance of the city walls, and separated from them by a canal. Preparations were immediately made to return the fire in case the insult should have been repeated, the Cassini continuing to move slowly up towards the spot designed for her anchorage; but no other shot was fired. As soon as she dropped her anchor, a boat was sent on shore with an officer and interpreter to ask for explanations, who soon returned bringing satisfactory answers; and shortly after an officer from the general commanding the outposts (General Si) came on board with ample apologies for the shot that had been fired, saying that it had been through the mistake of a subordinate, &c. &c. This first difficulty has been removed, Mr. Marques, interpreter of the Legation, went again on shore, explained to what nation the steamer belonged, and announced that there was an envoyé of the French Imperial Commissioner on board, who had a message to deliver to the ministers of Tae-ping-wang. This request was transmitted through Si to some superior authority, who fixed upon the following day for an interview with two of the ministers, whose cards were sent on board. Accordingly the next morning Count de Courcy, secretary of the French legation, accompanied by Mr. Marques, an officer of the Cassini, and one of the missionaries who took part in the expedition, set out for the city on horseback, escorted by an officer with a detachment of soldiers.

These gentlemen were several hours in reaching the official residence of the ministers, having been detained for a considerable time at the city gate, and also kept waiting before being introduced. They, however, met with a courteous reception from the two ministers, Huan-yuh-kwan and Lae-han-ying, whom they found seated in state, dressed in the ancient costume of the Ming dynasty, which is remarkable particularly for the richly wrought golden diadems worn over the yellow satin hood. After endeavouring to give them some notions of who their visitors were, which gave rise to several questions proving that the rebel chiefs knew little beyond the existence of western nations, the Count de Courcy made them understand that the French minister himself was on board, and desired to communicate either with Tae-ping himself or some person that he should delegate for that purpose. It was agreed accordingly that the following day an officer should be sent on board to make the necessary arrangements for this visit. This messenger on his arrival announced that the French minister would be received by Ting-thien-how, Tae-ping's confidential minister, and of equal rank with the four kings. The weather at the time being unsettled, the interview was deferred till the 20th, when, to avoid the fatigue of a long day's journey on the miserable horses of the country, H. E. M. de Bourboulon proceeded with a numerous suite by canal to within a short distance of the city gate. They there found horses waiting for them, and were conducted first to the Ya-mun of the same officials by whom Count de Courcy had been received. After some compliments exchanged there, the whole party proceeded to the residence of the prime minister, Ting-thien-how. There a question of etiquette arose, H. E. finding that the seat assigned him was not a proper one, and on his refusing that place, the difficulty was solved by the prime minister himself proposing a more private interview, which took place accordingly in an adjoining apartment. The particulars of this interview, which lasted for more than an hour, are known in detail only by the few who were admitted to it. The substance of the conversation however appears to have been, to make the rebel chiefs better acquainted with the foreign nations who have treaties with China, placing before them paintings of the English, American, and French flags, as the invariable signs of their respective nationalities, explaining their positive neutrality in the present eventful struggle, and expressing their interest and sympathy for the Christian doctrines professed by Tae-ping and his followers. It is said also that M. de Bourboulon finally made known to them his Government's particular interest in the Catholic Christians who might be among them; and moreover it has been ascertained, that these have never been persecuted on account of their religion, and at present are allowed to follow their religious observances unmolested.

When the party were about to take leave, which was at a late hour in the afternoon, they were warmly pressed to stay and pass the night in the city, with the same urgency which seems to have been shown to the visitors from the Hermes. It was declined, however, by all except Father Clavelin, who remained with them that night and the two following days. As this missionary understands the language very well, he was thus enabled to gather a great deal of interesting information with regard to the organization of the masses enlisted under the banner of Tae-ping, and also to acquire some additional knowledge regarding the origin and nature of Tae-ping's religious doctrines. On his return, he brought with him a great number of the new reformer's books, all bearing the stamp of Tae-ping-wang, who himself superintends their publication, and under whose especial authority they are alone issued. Among them are several published since the trip of the Hermes.

The aspect of Nanking is most striking: it resembles more a vast camp than a city, and conveys a great idea of the power that rules, as much from the immense numbers congregated there, as from the order and discipline which prevail among them. The houses within the walls have not been destroyed, but bear traces however of having been violently broken open, and are now occupied in common; the same system of communism seems to be applied to both food and clothing, though with a certain regard to official rank. The women decidedly live in a separate quarter, which was perceptible even in passing through the streets, and the whole drudgery of manual labour seems to fall to their lot; they are formed like the men into brigades of 13,000, having officers of various ranks of their own sex, but each brigade under the superintendence of a chief, who alone corresponds with the higher authorities. A part of this organization, a body of 10,000 Kwang-se women, are said to be garrisoned as soldiers in the Tartar city. The number of women alone in Nanking is stated at the enormous sum of 480,000, whilst that of the men would be no less than from five to six hundred thousand. Incredible as these numbers may appear, they are not in contradiction to what was observed by the French visitors in the parts of the city through which they passed, and may be moreover accounted for, as far as regards the women at least, by the fact of their having been gathered together from all the towns taken possession of by the insurgents.

With regard to the disposition of Kwang-se revolutionists towards foreigners, it is, as has been said, decidedly friendly, a feeling which seems characterized by the fact alone of the term "brother" being universally applied by them in addressing us, while they invariably qualify their opponents as "imps and devils;" it was moreover exhibited by the lower classes in the frank and confident manner in which they daily crowded on board the French steamer, in the same way that they had previously visited the Hermes. It must be confessed, as regards the chiefs—and this may be accounted for both by their ignorance respecting the importance of western nations, and the sense of their own relative power—their conduct during the stay of the Cassini at Nanking was marked with more indifference, either real or assumed, than any great desire of communication with foreigners; though polite, they were not cordial, and in their reception of the French minister they seemed inclined to put forward those arrogant pretensions which at all times have been the characteristics of Chinese officials. These dispositions would probably wear off should circumstances bring them into more frequent contact with foreigners; but that is a question which time alone can decide.

The Cassini, after remaining a week anchored at Nanking, set off on her return to Shanghai on the morning of the 14th, and accomplished her passage down the Yang-tze with the same success that had attended her trip upwards, and without any further incident worthy of note.—China Mail, Jan. 5.

THE FRENCH AND THE SHANGHAI REBELS.

The Shanghai Herald of the 31st December contains minute details of an outrage which had nearly led to a bombardment of the city by the French men of war. Our correspondent's account of the affair has probably been sent by a clipper which started before the Lady Mary Wood, and in its absence the main facts may be stated in a few lines.

Two Chinese converts in the service of the French missionaries were on the 21st December seized by the rebel guard at the East Gate, taken into the city, and one of them at least severely bamboozed. A French priest having threatened the rebels with a warlike force from the men-of-war, the catechists were given up (we suppose on the 23rd). The French authorities then demanded the surrender of the perpetrators of the outrage, that they might be dealt with at the French consulate as might be thought proper; but the demand not having been promptly complied with, the French men-of-war were moved up the river on the 25th, and notice given that unless satisfaction were afforded before noon next day, the city would be bombarded. The threat, and the intervention of a reverend and secular partisan of the rebels, had the desired effect, and an individual represented to be the one who seized the catechists, along with several others of his fellows, was escorted by the two individuals referred to and a guard of French seamen, to the Consulate; and there, having admitted their crime and deserved punishment, were magnanimously, or as our contemporary says, "politely," forgiven, and escorted back to the city unscathed.—China Mail, January 5.

THE GOLD QUESTION IN INDIA.

It is well known that the value of the two precious metals, gold and silver, relatively one to the other, fluctuates in direct proportion to the quantity of each produced, compared with the uses for which it is in demand. The value of gold to silver was, in England and throughout Europe, as 11 and 12 to 1, from the Conquest to the reign of James I.; but in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the discovery of the mines of Potosi, in Peru, and the extensive and improved working of those of Mexico, so increased the production of silver, that, notwithstanding a vast augmentation of its uses from the advance of civilization in Europe, the price of this metal fell, relatively to gold, until it came to bear a ratio of about 1 to 15; that is, one ounce or one pound of pure gold was worth fifteen ounces or fifteen pounds of pure silver. The coinage of England was fixed, in A.D. 1717, under the advice and in conformity with the suggestions of Sir Isaac Newton, then mint-master, upon the double basis of both metals, either of which was made a legal tender for any amount, and the ratio of the two metals was then taken at the full rate of 1 to 15; indeed rather above it, for the true ratio, by calculation, was 1 of gold to 15.2 decimals, or fifteen and one-fifth parts of silver. It was found, however, that gold was thus overvalued, the increasing production of silver, notwithstanding; consequently, parties having the option of making payments in either metal, and of having either coined for the purpose, came extensively to use gold by preference; so that, until the revolutionary war flooded the country with paper, gold was the de facto basis of the currency, and silver was never used in England for any but fractional payments.

In the years 1816 and 1819, that is, soon after the re-establishment of the peace of Europe, England, determining to restore her metallic currency, and to make her paper-money subservient to and convertible into coin of fixed value, selected gold for the exclusive standard of value, converting silver into a token-coinage, which it was intended should circulate at an assumed relative value to gold, considerably above its intrinsic value. The pound troy of standard silver, with 18 pennyweights, or  $\frac{3}{8}$  parts alloy, was coined into 66 shillings, which, under the old ratio, was the proper value for it, relatively to the sovereign containing 123.274 grains of standard gold, of which sovereigns 46.7 went to the pound troy; but 62 of these shillings have been issued, since 1816, at the value assigned theretofore to the 66; so that the existing proportion of the gold and silver coin of England has from that date been 1 of gold to 14.287 of silver.

After the coin of England had been fixed on this basis, the relative value of gold still further increased for some years all over the world; so that in France, where both metals were a legal tender on the basis of a proportion of 16½ to 1, payments even of large amount were always made by preference in silver, and if gold were required, it bore an agio, that is, something more was given and taken for it than the legal value in exchange. In consequence of this state of the precious metals, when a gold coinage was issued in the United States of America for circulation with the dollar-currency there, 15½ to 1 was the ratio assumed for the value of gold; and eagles were issued at that relative value to the dollar.

The discoveries of gold in California and in Australia have supervened upon this condition of the monetary systems of Europe and of the United States. Their effect has been to increase largely the supply of gold in the world, and to reduce its relative value to silver. In countries where both metals were a legal tender heretofore at a ratio of 15 to 1, or higher, gold first lost its agio or premium, and then came to be exclusively used for large payments, so that silver is fast disappearing in all these countries, except in the worn state and for fractional payments. In the market of London, the price of dollars has risen to 5s. 1d.* the ounce, and of standard silver, in bars, to 5s. 2½d., which indicates a ratio of about 14.79 of silver to one of gold; so that the present relative value of the two metals has not reached, but is fast falling to, the ratio of 1 to 14.287, which is that of the existing shilling coinage relatively to gold. When that shall be the case, the mint will coin silver with its full power in vain. The new silver coin will be preferred to gold for remittance abroad, and will be exported as fast as issued; while the mint, instead of making the expected profit of four shillings in every pound troy of standard silver, will have to purchase that metal at no profit at all, or even at a loss. Another consequence of the increased production of gold and its change of relative value has been the turn against England of exchanges with all parts of the world that use exclusively silver as the basis of price or value, and especially with India and China, which have for ages used only this metal.

Such is the state of things we have come to, or are fast coming to, in England, in consequence of the recent large discoveries of gold. If they continue, we shall have to re-arrange our silver currency, so as to give it a higher relative value to the sovereign than 14.287 of silver coin to 1 of gold, otherwise it will not be retained in the country, and there will be perpetual complaint of want of silver, and perpetual loss to the mint in the vain attempt to supply it. Already has the export of silver coin been matter of general remark; but it has gone only to the colonies, and not to countries where it would be melted, and used for other purposes than coin.

Let us explain now the existing monetary schemes of India, and the effect thereupon of these same gold discoveries.

The rupee coinage dates from Shēer Shah; but as his reign was short, and a period of confusion followed, the real founder of the existing monetary system of Hindostan was Akbar, who revived that coinage, and established it coincidentally with a coinage of gold. He made neither metal the basis of value. All his revenue settlements were made in dams, which the Ayeen Akberree describes as copper coins, weighing one tola, eight mashas, and seven rutees. The rupee of full weight was issued and received at the treasuries as equal to 40 of these dams. It was of pure silver, and weighed  $11\frac{1}{2}$  mashas, which, at 15.5 grains to the masha, gives a weight of 174.37 grains. Akbar's gold coin was also quite pure, but he coined mohurs of various weights; three, the Aftabee, Ilahee, and Julalee, weighing 12 mashas and 13 rutees, or about 190 grains, were issued and received at a value of 12 rupees; but this emperor's ordinary mohur weighed only 11 mashas, or  $170\frac{1}{2}$  grains, and was ordered to pass as of full weight if not more than three grains less. This is the reason why these mohurs of Akbar and his successors are generally found of the weight of 168 grains. Abool Fuzul complains of the practice of clipping and sweating as common even in his day. The Ayteen Akberce states the value of this mohur at 9 rupees; but all these gold coins were mere fancy pieces, used for nuzurs, that is, for presentation-money, and at marriages. They never entered extensively into the circulation, and were always bought or sold at a variable market-price. The values, however, stated in the Ayteen Akberce seem to indicate the ratio of gold to silver at that period, which corresponds with the reign of our James the First, to have been in India about 10 to 1.

The successors of Akbar continued the pure coinage both of gold and silver, on the basis thus established by Akbar: and when Lord Cornwallis, in 1793, established a mint at Calcutta, he took up and continued the rupee and gold mohur of the nineteenth year of Shah Alum, as coined at Moorshedabad, the former of which contained 175.9 grains of pure silver, to which were added only 3.7 grains of alloy; making a total weight for the coin of 179.66, or say 180 grains, the weight of the present Company's rupee. The gold mohur contained pure grains 189.4, to which 1.4 grains only of alloy were added, making a total weight of 190.8 grains; and the value of this mohur was declared to be 16 of the above rupees, giving a ratio of 15 of silver for one of gold. We have seen that the same, or very nearly the same, gold mohur was valued in Akbar's time at only 12 rupees; thus the price of gold had undergone in India, in the course of 200 years, the same fluctuation that we have traced in Europe; but there needed no fresh regulation of the coinage in consequence; the gold coin gradually took a higher value in the bazar, without affecting any one's bargains, receipts, or payments. The rupee was always used for them, and as there were many mints which, in the decadence of the Moghul empire, coined at discretion, both as to weight and fineness, the shroffs made a good harvest of their profession of money-changing. Many old servants of the Company recollect the period when Calcutta gold mohurs were to be had for a very small agio beyond the value fixed by Lord Cornwallis. They used to be the coin of the turf, and of card-playing; but in process of time the agio went on increasing, until these pure, standard, gold mohurs were not to be had for less than 17 sicca rupees, and even as high as 18. Then, of course, they disappeared entirely from all transactions in which they would have to pass from hand to hand at par. This was the same augmentation of value that had been regularly going on since the days of Akbar; but it caused no cessation of the coinage of gold mohurs. Bullion-merchants still brought their gold to be converted into this coin; and notwithstanding that the government at that time charged two per cent. for seigniorage duty, besides the expense of refining to this high purity, the merchants realized a high profit by giving their metal this shape. It is singular to remark that Abool Fuzul, in the Ayteen Akberce, notices that bullion-merchants could make a profit, exceeding five per cent., by bringing the impure hoons, or pagodas of the south, to be converted into the pure coin issued by Akbar. The same process was largely adopted by Calcutta bullion-merchants, so long as the mint there coined with the same purity; but this was effectually prevented and put a stop to by the change ordered from England, prescribing the issue of gold coin with one-twelfth alloy, which we shall presently have to notice.

It is unnecessary to explain in detail the measures taken by the Indian Government to establish one uniform rupee as the basis of the currency and of price in all the presidencies. The rupee selected was that of Arcot and Upper Hindostan, containing 165 grains of pure silver and 15 of alloy. By Act XVII., 1835, a royal device was adopted for this rupee, and it was called the Company's rupee, and made the exclusive legal tender, in supersession of the old sicca of Bengal, and of all other rupees in circulation. The measure, though productive of some temporary confusion, in consequence of the difficulty of adapting the old copper currency to a coin of different weight and intrinsic value, was completely successful; so that, before two years had passed, the new rupee had obtained universal circulation, and the Bengal siccas were recalled. The Furuckabad rupee of the North-Western Provinces continued much longer to circulate in conjunction with the new rupee, and so those previously issued at Madras and Bombay, which were of precisely the same weight and fineness as the new Company's rupee, though of different stamp.

With respect to gold, it was provided by the same Act, —XVII. of 1835, as follows:—

Sec. vii. "And be it enacted, that the undermentioned gold coins only shall henceforth be coined at the mints within the territories of the East-India Company:—

"First, a gold mohur, or fifteen-rupee piece, of the weight of 180 grains, and of the following standard, viz.—

"11-12ths, or 165 grains of pure gold.

"1-12th, or 15 grains of alloy.

"Second, a four-rupee piece, equal to a third of a gold mohur.

"Third, a ten-rupee piece, equal to two-thirds of a gold mohur.

"Fourth, a thirty-rupee piece, or double gold mohur; and the three last-mentioned coins shall be of the same standard with the gold mohur, and of proportionate weight."

Sec. ix. "And be it enacted, that no gold coin shall henceforward be a legal tender of payment in any of the territories of the East-India Company."

Thus were these two important points legally enacted; first, a prohibition to coin any gold pieces excepting those specified, and of the standard of 1-12th alloy; and, secondly, a withdrawal of the privilege of being a legal tender, not only from the gold coin that might be struck in conformity with the new Act, but also from all the gold mohurs then in circulation as struck under previous enactments, at a time when gold was a legal tender. This latter provision is rather inconsistent with the words of the previous section, which declare, and give the power of law to the declaration, that the gold mohur of 180 grains weight, and 1-12th alloy, shall be a "fifteen-rupee piece." Thus, although between individuals this coin is no legal tender, there may be doubt whether, until the law is altered, the Government may not be compelled in a court of law to recognise the coin as equal to 15 rupees, and to receive it in payments as of that value.

That the Government did wisely in withdrawing the privilege of being a legal tender from gold, will not at present be denied. At the time of the enactment the relative value of gold was considerably above the proportion of 15 to 1 to silver, and there was no idea of the possibility of its ever falling below that ratio. Still the fluctuation was apparent, and the Government seeing from that the necessity of assuming one metal only as the basis of currency and value, took the one established for ages, and exclusively in practical use. The silver in the world being many times larger in quantity than the gold, is not liable either to such rapid action or to be affected in a like degree with gold by new discoveries, which is another reason for giving it the preference.

We shall return to this subject on some future occasion.

ANOTHER BLUE-BOOK.—NAPIER KICKING AT THE GREAT DUKE.

THE great Duke of Wellington is dead, and the man who offered him the most fulsome flattery while living, now comes forward to assail him with insult and reproach. This, it will be recollected, was precisely the course adopted by the animal with the long ears in regard to the fallen king of the forest,—an example very fit for a Napier to imitate,—and which is followed in the noble and generous spirit which has rendered that race illustrious. From the shop of a bibliopolist resident in high-church and high-caste Belgravia has issued a new blue-book, not so large as those for which we must send to Great Turnstile, but very much more showy, inasmuch as its blue is of a more celestial tinge, and is besides highly glazed. We are not quite sure as to the title of the “nice little book,” seeing that the blue cover bears one, and the white frontispiece within another; and this not in the usual mode, according to which the two are identical, except that in one of them a few words may be omitted; but with a display of variations which cannot be deemed inconsiderable. As the matter is difficult, and everything relating to a Napier is important, we exhibit them both at the foot of the column, to enable our readers to choose between them.* Having declined to enter into the controversy of titles, we open the pamphlet, full, of course, of expectation. The commencement is marked by two of the great Napier characteristics—arrogance and folly. “Sir Charles Napier’s posthumous work has so damnified Lord Dalhousie and the Directors of the East-India Company, that it could not be passed over without notice.” Everything that a Napier does must be the best of its kind, and as Sir Charles Napier took the trouble of discharging a paper pellet at Lord Dalhousie and the East-India Company, they were of course knocked down by it. But the inference, that because such was its stunning effect, “it could not be passed over without notice,” is rather out of the way. If it were such an overwhelming blow, the wiser policy would have been to say nothing, but to borrow Sir Charles Napier’s favourite proverb, which he quoted on an occasion which we dare say Sir William has not forgotten, “the least said is the soonest mended.” There was, however, no reluctance shown to the production of papers, and, to adopt the energetic phraseology of Sir William, the production of the Duke of Wellington’s opinion has so “damnified” the cause of Sir Charles Napier, that no one can ever revive it but to his own confusion. Such is the case with the unfortunate gentleman who now hashes up the stale and repulsive viands. Nobody will taste except the poor wretches whose duty it is to go through this disgusting duty. All others will turn from the nauseating dish, and call for soda-water. Sir William has peppered highly; but it will not do. Condiment alone will not furnish a meal, even for Sussex labourers, for whom a noble duke once prescribed broth made entirely of pepper, without any meat. Much such an article is furnished by Sir William Napier’s “Comments,” or whatever he may please to call them. It is very hot, but has neither substance nor support. Such being the case, it is hopeless to attempt doing more than to dip out a spoonful or two of the fiery broth where it appears most pungent. A Napier would characterize the “broth” by a stronger epithet; but we forbear. Sir William is satisfied that on one occasion, at least, the Duke of Wellington acknowledged Sir Charles Napier to be a better man than himself. A story was afloat at the time the Indian command was offered to Sir Charles, that on his hesitating, the Duke said, “Either you or I must go.” Whether the story were true or not, is a question that we shall abstain from discussing; but if it were, does it justify any one in affirming that the Duke acknowledged his brother soldier to be the better man. What was said (if it were said) was one of those loose bits of conversation which are not often understood to mean anything, and which never mean much. It is now, however, adduced as a proof that the Duke of Wellington really believed, and desired Sir Charles Napier so to understand, that he, the said Sir Charles, was the better man! Sir Charles Napier was undoubtedly a good man—as a soldier. We desire to be understood as speaking with this limitation. But the Duke of Wellington has a little reputation in military history, and we cannot consent to place him only No. 2 on the list. The brother of his competitor can, and thereby evinces a right brotherly feeling. Come what may, a Napier must and ought to be “the topmost man of all the world.”

With respect to the acceptance of this Indian command by Sir Charles Napier (for, as all the world knows, the Duke did not take it himself), we must be indulged with one word, thrown out, we beg most [tremblingly to assure the Napiers, with the deepest humility, inasmuch as it differs from their views. The accredited champion of the family, after abusing Lord Dalhousie for being only thirty-seven years of age (which we suppose he could not help), charges him with rendering the Indian Commander-in-Chief “a mere cipher, in an office to which he was called by the voice of the English people.” The Crown, it seems, had nothing to do with it. We live under so perfect a democracy, that the Sovereign does not appoint to even the highest military office. The people select their general, and the Crown obeys as a mere registrar of the will and pleasure of the majority. Thus we are in danger of getting ahead of the most go-ahead people in the world, if we do not take care. Sir William Napier laughs, or something worse, at the highest persons presuming to have an opinion on military affairs, unless they are military men; but it seems it is the privilege of the ten-pounders, or perhaps of some below them, to choose a general for the Queen, and it is the duty of her Majesty to ratify the choice. This is strange, but * Blue face.—Wellington and Napier. Comments by Lieut.-General Sir William Napier, K.C.B., and Captain Rathbone: a Supplement to Indian Misgovernment, by Lieut.-General Sir Charles James Napier, G.C.B. London, 1854. Westerton.

White face.—Comments by Lieut.-General Sir William Napier, K.C.B., upon a Memorandum of the Duke of Wellington, and other Documents, censuring Lieut.-General Charles James Napier, G.C.B. [no Sir], with a Defence of Sir C. Napier’s Government of Scinde, by Captain Rathbone, Collector of Scinde. London, 1854. Westerton.

of course, as a Napier adopts the doctrine, it is sound. Thus "we live and learn,"—and as the sentence is sometimes carried out, "none the wiser grow."

And now, having expressed a single doubt as to the infallibility of the Napiers, we come to our unhappy brethren of the Indian press, who are handled so unmercifully, that we expect the next mail to bring us the report of at least half a dozen suicides among them. It is asserted—

"That the Select Committee on Indian Territories records that the Indian newspapers are by bribery and terror rendered subservient to the Government; those who are docile being rewarded with patronage, money, and exclusive intelligence. And it is through such sewers, such edicts of filth and falsehood, that Lord Dalhousie has been pouring forth abuse of Sir C. Napier, and sickening praise of himself all over India, while complaining of misrepresentations, and in Council proclaiming that he will not reply! No. He prefers, as safer, every sinister method that malignant dishonesty can suggest."

Now we can scarcely think that the Indian editors will "die and make no sign." If they can but bear life sufficiently long, they will read Sir William Napier a few lectures "for his soul's health," as the style of the Ecclesiastical courts has it. To them, therefore, we leave him upon this point. But we have scruples for ourselves. We begin to be almost ashamed of our occupation. We not only wade through these "sewers," read these "edicts of filth and falsehood,"—the word "edict" strikes us as rather oddly used here; let that, however, pass,—but from fortnight to fortnight we make selections from these prohibited channels, in the hope thereby of interesting or amusing our readers. We must stop: yet before we stop, we should like to be satisfied that the Select Committee on Indian Territories (Sir William does not say which) does actually record this character of Indian newspapers—records it, we mean, as its own. What opinion any particular witness may have given of any or all of those papers, we cannot undertake to say; but we do venture to entertain a doubt whether the select committee of either House has come to the decision which Sir William Napier ascribes to one of them. And so we shall go on culling what may seem best from these polluted sources, as the organ of all the Napiers will have them to be, but which, unless we are greatly mistaken, no parliamentary committee has yet described them to be. By the way, it is to be remarked that Sir William Napier quotes by the yard from these same abominable newspapers, and relies on what he finds therein as evidence.

Want of space warns us to conclude; but the desire to treat our readers with as many choice specimens of the Napier curry as we can fish up urges us on. Sir William Napier wrote a History of the Peninsular War; we are not quite confident as to the title, but if we err, we cannot doubt that he will forgive us, as he is not very particular on such matters himself. All who have read it will remember that it was written in the "prose-run-mad" style. In the last labour of Sir William, he shows that the faculty of thus writing has not quite forsaken him. He quotes a long passage from the Duke of Wellington's paper, written with all the hard common sense which invariably guided his pen, and showing that Sir Charles Napier had nothing to do with the impolicy and injustice of the regulation which of his own authority he rescinded, except in his place in Council; and after quoting it, he exclaims with great devotion, "What miserable finite beings we are! God gives and he takes away! An unseen wave of his hand, and the glorious light of reason is obscured." And now that Sir William has become thus devout, we venture to ask what is his religion? He speaks at page 44 of "the sick devil's religion;"—we hope it is not that. Our question, we admit, would under ordinary circumstances be impertinent; but at page 10 of this extraordinary work, occurs a passage so outrageously extraordinary, that we are justified in putting it. Sir William is seized with a fit of indulgence for the Duke of Wellington, and thus writes:—

"Yet shall the glorious man be separated from the vicious document, and even from himself, where a want of harmony with the general tenor of his great intellect is evident—a distinction not to be omitted in the consideration of a work, written when the mental beam was hastening towards re-absorption in the divine essence from whence it originally emanated."

Now, we ask, what do the latter words mean? They are evidently meant to be religious,—what religion do they indicate? There are superstitions where a "re-absorption into the divine essence" is looked to as the consummation of a holy life,—holy, we mean, according to the benighted views of those who look for such a result. But are these Sir William Napier's views? Does he adhere to such a faith, or has he a better and sounder belief? If the latter, why can he afford to the Duke of Wellington nothing beyond the vain and idle hope of one on whom the light of revelation never shone. Nay, why does he absolutely assume that such was the case with that illustrious man? Not that he believed it was (which we trust he did not), but that he actually and really was approaching to that absorption which was to be his final rest? If words have any meaning, this is what Sir William Napier has expressed, though we hope he did not mean to express anything so heathenish.

Sir William, indeed, writes unguardedly throughout, according to his wont. He complains (page 5) of "suppressions and simulations" in compiling blue-books. Has he forgotten the Scinde Blue-Book? He quotes a passage from Lord Dalhousie, complaining justly of confidence violated by Sir Charles Napier in bringing forward private letters; and in giving out how Sir Charles, if living, would have chastised the Governor-General, he uses language which may leave a doubt in some minds whether personal chastisement is not meant. We do not suppose it was; and with a recommendation to Sir William to improve his temper and his judgment (it is never too late to mend), we bid him farewell.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS.

BEFORE the publication of our next paper an important change will have taken place in the constitution of the Court of Directors. From and after the second Wednesday in April the number of Directors is to be eighteen instead of twenty-four; and one month previously, namely, on the second Wednesday in March (the 8th of that month), the present Directors, together with those out by rotation, or the major part of the whole, are to meet, and appoint from their own body fifteen persons to be Directors of the East-India Company from the second Wednesday in April, the same day as that on which the annual elections of Directors have heretofore been held. Of the fifteen thus elected, five are to serve for two years from the date at which they are entitled to assume office, five for four years, and five for six years from the said date. To complete the number of eighteen, three Directors are to be appointed by the Crown, one for two years, one for four years, and one for six years. Of those appointed by the Directors and ex-Directors six must have served at least ten years in India, and the entire number of those appointed by the Crown must have this qualification.

Of the electing body, one, Sir Richard Jenkins, has died since the passing of the Act under which the election is to take place (16 & 17 Vict. cap. 95). Two have retired absolutely,—Mr. Loch, whose resignation occurred some days since, and Mr. Alexander, whose withdrawal is announced in our present paper. Sir James Law Lushington, whose announcement also appears in our advertising columns this day, will hold office until after the 8th, in order to assist in the business of the day as an elector, but declines appearing as a candidate. The number, therefore, of electors is thus reduced from thirty to twenty-seven, and that of competitors for renewed office to twenty-six. Whether or not any further resignations will take place before the day of election, is a question upon which it is obvious that it would be idle to speculate.

We have heard suggestions made, and some very confident ones, as to the names of the gentlemen likely—or, as our would-be informants are bold enough to say—sure to be chosen. Upon the probable result of an election of so peculiar a nature nothing can safely be predicted; and all who venture on conjectures must know that they are vain and baseless. Not even those most deeply interested can have any certainty. Others pretending to knowledge which no one can possess, are but amusing themselves and deceiving the public.

EAST-INDIA RAILWAY.

The seventh annual general meeting of the shareholders in the above company was held at the London Tavern on the 17th Feb., H. A. Aglionby, Esq., M.P., in the chair.

Mr. Noad, the secretary, read the report, which states that the option of subscribing for 250,000 shares in the extension capital of the company has been offered to the proprietors since the August meeting, and accepted to the extent of 65,140 shares. Under the terms of the arrangement with the Upper India Railway Company, 17,495 shares were taken by the holders of scrip in that company. The contract with the East-India Company for the extension line has since been settled between the Court of Directors and this Company. Under the terms of that contract, the sum of 258,106*l.* has been paid into the treasury of the East-India Company; a further sum of 641,854 is to be paid on or before the 30th of June next, and thenceforward payments are to be made at the rate of 1,440,000*l.* per annum. In order to provide for the payments thus to be made, and to comply with the very generally expressed wish of the proprietors, the Board propose to allow shareholders to pay up in anticipation of calls upon the shares now issued, to the extent of the sum payable to the East-India Company in June next, and the shareholders are invited to state, on or before the 31st of March next, the number of shares upon which they desire to pay in full. Upon the shares not so paid up in full, it is proposed to make calls at the rate of 16 per cent., or about 3*l.* per share per annum. To provide the capital required as the company's operations advance, it is proposed from time to time to make periodical issues of paid-up shares, the option of subscribing for which will be offered at par to the shareholders for the time being. The effect of these arrangements will be practically to constitute a stock on which four and a-half per cent. interest is guaranteed under the terms of the contract with the East-India Company, and which carries with it the large prospective advantages estimated to result from the working of the line. The works continue to be prosecuted with vigour; and they have reason to expect that 121 miles (from Calcutta to Ranegunge) will be open for traffic by the end of the present year, and a further 120 miles (up to Rajmahal) within two years.

The balance-sheet of the company, made up to Dec. 31st, 1853, is as follows:—

Debtor.—To original capital, 1,000,000*l.*; extension ditto B. 1,000,000*l.*; ditto ditto, 8,000,000*l.*; to interest on capital deposited with the Honourable East-India Company and on investments, transfer fees, difference of exchange, &c., 157,083*l.* 19*s.* 3*d.*; to sundry persons, creditors, 253,221*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* Total, 10,410,305*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*

Creditor.—By expenditure, home, 41,507*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*; ditto,

India, 1,019,830*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.*; by interest to proprietors, less amount of forfeited deposits on shares, &c., up to 31st of March, 1849, 1,178,462*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*; by sundry debtors, 4,491*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*; by amount on hand, 468,922*l.* 6*s.* 7*d.*; by calls not yet made on shares allotted, 2,349,450*l.*; by shares unissued, as per ditto, 6,408,980*l.* Total, 10,410,305*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, congratulated the shareholders that it was so satisfactory, and said he thought they could not expect the railway to be going on better.

In answer to several shareholders,

The Chairman said that nothing was expended without the sanction of the East-India Company, and he could venture to assure them that everything regarding the works was going on favourably, both as to surveys and the operations for putting the line in a fit state for working. (Cheers.)

Mr. Kendel (the engineer of the company) then stated, at the desire of the chairman, a few facts respecting the railway. He said the works might be regarded as equal to any in the country; that all difficulties had been overcome; and, during the time of active operations, they had done as much as the most sanguine could have expected. (Hear, hear.) When the branch to the coal-fields was completed, it would be a very profitable source of revenue (hear, hear); and, by the time the line was opened, they would have as complete a rolling stock as any other line. (Hear, hear.) The survey, by the industry of the engineer, was completed up to Allahabad, and he believed they would be able to open the line beyond Rajmahal in four years. (Hear, hear.)

After some inquiries put by various shareholders respecting the accounts, &c., which was answered by Mr. Cranford (a director), the report was adopted; and the directors and auditors having been re-elected, thanks were voted to the chairman, directors, and engineers, and the proceedings terminated.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.—At a Court of Directors held at the India House, on Wednesday, the 22nd ultimo, Lord Harris was appointed Governor of Madras.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The annual general meeting was held on the 20th instant, in New Broad-street; Col. D. Sim in the chair. The secretary read the report as follows:—The directors, in pursuance of the resolution passed at the extraordinary general meeting of the Company, on the 12th of September last, proceeded to increase the capital of the Company to one million sterling, by the creation of 25,000 new shares of £20 each, and to offer to each of the existing shareholders the option of taking his ratable proportion of these shares. The shareholders not having availed themselves of this option to the full extent, the board, after reserving 5,570 of the shares for allotment at Madras, allotted the remainder to applicants in this country, the greater part of whom were already shareholders of the Company. The deposit of £2 per share has been received accordingly on 19,430 of new shares, and paid into the East India Company's treasury, as a deposit bearing interest at 4½ per cent. on account of the capital to be raised under the contract for the extension of the railway. The board have every reason to expect that the shares sent to Madras will be readily taken there. The bill to enable the Company further to increase its capital, and to enter into such contracts as may be necessary with the East India Company, is now before Parliament. The Board have much satisfaction in reporting the continued favourable progress of the works on the line, and the cordial support of the Government and its officers on all occasions. The earth-works of the first 50 miles from Madras are far advanced towards completion, and the engineer only awaits the arrival, from this country, of the materials of the permanent way to commence laying it down. The anticipations of the directors as to the cheapness of construction promise to be fully realised, so far as the charges in India are concerned; but the increased price of iron and of freights will tend to enhance the cost of such materials as fail to be supplied from this country.

EAST-INDIA IRON COMPANY.—The directors of this company state in their report that a proprietary, to the extent of upwards of 16,000 ten-pound shares, has been created, and the balance of the 20,000 shares, of which the preference capital consists, has been reserved for India. The call of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share has been paid upon 12,255 shares. A second call of the same amount will be made in April, in order to meet the conditions of the charter. Orders have been received, and are in hand, for castings and other articles required by the Government and railway authorities at Madras, and arrangements are on foot with other parties for similar orders. The manufacture of bar-iron is going on at Beypore, while the foundry is the principal object at Porto Novo. The Board are assured they will meet with the cordial support and encouragement of the East-India Company, as well as of the railway companies, whose interests are largely concerned in the success of the undertaking.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That they have received from the Government of Madras the undermentioned Schedule, viz.—

Schedule dated 22nd October, 1853.

Part 1st. Containing the accounts of all Administrations granted to William A. Serle, Esq., as Ecclesiastical Registrar of the Supreme Court, since the period of exhibiting his last preceding Schedule (the 1st March, 1853) to the 22nd day of October, 1853.

Part 2nd. Containing the accounts of all Administrations granted to William A. Serle, Esq., as Ecclesiastical Registrar of the Supreme Court, prior to such last-mentioned period, and which remain unclosed.

Part 3rd. Containing all Administrations whereof the balances have been paid over by the said William A. Serle, Esq., as such Ecclesiastical Registrar, since the period of exhibiting his last preceding Schedule, specifying the amount of such Balances, and the persons to whom paid, or how otherwise disposed of.

And that the said Schedule is open at the Secretary's Office in this House to the inspection of the public.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

In a few days the number of Directors for the East-India Company will be reduced, in conformity with the Act of Parliament which was passed last session, and I think it right to announce that I do not intend to offer myself to the consideration of my colleagues as a candidate for re-election.

The declining state of my health affords me a warning which I ought not to disregard, that, on the occasion of re-modelling the Court, I shall test consult the interest of the Company by retiring into private life.

In taking this step, I cannot refrain from attempting to express, though in language necessarily imperfect, how deeply grateful I feel to you for the marked confidence with which you have honoured me during so many years, and you may rest assured that to the last hour of my life I shall uniformly cherish a lively remembrance of your kindness, and an earnest solicitude for the welfare of India.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your very obedient, humble servant,

HENRY ALEXANDER.

East-India House, 22nd February, 1854.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have been so often favoured with your support and the confidence of my honourable colleagues, that if my health had continued unchanged, I should have offered myself for election as one of the fifteen directors to be returned under the Act of last Session.

But at my advanced age, I feel that I could not perform the important duties of a Director satisfactorily to myself or to you.

It is not therefore my intention to offer myself as a Candidate to be one of the fifteen, but to remain only till the election takes place, in order to assist my colleagues to make the best selection of members for the new Court.

With a most grateful sense of your past confidence, and with the conscious feeling that I have endeavoured faithfully to execute the high trusts so often conferred upon me, I shall retain to the latest hour of my life an earnest solicitude for the prosperity of the empire which has risen to such magnitude under the administration of the East-India Company.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful, humble servant,

J. L. LUSHINGTON.

East-India House, 27th February, 1854.

East-India House, 15th February, 1854.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Court of Directors of the East-India Company will receive Tenders from parties willing to contract for the supply of the undermentioned articles, for the use of their Depôt at Warley Barracks, Brentwood, Essex, viz.:-

COALS, CANDLES.

Particulars and conditions of the Contracts may be learnt on application at the Military Department, East-India House, Leadenhall Street, London; or at the office of the Commandant of the Company's Depôt at Warley.

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Secretary, East-India House, London, with the words "Tender for Coals, Candles" (as the case may be) "for Warley Barracks," written on the outside cover, will be received at this House, on or before 11 o'clock on Wednesday, the 12th day of April next, after which hour no proposal can be received.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, 22nd February, 1854.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That the Finance and Home Committee will be ready, on or before Tuesday, the 7th March next, to receive proposals in writing, sealed up, from such persons as may be willing to supply the Company with

SALT MEATS;

And that the conditions of the said contract may be had on application at the Secretary's Office, where the proposals are to be left, any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the said Tuesday, the 7th day of March, 1854, after which hour no tender will be received.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

50	48	49	50	51	52	53

To the policy holders on the profit scale, who have paid five years' premium, a bonus of twenty per cent. has been annually allowed for the last three years.

The Society grants an immediate reduction to the English rates to parties proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and a reduction after one year to those who come for a short period only.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period are also granted.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents at the other Indian Presidencies.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

No. 1, KING WILLIAM STREET, CITY, LONDON.

Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament, 6 Will. 4, cap. 54.

DIRECTORS.

SIR HENRY WILLOCK, K.L.S., Chairman.
JOHN STEWART, Esq., Deputy Chairman.
Lieut.-Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong, Francis Macnaghten, Esq.
K.C.B., K.C.T. and S. Charles Otway Mayne, Esq.
John Bagshaw, Esq., M.P. Major John Arthur Moore.
Augustus Bosanquet, Esq. William Rothery, Esq.
Charles Dashwood Bruce, Esq. Robert Saunders, Esq.
Ellis Watkin Cunliffe, Esq. Capt. Samuel Thornton, R.N.
William Kilburn, Esq. Brodie McGhie Wilcox, Esq., M.P.

The marked success which has attended the operations of this Society justifies the Directors in calling the attention of the public to the superior advantages held out to all classes desirous of affecting Assurances upon their lives.

The subjoined scale of rates is framed with the greatest care, and will be found to be as MODERATE AS IS CONSISTENT WITH PERFECT SECURITY.

Annual Premium required for the Assurance of £100 on a single Life, with participation in Profits:—

20	£1 18 8	35	£2 14 11	50	£4 5 6
25	2 3 3	40	3 3 0	55	5 5 10
30	2 8 10	45	3 12 2	60	6 13 2

Tables for Policies to be effected in India have been especially prepared from the records of the East-India Company, on the experience of mortality in that country.

During the last twelve years, the reduction of Premium on Policies entitled to participate in Profits has averaged more than 44 per cent., and in the last three years it has been declared at 43 per cent.

An annual division is made of one-fifth of the ascertained profits of the five preceding years; the other four-fifths being set apart to enter into the average of succeeding years.

Of the sum annually divisible, 75 per cent. is apportioned to Policy-holders who have paid six annual Premiums, either in a Reduction of subsequent Premiums, or as a Bonus added to the Policy. The remainder is apportioned to the Shareholders.

Assets of the Society, upwards of £600,000.—Amount of Policies in force, £2,000,000.—annual income arising from Premiums, exclusively of interest on the invested capital, exceeds £120,000.

Weekly Board-day, Thursday, at 1 o'clock.

Committees sit every Tuesday and Saturday, at 12 o'clock, when Policies requiring despatch may be effected.

AGENTS IN INDIA:—

Messrs. Braddon & Co., Calcutta. Messrs. Bainbridge & Co., Madras.
Messrs. Leckie & Co., Bombay.

MICHAEL ELIJAH IMPEY, Secretary.

MESSRS. ROBERT COCKS' PIANOFORTES
for SALE and HIRE.

"We lately experienced much pleasure in trying some of the Pianofortes manufactured by the house of Cocks and Co., New Burlington Street, London; they are chiefly Cottages and Piccolos. These Pianofortes are remarkable for the beauty and equality of their tone, and the facility of their touch and their extremely elegant exterior. They have, moreover, an appearance of durability which is wholly out of the question in the cheap markets, where the public are persuaded into purchasing a pretty-looking instrument at a low rate, which, at the expiration of six months, is found to be worthless. Not that the instruments of Messrs. Cocks are dear; on the contrary, they are as cheap as the valueless instruments just mentioned; but they have the advantage of being firmly and compactly made of the best (and best seasoned) materials, and of keeping well in tune for an unusual length of time.—Vide "Musical World."

PRESENTED GRATIS and POSTAGE FREE.—"SPECIMEN PAGES of ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S POPULAR EDITIONS of the ORATORIOS, &c." "This publication we consider most judicious, as it will satisfy the doubts of those who, naturally enough, wonder how it is possible to produce such priceless works at the low figure for which they are announced; one glance, however, will satisfy the most sceptical that they are not only the cheapest, but the best editions extant," &c.—Vide "Port of Portsmouth Guardian," Feb. 8, 1854.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Publishers to the Queen. ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA, &c.

DRAWN BY JOHN WALKER,

*Geographer to the East-India Company.A New Map of India;

Showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the Position and Boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys executed by Order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or on cloth, in case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

* The object kept in view in compiling this Map, has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all Stations—Civil and Military—are inserted, as well as those of all Towns and places of note, likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various Districts and Collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The Railways are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the Map clear and easy for Reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been shunned.

A General Map of India;

Compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Hon. East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

Map of India;

From the most recent authorities. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

Map of the Routes in India;

With Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this Map are given the whole of the Military and Civil Stations, together with the principal Towns, the villages being omitted so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies.

Map of the Western Provinces of Hindoostan;

The Punjab, Cabool, Sind, Bhawalpore, &c.; including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or on cloth, in a case, £2; or on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

Map of India and China, Burmah, Siam, the Malay Peninsula, and the Empire of Anam. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.*Map showing the Steam Communication and Overland Routes

Between England, India, China, and Australia. Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 4 in. high; on cloth, in a case, 14s., or with rollers, and varnished, 18s.

Map of Arabia;

Compiled from all the most recent authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company.—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high; on cloth, in a case, £1. 6s.

Map of the Punjab and Sikh Territory.

On one sheet, 5s.; or on cloth, in a case, 6s.

Map of Afghanistan and the adjacent Countries.

On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

Map of China,

From the most authentic sources of information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 11s.

EASE in WALKING.—COMFORT to the FEET.

The LEATHER CLOTH, or PANNUS CORIUM BOOTS and SHOES, are the softest, easiest, and most comfortable ever invented for tender feet. They have no painful or drawing effects, and are softer and easier than any other boots or shoes. Sufferers from corns, bunions, gout, chilblains, &c., will find them invaluable. For warm climates they excel all others in durability and comfort. A boot or shoe sent for size will insure a fit. The material sold by the yard in any quantity.—HALL and CO., Patentees, Wellington Street, Strand, leading to Waterloo Bridge.

THE GENUINE INDIAN CURRY MIXTURE,

PREPARED BY A LADY (a long resident in India), who was instructed in the preparation by the late celebrated Fyzoo Kausumah, of Calcutta.

This mixture contains all the ingredients used in India in the preparation of a Curry, and requires no addition, is highly approved by those who have resided in India, and the Curries prepared with it pronounced by them "the best they have eaten since they left India."

To be had of Wm. ASHDOWN and Co., Indian Lamp Exporters, &c. &c., 167, Piccadilly, and (wholesale) by letter addressed to Messrs. Edward and Co., 21, Pelham Road, Brompton.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE

MADRAS CURRY, and MULLIGATAWNEY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho Square; FORTNUM, MASON, and Co., Piccadilly, and of the principal Sauce Vendors throughout the kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

LADIES of DELICATE COMPLEXION, who suffer from exposure to cold winds and damp atmosphere, will find immediate and soothing relief in the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.

This unique Botanical Preparation allays all irritation and tenderness of the skin, removes cutaneous disfigurements, freckles, and tan, and imparts a healthy and blooming appearance to the complexion, and a delicacy and softness to the neck, hands, and arms. Perseverance in its application promotes a free and uninterrupted exercise of those important functions of the skin, so essential for the preservation of health, and the attainment and continuance of a beautiful complexion.

Gentlemen, after shaving, will also find it allay the irritability and smarting pain, and render the skin soft, smooth, and pleasant.

Its purifying and refreshing properties have obtained its selection by Royalty, and the several Courts throughout Europe, together with the "elite" of the aristocracy.—Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR" are on the wrapper, and "A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London," on the Government stamp, affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION OF OPIUM

and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—Thirty years have elapsed since Captain Jeremie, the Inventor of this most valuable preparation of Opium, first offered it to the public, since which period most of the respectable Members of the Profession in India, England, and on the continent of Europe, have prescribed it and recommended it as the safest and most efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium. The universal patronage which this medicine has obtained in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting, the premonitory symptoms of Cholera, and the great and increasing demand for it from all parts of the continent of Europe, is the greatest proof of its efficacy and good effects.

Prepared only by SAVORY and MOORE, Chemists, 143, New Bond Street, London.

N.B.—None can be genuine unless surrounded with a Government stamp.

Agents for India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, and Co., Calcutta.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS for the CURE of BILE,

GIDDINESS, and DETERMINATION OF BLOOD to the HEAD.—These Pills, so well known, supersede all other medicine for the suppression of an undue secretion of bile; they give relief to that sensation of fulness frequently felt after eating, cure head-aches, prevent pains, giddiness, and determination of blood to the head. Habitual constiveness is obviated by their use, and for dropsical complaints they stand pre-eminent for strengthening and cleansing the stomach. Holloway's Pills are the very best remedy ever discovered; they also increase the appetite, and promote digestion, giving an hilarity of feeling and buoyancy to the spirits.

Sold by all druggists, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

BURMAH, the great source of news for some time past, fails us in this respect at last: there is little or nothing deserving of record. Perhaps, as we are not generally very egotistical, we may be permitted to say that everything that has been republished in other papers within the last day or two as news received in anticipation of the overland mail appeared in our publication of the 1st inst. Of course, we shall not reprint it now, but it is due to ourselves that this should be pointed out to our readers.

A somewhat interesting, if not a very important, article of intelligence is the arrival at Rangoon of the first ship that has come out direct from England since the "annexation." It is the Gertrude of Belfast, which sailed from Liverpool on the 6th August. At Rangoon the custom-house authorities have seized ten chests of sulphur and twelve of nitre, about to be despatched to Ava, it is said, for hostile purposes. Some alarm was excited at Sitang, though it should seem that not much danger existed, from an attack made on that place by a body of Burmese. Two 24-pounders settled the business, and the worst mischance encountered was a shot through the turban of one of our sentinels. The distribution of honours and rewards to the officers and men engaged in the war, in some respects a gratifying duty, in others an invidious one, is now a topic of warm discussion. There are of course some complaints of officers overlooked, who ought to have been kept in mind; and with regard to the bestowal of medals on the troops, there are some growls (not altogether unreasonable) about the delay which usually takes place in such matters, and which, it may be hoped, will be avoided on the present occasion.

Discussions about the unhappy affair of Captain Latter's murder continue, but we are not disposed to enter into them.

In the entire absence of all stirring matter, we turn eagerly to the Presidency towns, to ascertain if they will furnish anything of interest. From Calcutta we have a Government notification of importance. It gives notice that all the notes of the Five per Cent. Loan, dated the 30th June, 1841, not previously advertised for payment, will be discharged at the General Treasury, Calcutta, on the 29th April next, on which day the interest will cease; but on or before that day the amount of the notes may be transferred into the Four per Cent. Loan of 1854-55, without expense to the holder. Conditional transfers by agents or friends are received, subject to confirmation or disallowance by the principal, but no

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

The Bentick, with a mail, left Calcutta Feb. 5th, Sand Heads 6th, Madras 10th, Point de Galle 13th, Aden 23rd, and arrived at Suez March 1st.

The Ganges, with the China mail, left Hong-Kong Jan. 27th, Singapore Feb. 3rd, Penang 5th, and arrived at Point de Galle Feb. 9th.

The mails thus brought were taken on to Alexandria; they arrived at Malta March 13th (per Sultan), and Marseilles March 15th (per Vectis).

The Sultan, with the remainder, may be expected at Southampton March 24th.

DEPARTURES OF EACH MONTH—MAILS FROM LONDON TO INDIA, CHINA, ETC.

Via Southampton (from London), at 8 o'clock in the morning of the 4th and 20th. It is advisable to post letters in London on the previous evening; if that day be Sunday, then on the evening of the 3rd and 19th; if Monday (of course) before 8 o'clock on that morning.

Postage, letters under  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. . . . . 1s.
" " 1 oz. . . . . 2s.

Pre-payment is optional, but out of London it is the most certain to insure early despatch; and it will be preferable to affix stamps rather than to pay in money.—Newspapers, free.

Via Marseilles, on the 8th and 24th; if either of these days be Sunday, then on the 9th or 25th.

Postage (must be in stamps), letters, under  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. 1s. 10d.
" "  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. 2s. 3d.

" " Newspapers, 3d. each.

(Our publication commenced at 6 o'clock this morning, March 20.)

disallowance is to be recognised after six months from the date of the notification. The notification will be found in its proper place, as will also another interesting to many of our readers, by which, subject to the approval of the Court of Directors, the directors of the Military Fund are authorized to carry out at once the resolution of the subscribers for increasing the donations and subscriptions from the 1st July last.

We have now to notice a measure having an important bearing on the fortunes of young civil servants. The College of Fort William has been consigned to the shadowy repository of things that have been. Its substitute is to be a Board, to the President of which every newly-appointed civil servant is in person to report himself on his arrival at Calcutta, and under whose orders he is thenceforward to remain. He is to be assigned at once to one or other of the two great divisions of the Presidency, instead of waiting until he may be declared qualified for service. If allotted to the lower provinces, he must study the Bengali and Oordoo languages; if to the upper provinces or the Punjab, he must pass in Persian and Hindee. There are to be examinations for passes and for honours, the rules relating to which appear somewhat complex; but if a certain measure of competency be not attained within six months, the young civilian is to be remitted to the Mofussil, to pursue his studies under some authority there (a step which will also be conceded as a matter of favour to those seeking it), and if not qualified in two languages within eighteen months from his initiatory examination, hindrance from sickness allowed for, the penalty of removal from the service follows.

At Madras the affairs of the Bank seem to furnish the greatest matter for excitement. Directorships, eagerly sought after elsewhere, and often the subjects of fierce contention, are at a discount in the Madras Bank. Nobody will have them. A special meeting of proprietors was called to consider of the matter, but very few persons attended; and upon the whole, they appear to have left affairs much as they found them.

Bombay is nearly as quiet as Madras. The progress of the electric telegraph gives it a little motion of a healthy character, but an apprehended scarcity of water—the wells of the island indicating a probability of their running dry some three months before the usual time—creates considerable alarm, as well it may. The subject is occupying the attention of Government, and it is hoped that something will be done to provide Bombay with a permanent supply of one of the first necessities of human existence. Lord Elphinstone is stated to be rendered very popular by his ready accessibility and courteous demeanour. Mr. Danby Seymour, in the course of his starring expedition, arrived at Bombay on the 10th February, and left it on the 14th, actually spending no less than four days there. We have heard of aeronauts who took their departure amid a blaze of fireworks. Thus did Mr. Seymour. On the evening preceding his embarkation, he attended a meeting of certain natives, held at the residence of a gentleman who has the honour of filling the office of president of the Bombay Association, which congratulates itself on its “foresight” in having sent over the large sum of £200 to keep the “India Reform Society” on its legs. The president and the two secretaries (for these functionaries are exhibited in duplicate) duly bedaubed the honourable gentleman with praise, a more showy article than that which they doled out to the “India Reform Society,” but not so good to work with. “Mr. Seymour, in reply,” so says the report, “entered at great length into the objects of his self-imposed mission.” And so he came away, and is now in England, ready to explode. He never reached Bengal; but of course, by intuition, he knows all about it. Indeed there can be no doubt that he knows it quite as well as those parts of India which he did visit.

From China the following passage is the most striking one which we can meet with:—

“It would appear the Czar does not anticipate a very pressing occasion for his ships of war in Europe; while in these seas, where before they were unknown, the Russian squadron promises soon to come little short of the American or the English.

“At Japan, or somewhere not very far from it, are the 50-gun ship Pallas and the steamer Vostock, besides perhaps a corvette, some time ago reported at the Cape for Sydney, thence to Japan. The frigate Aurora, and the sloop Navarin, according to the Danish papers, destined for the North Pacific, were undergoing repairs at Portsmouth in October; and the Java Bode of the 12th December, among its October English news, states that the frigate Diana, and brig Nieman, formerly reported for China, were daily expected to follow.”

Public attention has been drawn to the war between the ruler of China and those who claim to occupy his place. We extract from the China Mail the history of a “little war” of a different character, but nevertheless a contest not altogether without interest:—

“Some time ago we shortly explained the measures adopted by the foreign community of Canton, in conjunction with the Chinese authorities, for the currency of Mexican dollars at their intrinsic value, giving a proclamation of the one and a declaration of the other on the subject. The effect of these was the introduction of Mexican dollars at par, so far as all, or nearly all, foreign mercantile operations were concerned, silk and tea and other dealers taking the coin in payment without demur. The only difficulties to the measure were caused by the native bankers and money-changers, and by an English house, with a number of the Parsees, who declined to receive Mexican dollars from the Chinese in payment for cotton and opium. The objections in respect to cotton, however, were overruled by Chinese cotton-merchants refusing to buy cotton from the brokers except for Mexican dollars. The Parsees held out against this for nearly a month, during which time it is believed not a bale of cotton was purchased for the interior. Then they gave in. Many of them have since also yielded in respect to opium, for which Mexican dollars are now taken in payment; though probably the same premium is demanded on them as is exacted by the Chinese bankers on purchases of Sycee.

“The difficulties interposed by the native and foreign objectors have hitherto prevented the entire success of the measure; but the great majority of those interested being in favour of it, a little more perseverance may possibly accomplish the end in view, which may temporarily, and perhaps not very justly, relieve individuals, at the expense of others, and operate injuriously on class interests, but, if successful, will ultimately be of great advantage to the whole mercantile community.

“The struggle at present going on lies mainly between the native merchants or tradespeople and bankers, and shroffs or bullion-dealers. All native commercial operations are more or less dependent upon the advances or loans made by the latter to the former. The end of their year is the time when all these must be repaid; and as that period occurs two days hence, the merchants and tradesfolks are tendering payment of their debts in Mexican dollars, which the shroffs refuse except at a premium, and that has been gradually increasing from one or two to five or six per cent. The traders are determined to resist this exaction—petition upon petition has been filed by them in all the offices, from the magistrate to the viceroy; but the authorities have hitherto hesitated to do what they pledged themselves to in their proclamations—punish the opponents of the measure, who belong exclusively to the moneyed interests, everybody else being in favour of the change. Consequently another proclamation of the same tenor as the preceding ones, but denouncing in much stronger terms the conduct of the shroffs, appeared a week ago. The immediate consequence was a further rise in the premium demanded on Mexican dollars. Still no shroff was seized or punished, and the patience of merchants and tradesmen who have during the present week to settle their accounts, was tried beyond even Chinese endurance.

“Accordingly a number of highly respectable men, twenty of them wearing buttons, assembled on Sunday last (the 22nd), and, followed by a crowd of men attached to their interests, proceeded to the establishment of one of the head bankers, made him a prisoner, and carried him off to the Nanhai magistrate. The magistrate himself was out at the time, attending the celebration of some private festival; but the crowd, numbering, it is said, some 1,500 men, refused to leave the court until the magistrate had appeared and received charge from them of the person of the banker. When the magistrate arrived, the crowd urged on him to expose the banker at once in the cage; but he declined to act thus summarily without previous reference to the viceroy, who has had the question of the currency under his consideration from the commencement. He, however, received the petition of the merchants, imprisoned the banker (who as a rich man had to pay the jailer 280 dollars for the privilege of a bed), and promised them that they should be relieved from the exactions of the shroffs.

"The crowd withdrew satisfied with this explanation. A fall in the premium demanded on Mexican dollars from five to three per cent. took place almost immediately; and if the shroffs will abate their demands, there is little fear that any harm will happen to the banker now in durance. The shroffs, bankers, &c., appointed a Consol for the following day (23rd), and the result is given in the subjoined notice from a portion of them, which has been posted about the streets, and which at once enhanced the value of Mexican dollars and Sycee. Not a few of the bankers, however, continue dissatisfied, and talk of closing their places of business. But all Chinese do so at their new year, and afterwards the profits may be found still sufficient to induce the bankers to resume business. The one seized still remains in confinement, so that apparently he has not given in, or he may consider himself more secure in custody than at large. In what other country would the attempt be made to constrain him? If the present coercive measures succeed, it may afford a lesson to political economists and finance ministers of the West.

"Public Notice, issued by the principal Bankers of the Western Suburb.

"Hitherto we have heard it said that commercial operations prove advantageous in proportion to the thoroughness of the understanding maintained by the public among themselves. We, the bankers of the Western Suburb, have already used for a considerable time Kowtsien and mixed dollars. On this subject various decrees have lately been issued by all the High Authorities, permitting the circulation of these dollars at par, both among natives and foreigners. We have grounds, however, for entertaining the belief that these measures have not yet obtained universal publicity. We have, therefore, again met in consultation together, and have determined upon thus publicly declaring our intention to pay and receive dollars of every description, whether Kowtsien, mixed, or other kinds, at one uniform rate, so long as the said coins are equal to the others in point of intrinsic value.

"Issued on a happy day, in the twelfth month of the 3rd year of Hienfung (23rd or 24th of January)."

The British Chamber of Commerce has also issued an intimation on the subject, in which it assumes, rather prematurely perhaps, that the matter is definitely settled:—

"British Chamber of Commerce, Canton, January 24th, 1854.

"A public declaration from the banking houses having been issued this day, stating for the future all dollars of the same intrinsic value as the present chopped dollars currency, would be received by them at par,—the quotations of bullion are altered as under,— Sycee Silver, 2.2 per cent. premium.

Gold, ..... 21.50 dollars per Tael of 100 Touch.

It may now be reasonably expected that the question of the Mexican dollar being at par, is disposed of."

MADRAS.—Capt. H. T. Tapp, 14th N.I., at Bellary; Asst. surg. G. G. Holmes, 29th N.I., at Trichinopoly; Capt. C. Lancaster, H. Art., at Upper Clapton, aged 44, March 14.

BOMBAY.—Capt. A. Morris, 4th N.I., at Bombay, Jan. 28.

PRAYING MACHINERY.—The prayer-cylinder, or mani-chhos-khor (the precious religious wheel), is a very ingenious instrument, and does great credit to the genius of the Tibetans. The body of the instrument is a metal cylinder, about three inches in height, and from two to two and a half inches in diameter. The axis is prolonged below to form a handle. The cylinder is filled with rolls of printed prayers and charms, which revolve as the instrument is turned round. Every lama carries a chhos-khor, which he keeps perpetually turning by a gentle motion of the hand, assisted by a cubical piece of iron fastened by a chain to the outside. As every revolution of a prayer is equivalent to its recitation, the chhos-khor is a very ingenious instrument for multiplying the number of a man's prayers.... These instruments are found of all sizes and in all positions. Cylinders, about one foot in height, are placed in rows around the temples, and are turned by the votaries before entering. Larger cylinders are found near villages, turned by water, which keeps them perpetually revolving day and night.—Cunningham's Ladak.

BENGAL.

THE TRAINING OF YOUNG CIVILIANS.

We are rid of Fort William College. An order from the Government of Bengal, dated the 24th January, announces, with peremptory conciseness, that the "college is abolished," and India has one anomaly the less. Intended by Lord Wellesley to be the Oxford of the East, it was cut down by the Court of Directors, and has for years had an existence only in the Gazette. It was one of the few institutions allowed to exist in India, without functions and without utility. In England, the dissociation between the department and its duties sometimes lasts for centuries. In India, the pressure of financial necessity soon seals the doom of everything which has not at least an apparent usefulness. Our Chancellor of the Exchequer has no compassion for deputy chaffwaxes. When the Military Board has lost its control over every department of military affairs, it will cease to exist. In England, it would remain useless but salaried, until in time the members demanded compensation for the loss of their patent sinecures. The solitary exception to the practice of clearing away lumber was the College of Fort William. It was as little a college as the Trinity Board is an assemblage of pilots. It had no revenues and no system of instruction, no teachers, and, as a college, in reality no pupils. It was simply a fiction, kept up because under a policy which has been at last abandoned; it was considered expedient that young civilians should learn the vernacular in the only city in Bengal in which it is not habitually spoken. We are not now about to expatiate on the demerits and deficiencies of the ancient system; we are rid of it, and turn with a feeling of relief, in which our readers will most cordially participate, to the new arrangements which have superseded the time-honoured inutility.

So far as the mechanical arrangements are concerned, the new scheme appears to be at once simple and efficacious. The powers hitherto possessed by the authorities of the college, and those belonging to the central committee, have been transferred to a single board of examiners, with a president, and a secretary. Hitherto, the college has watched the young civilian until his entrance into the service, and the central committee has declared him qualified for its highest appointments. For the future, both these tasks will be entrusted to this one board, and the civilian will be responsible to it from the moment he lands in India, until the hour when the receipt of the "full powers," assures him that he has past into the haven where examinations are unknown. It is not, however, in this respect that the importance of the innovation consists, but in the provision for the education of the civilian in that branch of knowledge which can be acquired to advantage only in this country. The sole object of the preliminary training is to enable him to acquire the command of the language of the people, among whom he is to administer justice. We are happy to believe that the new rules will secure this object, so far as regulations can be expected to secure it. To begin at the beginning.

As soon as he has landed, the young civilian is to select the presidency to which he desires to be attached. Hitherto, this privilege of choice has been conferred, as a kind of prize, upon those who were most successful in their college career, and there was a tendency among the most successful to select the north-west in preference to Bengal. Both presidencies will now have an equal chance of securing the ablest of the public servants. The instant the selection is made, the languages he is to study are determined. If he remains in Bengal, he must acquire Bengalee and Oor-doo; if he proceeds to the north-west, he will devote himself to Persian and Hindoe. Having passed an initiatory examination, the only use of which will be to demonstrate that the oriental languages cannot be acquired at Haileybury, he is required within three months to pass in one of the vernaculars. The examination will be comparatively easy, and if he is successful, he will be required to pass in the second language within the same period. Should he succeed again, he may strive for the rewards of "high proficiency" and "honours," both of which, however, must be obtained within eighteen months from the date of his arrival. Should he, on the contrary, fail in either examination, he will be ordered to reside in the interior. There, surrounded by natives, who speak only the tongues he is called upon to acquire, with few of the temptations of metropolitan society, and with every inducement to escape from a most monotonous career, he will speedily acquire the requisite proficiency. It is in this provision that the magnitude of the reform especially consists. Practically, we imagine, the result of this system will be to drive from Calcutta all but the few young men who possess that special aptitude for languages, which is the first necessity of an orientalist. The examinations, it is true, are easy, but three months' study will scarcely enable ordinary men to surmount even the difficulties of the grammar.

The majority will waste three months in Calcutta, and then proceed into the Mofussil, where they must learn even in their own despite. The time of probation has been shortened by six months. If they fail to pass within a year and a half, they will be sent back to England as bad bargains, and the rule, if enforced, will be sufficient for all but the most stupid or the most indifferent. To these examinations, which test his knowledge of the vernaculars, must be added the examination before the Central Committee, which tests his knowledge of business. The young civilian will, in fact, before he becomes a magistrate, receive a severe training of five years, a training too in the subjects he is chiefly required to understand, and among the people to whom they are to be beneficial.

We have confined our attention almost exclusively to what we regard as the most important innovation. We cannot but think, however, that the rules descend a little too much into minutiae. There is little gained by treating men as schoolboys, nor can we believe that the "honours" will be the more desired, because their presentation is to occupy the time of the head of the Government of Bengal. The rule which declares debt a disqualification for the public service would be excellent if applied a few years later, but is scarcely just when applied to men, so young that Government will not trust them beyond a "circle with a radius of five miles from Government House." In practice, we presume, the majority of these restrictions will be rendered inoperative, and for the rest, we are rid of a fiction, and have gained the certainty, that those who are called upon to fill the highest offices of the State will not waste the two best years of their lives amidst the attractions of a metropolis.—Friend of India.

THE REVENUE SYSTEM OF ASSAM.

The revenue system of Assam appears to be almost anomalous in India. It is not a Zemindaree system like that of Bengal, for the men who occupy the position of Zemindares are the hereditary servants of the government. It is not a purely ryotwaree system, for it allows of the existence of a wealthier class, whom that system in almost every instance sweeps away. It is not a tenure like that which is now successful in Bombay, for we hear nothing of the thirty years' lease, and with the village communities of the North West it has no analogy whatever. The Calcutta Review for December supplies us with some facts concerning its origin and progress, which have a peculiar value, while the simple ryotwaree is so warmly defended and condemned. The writer, obviously a long resident in the province, believes the system he has helped to administer, the most perfect ever yet called into existence by the inventive genius of Indian finance. He has forgotten that the scheme with which he is so familiar may possibly be less easy of comprehension to his readers, and his narrative, though doubtless accurate, requires as careful an analysis as an Indian census, or the evidence on the London corporation. Enough, however, may be gleaned from his contribution, to satisfy us as to the character of this almost unique settlement.

It is exactly what the settlement of Bengal would have become, had Lord Cornwallis not been inspired with the idea, that Bengalee landholders could be turned by a fiscal arrangement into English country gentlemen. In 1826, when the British Government extorted from the Burmese the cession of Assam, they found the province sunk in the extremity of wretchedness. The people, subjected to all the oppression which the worst court in Asia could inflict upon a conquered race, were not even defended by the Government which had destroyed their independence. Harassed by the savage tribes, who still squat among the hills, and by Rajas whose legitimate authority was perhaps even more burdensome than the inroads of the savages, the limit of cultivation gradually decreased, and even the population began to disappear. The revenue systems of the East, however, possess a strange vitality. They survive even anarchy, and the ryot whose crops were yearly carried off, still kept up his connection with the tax collector. In Assam, the system was one of unusual detail. Each division, whether township or pergunnah, had a superintendent, whose business it was to collect and remit the taxes to the central Government. For this service he usually received a per-centage on the profits.

In other words, the Zemindaree tenure existed exactly as it once existed in Bengal. Like all the native systems, it was exceedingly uncertain in its operation. Upon the annexation, therefore, the authorities laid down rules for an assessment. The experience of the perpetual settlement, however, had even then begun to exercise its effect upon official public opinion. They were unwilling utterly to abolish the tax collectors, and thus render the entire body of the nobles hostile to the British rule, and destroy the class by whose aid alone they could expect to commence in earnest the work of civilisation. They adopted a middle course. The land, in theory the property of the Government, was declared to be in practice the property of the ryot. The assessment was made by the collector in contact with the actual cultivator, for different periods, and thus far the tenure resembles the ryotwaree of Madras. It has, however, another feature. The rent is not collected either by a tehsildar or collector. Each estate has a superintendent, who is allowed to contract for the payment of the rent, and for this service he receives a per-centage or commission. He is not a farmer general, with full power to squeeze the ryots to the utmost, for the cultivator makes his agreement directly with the European collector. It is dangerous for him even to levy an "abwag," or illegal cess, for he holds his office at the mercy of the collector, and one act of tyranny would be sufficient to displace him. Neither is he a tehsildar according to the Madras theory, for he possesses a direct connection with the lands, and, as far as we can perceive, benefits by their improvement.

He holds in fact the position which the Zemindar of Bengal would occupy, had Lord Cornwallis fixed the limit of exaction from the ryot, as well as of the payments to be rendered by the landholder. The superintendent lives always on his estate; he is required to watch over the construction of any public works, to assist in fostering the village schools, and, in short, to perform the functions which Bengalee Zemindars, were they English gentlemen, would for their own interests assume.

The system, according to the writer, has been successful. The population has returned, and there is positive evidence that its material condition has improved. The scanty dress of the Burmese period has been replaced by ample clothing, and among a people lazy to a proverb, there are few who do not possess the brass vessels which in Bengal shew that the people are not in actual distress. In one district alone, the revenue, which in the Burmese period was only Rs. 7,000, has increased to Rs. 3,50,000; and though the fact may be indicative of a more regular taxation, it is a proof also of material prosperity. How far this anomalous tenure may be applicable to other provinces, it is impossible, with the meagre information before us, to ascertain. We notice it rather as a singular illustration of what would have been the tenure of Bengal, had not its development been rudely arrested by the operation of the perpetual settlement. Whether we have gained by exchanging the superintendent of Assam for the Zemindar of Bengal, we leave to our readers to decide.—Friend of India.

FURTHER REDUCTION OF THE INDIAN STATE DEBT.

The year 1853 will form one of the most important epochs in the financial history of India. Not only that in spite of the heavy expenditure caused by the war in Burmah, the accumulation of surplus revenue has been steadily increasing in the several local treasuries, but what is still of greater importance, the Indian Government was at last awakened to a sense of its own true interests, and applied a portion of the almost embarrassing riches towards the reduction of the Indian state debt. The first step consisted in advertising for payment the most costly of all—the five per cent. transfer loan. This measure was a sort of feeler, and the success that attended the experiment determined the authorities to advertise for payment a portion of the five per cent. loan of 1841, leaving holders, however, the option of transferring the amount of their respective notes into the four per cent. loan, at that time open. Considering the state of the money market, and of commercial affairs in general, we ventured to assert, that so far from Government being called upon for cash payments on account of that particular loan, the greater portion would flow into the four per cents., and that the actual result would be a conversion of the five per cent. loan into a four per cent. state debt.

Our conjectures have been realised even beyond our expectations, for the amount transferred into, and the payments made towards the four per cent. loan exceeded considerably the sums disbursed in redemption of that portion of the five per cents. advertised for payment, which was drawn in hard cash. Under such circumstances, the Indian Government necessarily closed the four per cent. loan, stopped all further transfers, and even went so far as to stipulate that parties desirous of drawing the interest in England should take in payment treasury drafts on the Court of Directors at twelve months' date, at a fixed rate of exchange. It is necessary to remark, that taking the fullest advantage of the circumstances that combined in favour of the exchequer, Government at the same time opened a new loan at the rate of three and a half per cent. per annum.

The most surprising result of all these financial measures is, that whilst they have been productive of a considerable reduction of the amount annually paid for interest on the several loans, they have actually caused a further augmentation of the funds lying idle in the local treasuries, for as we have already stated the amount transferred and paid in greatly exceeded that withdrawn. We were therefore by no means surprised to see the announcement in the Official Gazette of the 28th of January, intimating the paying off of the remaining five per cents, the redemption of which is fixed for the 29th of April next. As parties have again the option of transferring the amount they hold into four per cent. paper, provided they do so before the 29th of April next, it is more than probable that so far from much cash being drawn, almost the whole of the amount will be merely transferred. The Indian exchequer will, therefore, with reference to his accumulated funds, be exactly in the state where it was before, with the difference, that while the amount to be provided for the payment of interest decreases, the surplus cash is actually increasing.

The question then arises, what is to be done with all this accumulated treasure? It has been ascertained that after providing for every contingency, the surplus is equal to about one year's gross revenue. There is nothing in our commercial affairs to lead to a fear of anything like a drain upon the money market that might create embarrassment. It is true, the large balances due by India must eventually find their way back to the places they have been drawn from, still if such should call for more than the capital, there is the treasury fully proposed to pay every fraction of the loans advertised for liquidation. That money may now be looked upon as lying idle, and has only to be drawn, to relieve any pressure that may be felt in our money market. Instead, therefore, of anticipating any difficulty on that score, we would rather ask what is to be done with all the money thus locked up unprofitably and withdrawn from circulation?

The inference is that government will be obliged to resort to a further reduction of the state debt, not by reducing the rate of interest only, but by bond fide paying off a portion of the sums they owe. The question, therefore, will occur, which of the four per cent. loans is to be paid off? There is only one guaranteed to be continued for twenty years more, but the others may be redeemed at any time the state of the exchequer renders it advisable to redeem it. That time, we are inclined to believe, is not far off. The surplus which is accumulating from day to day cannot be allowed to remain idle. If extraordinary events should cause an unexpected heavy call, government are ready to meet it without the least inconvenience; if not, it must be applied towards a reduction of the debt, since it is in vain to hope that any large portion of it will be devoted to the improvement of the country we live in, or towards the development of its internal resources, which, unless developed by private enterprise, will continue to remain dormant for an indefinite period to come.—Hurkaru.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

It has very often been remarked that the continued efforts on the part of the Indian press to awaken a general interest among the Indian community on behalf of railways have met with but little success. Though the desirableness of railways has generally been admitted, yet the importance of the undertaking has not sufficiently been understood among those very classes whose co-operation forms an essential means to the success. Indeed we believe that, with the exception of the novelty attached to the scheme, it has hardly produced more than a casual remark regarding the application of steam power for almost every practical purpose in supersession of manual labour and mechanical contrivances. Though this can hardly be a matter of surprise in a country like India, where, notwithstanding the proximity to England into which she has been brought by means of steam, the spirit of enterprise has never been encouraged, and things in general have undergone but little change, still we are inclined to ascribe the utter indifference which the native community and a great number of Europeans too evince in the important question of railways, to the complete darkness in which the public have systematically been kept by the Court of Directors and the local governments with reference to the plans they have in view. The continued delays on the part of the Leadenhall-street potentates in coming to any decision did not inspire confidence, while the difficulties which from time to time were thrown into the way of the railway company excited suspicion as to the real intentions of the Directors, when, at last, after a prolonged correspondence, the work had actually been commenced, the expectations were considerably damped by the fact, that in the course of nearly seven years a little more than thirty miles of railway had been constructed, but not completed, so that even that small portion is not yet available for practical purposes. People became disgusted; and those few who perhaps took more than usual interest at the beginning became indifferent, having lost all confidence in the Court of Directors. Under such circumstances, the measures adopted by the Governor-General come exceedingly opportune.

A supplement to the Official Gazette of the 1st Feb. contains the despatches addressed by the Court of Directors to the Indian Government on the subject of railways. They are the most authentic information with regard to the views and plans of Government, and give us an insight into the arrangements already entered into, or in the course of adoption in the three presidencies of India. We confess they are cheering, for they clear up all existing doubts, and not only hold out brighter hopes, but actually fix the time within which such hopes are to be realized. The information thus published may be classed under the following heads:—

1. The lines which it has been decided upon to construct at once.
2. The lines into which the main rail is to branch out.
3. The time within which the trunk line to be completed.
4. The agency by which the lines are to be constructed.
5. The estimated cost of the Calcutta line; and
6. The amalgamation effected between the East Indian and Upper Indian Railway Companies.

As far as Bengal is concerned, we are told that the trunk line is to run from Calcutta to Allahabad, and from thence through the Doab to Delhi. The Directors express a great desire that the latter portion should be proceeded with as soon as practicable, and we are moreover assured that it is to be commenced in various parts simultaneously, the amalgamated company having undertaken to construct the line to Delhi within seven years. The Directors also recommend that land should be taken up sufficient to provide for a double line, and that all bridges and difficult work should be constructed suitable for a double line. The cost of the line to Allahabad, originally estimated at from 14,000*l.* to 15,000*l.* per mile, it has been found will be under 9,000*l.*—which the Directors assure us is under the average cost in the United States, where railways are constructed with exemplary economy.

In Madras, the lines to Coimbatore and the western coast, with branches to Bangalore and Ootacamund, have been sanctioned, and the Madras Railway Company has undertaken to construct them within five years. No allusion is made to the estimated cost.

In Bombay, the Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company has been authorized to commence a line towards Poonah, so far as it will be common for either of the routes, the selection of which cannot be determined before the completion of the surveys.

The despatches then treat upon the various branches and the junction with the main lines; but as these are still under consideration, it is unnecessary to notice them here.

The agencies by which the several lines are to be constructed are the railway companies, under the supervision and control of Government. They are to be considered as carrying out and executing the wishes of Government.

The question as to the line connecting Diamond Harbour with Calcutta is disposed of, as we anticipated, negatively. The Governor-General thinks that as the dangers of the navigation do not call loudly for this line, as the interests of Government would in no way be promoted by it, and as it is quite within the compass of joint-stock undertakings, it shall not be taken in hand by the Government of India, and that if private parties shall engage in it, the Court should not come under the obligation of guaranteeing interest upon the capital raised for it in any amount whatever.

Now then we know exactly what we have to expect. We know the lines that are to be constructed, the period within which they are to be completed; and all further apprehensions vanish. The enactment empowering banks to advance upon shares, will tend to create a demand for railway stock in India, and thus indirectly interest our native capitalists in the great undertaking. It will be the first great work undertaken for the special benefit of the country, in which the native population will take individual interest. The commencement of railways in India will form a double era in the history of this country: first, by concentrating into a narrow compass the distant portions of the empire; and secondly, by spreading with accelerated velocity the blessings of civilization and of the march of intellect. The effect they will produce on the native mind within the next decennium will be incomparably more striking than that attained within a similar period among the Anglo-Indian residents by the establishment of the overland communication with England.—Hurkaru.

DINNER TO COLONEL OUTRAM.

A public dinner to Colonel Outram took place at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, January 31st, and was attended by about a hundred and fifty persons. The chair was taken by the Hon. Sir J. W. Colville, who was numerously supported by the leading members of the different sections of the community of the presidency.

The Chairman proposed the toast of the evening, viz. the health of their distinguished guest, in a lengthy speech. In returning thanks, Colonel Outram reviewed his career both as a soldier and a politician in India. The following passages of his speech were received with much cheering:—

"My own career abundantly illustrates the cares and vicissitudes of political service in India.

"My earlier years in India were passed in jungles, among wild beasts, and almost wilder men. (Laughter.) There I was happy; and had I been permitted to remain there, I might have been happy now, for I had not an enemy in the world. All were my friends, whether my civil or my military comrades—the Bheels I controlled—or my superiors in the Government; but I was taken therefrom, at no seeking of my own, for political employ. Twice have I risen to the summit of the political ladder, and twice have I been harled to the bottom, for conscientiously discharging that duty which I had been a poltroon and a scoundrel to have evaded. (Tremendous cheering.) By my honest fulfilment of those duties, which neither the honour nor the interests of my masters would admit of my shirking, I have raised up a host of the most vindictive, the most unscrupulous, and the most powerful enemies that any mortal in my humble position—that of a 'mere black marching captain,' as Gen. W. Napier sneeringly styles me—ever had arrayed against him. Alone, and unsupported, have I had to contend against such mighty odds for the last ten years of my life, exposed to an amount of calumny, contumely, and excruciating anonymous attacks, that might well have driven one of weaker nerves to suicide or madness. (Hear, hear.) My time and my substance (even including the little patrimony I inherited) have been expended in repelling those inveterate adversaries, and I have now to begin political life anew, worse off pecuniarily than I was when I entered the service thirty-four years ago." (Loud cheers.)

The following was the programme of the Toasts:—

1. The Queen, proposed by chairman,—“God save the Queen.”
2. Prince Albert and the Royal Family, proposed by chairman,—“March.”
3. The Governor-General, proposed by chairman,—“Laird o’ Cockpen.”
4. Lieut.-Col. Outram, proposed by chairman, and acknowledged by Lieut.-Col. Outram,—“See the Conquering Hero.”
5. The Chief Justice and Judges of the Supreme Court, proposed by B. J. Colvin, Esq., and acknowledged by Sir A. Buller,—“Polka.”
6. The Members of Council, proposed by Sir A. Buller, and acknowledged by Hon. J. Dorin,—“March.”
7. The Army and Navy, proposed by C. Prinsep, Esq., and acknowledged by Hon. Col. Low and Capt. Craufurd, R.N.,—“British Grenadiers” and “Rule Britannia.”
8. The Civil Service, proposed by Hon. B. Peacock, and acknowledged by Hon. F. J. Halliday,—“Waltz.”
9. The Chairman, proposed by Hon. F. J. Halliday, and acknowledged by Sir J. Colville,—“Galop.”

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 24th arrived at Madras Jan. 26th, and Calcutta, Jan. 30th (per Bengal).

THE SIKH SIRDARS.—Shere Singh, Chutter Singh, and Utter Singh, imprisoned in Fort William, have been liberated. They will remain in Calcutta for the present, and will be allowed to live with their wives and children upon a pension granted by the British government. Their families are on their way from the Punjab. Their release is only just. Englishmen always look upon political offences with a lenient eye, and after all, these men did only what those whom we style patriots had done before them.

THE NEW CANTONMENT at Naoshera beyond the Indus, is not to be commenced till April. The troops will be collected, and compelled to live in tents for nearly three months. We understand that another and more important fort is immediately to be erected at Peshawur itself. The old one is badly situated, and not healthy.

LORD W. BENTINCK AND HIS COOK.—The Hurkaru tells us a story of Lord W. Bentinck and his cook. This personage, M. Brasier, was selected by Prince Talleyrand; and on his arrival was received at Government House as a private friend of the Governor-General. Lord W. Bentinck was in the North-West, and the horror of Calcutta may be conceived, when his lordship requested the immediate attendance of M. Brasier, chef de cuisine.

THE 47TH REGIMENT N.I.—The 47th regiment N.I., now camped on the Esplanade, commence their move towards Burmah in the Tenasserim steamer, which takes down two companies on the 5th, with the following officers—Major Pott, commanding; Lieutenants McAndrew and Evans; and Ensign Worsley. We understand that a detachment will leave about the middle of the month, but as there is a great want of sea-going steamers to effect the Burmah relief, it is impossible to say when the entire corps, which is a thousand strong, with sixteen officers present, will get down to Rangoon.—Morning Chronicle, February 2.

ENSIGN J. PURVIS COCK, who some six months ago ran up large bills in Calcutta and then absconded, has been removed from the army.

THE SICCA FOURS AND THE COMPANY'S FOUR PER CENT. PAPER.—A correspondent of the Englishman notices the difference in the market value of the loan called the Sicca fours and the Company's four per cent. paper. The former is at a heavy discount as compared with the latter. The interest above Benares, it is said, is paid in the old Arcot rupee, which is of inferior value. Our contemporary suggests that this rupee is taken to avoid the exchange on the remittance of money to the north-west. The holders can have Company's rupees in Calcutta if they please.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.—The Hurkaru informs us, that from the 1st of May next, the public works will form a distinct department. It will have a separate responsible head, who will be in direct communication with the Government. The military board will be shorn of the power, which more than any other has called down on it the condemnation of the public. There is now a chance that a work urgently required may be sanctioned three months after the application has been received, and that the measurement as well as the price of work may be exactly estimated.

THE LINE OF ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH is being laid down through Calcutta. When finished, the line will be ready to Bar-rackpore; and about February 10th, it is expected the communication with Benares will be complete.

CIVIL CHANGES.—The Hurkaru announces the following changes about to take place in the disposition of the Civil Service. “Mr James is to succeed the late Mr. Brown as judge at Nuddea, and Mr. Bowring takes the place of Mr. James at Burdwan. Mr. Crawford is to be transferred from Rajshahye to the new division at Burdwan, and Mr. Elliott takes the Rajshahye commissionership, being replaced in the appointment of chief magistrate of Calcutta by Mr. Samuella, whose situation at Allipore is to be taken up by Mr. Fergusson, while his post at Monghyr is to be filled by Mr. Fletcher.”

NATIVE INGENUITY IN CHEATING.—A rich native ordered a goldsmith to make a gold idol for his family, and placed a guard over the man to prevent fraud. The goldsmith, however, was allowed to return home at night, and he employed his leisure in making another image in mosaic gold. This he sunk in a tank. When the real image was completed, he begged permission to perform the first poojah. It was granted. The image was dipped under the water, the mosaic imitation snatched up, and the counterfeit quietly carried to the household shrine.

CHILDREN BORN IN INDIA are almost entirely debarred from competing for scholarships, and some other prizes at the English universities. They are almost all confined to persons born in Great Britain. He suggests, that scholarships might be founded at the universities, or that a university should be founded and endowed in India. The former scheme will, we hope, be rendered unnecessary by the reform of the universities, and the latter does not meet the difficulty at all. No Englishman, not compelled by absolute poverty, will allow his sons to be educated in India.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FUND.—We perceive from the report of the ‘Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund,’ that the subscribers to that institution number 438. The monthly income amounts to Rs. 15,067, and the monthly expenditure to Rs. 6,474. The accumulated balance has reached Rs. 8,52,271, and the fund altogether is in a most favourable position. It is still, however, not supported by the service as it ought to be, as the increase during the year, thirty-eight members, must be ascribed to the admission of the missionary marriage registrars.

NATIVE HOLIDAYS.—The Hurkaru notices that in the year 1854, there will be eighty Hindoo and Mussulman holidays. Of these only eight fall upon a Sunday, and there will, therefore, be 124 days of idleness in the year. In England it required no slight effort to secure the Monday after Christmas-day as a holiday. The Government positively refused to lend its sanction to any such scheme, and kept the Downing-street offices open.—Friend of India.

LEAVE TO EUROPE.—The Commander-in-chief having discovered that officers of the Bengal army have indulged the delusive belief that they can when at Bombay obtain from the authorities of that presidency permission to proceed to Europe, issues a notification to inform all such of the fact that the sanction of the Government in Calcutta is indispensable to their embarkation. His Excellency further and most considerably intimates that, to avoid delay and inconvenience, the simplest and most advisable course is to include in the application for leave to visit Bombay, a further request to be allowed to proceed thence on furlough to Europe.—Agra Messenger, January 28.

THE GREAT AQUEDUCT of the Ganges canal, near Roorkee, will be opened on the 8th April next.

THE ORIENTAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of Calcutta, have in twenty years received upon their capital of Sa. Rs. 1,25,000, dividends aggregating fifteen lacs of rupees. The excessive competition, however, has beaten them, and they are about to effect a junction with an English company. The terms, it is said, are a return of the shareholders' capital, and a bonus of Rs. 70 on each share.

CAPTAIN A. ROBERTSON.—We hear that Captain (now Major) A. Robertson, deputy commissary of ordnance at Rangoon, also in charge of the artillery park there, has resigned his appointment and has returned to Calcutta, expecting shortly to proceed to the upper provinces, where he will probably be appointed to take charge of a department. Lieut. H. Voyle, who acted in the room of Captain Robertson, during his absence on duty at Prome, has been appointed to succeed him.—Englishman, February 2.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S CAMP.—The Cawnpore correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that the Commander-in-Chief's camp is detained at Cawnpore, owing to the sickness among the ladies and their children.

THE SHIP Margaret Skelly, bound for Singapore, is reported to have been burnt opposite Culpoe.

LIEUT. J. LEVEN, of the 62nd regt. N.I., has been ordered to study the new system of accounts at the office of the auditor of commissariat accounts.

BANKIPORE.—The following is from a correspondent at Bankipore:—"The beautiful and lovely city of Patna, once famed for its great men and riches, and now for its filth and poverty, has for several days past been in a state of feverish excitement. To be brief, the committee of public instructions, was liberal in the number of their invitations to the inhabitants, in which they were politely asked to attend the monster meeting purposed to be held at the school-house. This paper having omitted to mention the object of such a meeting, served to give ample play to the fruitful imaginations of the people; the guesses of the purpose were, you may imagine, many—but unanimity existed in one point, namely, that money was required from them in aid of the institution. In this they were not wrong, as you will soon learn. The meeting did take place on the 12th January, and was well attended by lope-wallahs and pugree-wallahs—in short the room was full. The excitement was now at its highest, hearts throbbed and faces grew pale. Our excellent judge broke the silence which prevailed by a very appropriate speech, I am told, in Hindostanee; I much regret my unacquaintance with that language, as it deprives me of the pleasure of giving you a full account of it. A friend however explained to me that the speaker sang the praises of education and learning, lauded the native gentry for having thrown aside all prejudices, and for swelling the ranks of the scholars by sending their children to the school. He pointed out the benefits the country would eventually derive by the extension of schools, and followed it up by a well-directed hit, which could not fail to reach the dull comprehensions of the natives. They were told that as a school in future will be the only portal through which the people can enter the Government service or other public employ, not to lose a moment in causing their children to be trained for usefulness. The speaker adverted to the liberality of Government in having spent large sums of money for educational purposes, and he thought it but fair that since the people will enjoy the fruits which these schools will yield, they should render some assistance for the support and extension of these institutions. (Great uneasiness and rolling of eyes in the crowd). A few shorter speeches followed; thanks were voted to the chair, but before the meeting separated, some conversation took place as to the manner in which the leach should be applied to the patients, who had been suffering from the feverish excitement I have mentioned. One proposed that each visitor should be desired to walk up to the chair and there, in the presence of the magnates, put his name down on a slip of paper for a specific sum of money: another suggested that paper, pen, and ink, be circulated in the room; a third remarked that it would be a great bore to sit in a cold room and look at a crowd of people scratching their names in all sorts of characters, and he therefore proposed that a committee be formed who should be empowered to draw up a list of required donors, and the sum each was expected to pay. An older, and probably a wiser head, overruled these suggestions, stating it as his opinion that it would be impolitic to use compulsion, and he proposed that the European members and visitors do return home for their tiffin, and the paper be left on the table to be filled up in the manner the native visitors pleased. This having been carried nem. con., the sahibs made their exit, followed by some of the dark gentry, who loved their coin more than their country. The voluntary subscription, I am happy to say, amounted to about Rs. 3,000, and more is expected from absentees. The number of youths on the school list is near 200."—Englishman, Feb. 2.

LIEUTENANT FORLONG, of the 1st regiment M.N.I., has been appointed superintending engineer for constructing a road across the Tiergoop Pass, on a salary of Rs. 500 per month, and Lieutenant Oakes, of the Madras engineers, assistant superintendent for conducting the topographical survey of the province of Pegu, on a salary of Rs. 300 per mensem.

CHOLERA has entirely disappeared among the men of the 47th N.I., which are encamped on the esplanade of Fort William.

THE SHIP Sir George Seymour, Captain Naylor, fell in with the Kestrel yacht, thirty miles to the southward of the floating light, out thirty days from Moulmein, and in distress for water and provisions. She was relieved by the Sir George Seymour.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. ARBUTHNOT EMERSON.—We have been favoured with a sight of some very handsome silver plate presented to Mr. Arbuthnot Emerson, the late agent of the Peninsula and Oriental Company, on the occasion of his departure from India. The plate consists of four pieces,—a jug, presented by the bench, the bar, and the principal members of the mercantile community; a wine-cooler, the gift of Parsee and other native gentlemen of Calcutta; a salver, without inscription, and a tankard given by the European artisans of the Peninsula and Oriental Company. It must be a proud satisfaction to Mr. Emerson to find that he has won the good-will and esteem of every class of society, and his unfailing courtesy and universal attention towards all with whom business brought him in contact, fully entitled him to these tokens of approbation, and will cause him to be long remembered in Calcutta. The testimonial, which would be most acceptable to us, although, as might be anticipated, the least costly, is that coming from the artisans, for it shows that he to whom it has been presented, while he has won the respect of the wealthy and great, has achieved the still more difficult but grateful end of securing the regard of those over whom he was placed in authority.—Bengal Hurkaru, Jan. 20.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief was at Merun-ke-Serai on Saturday and Sunday last, and in due course was to have marched into the cantonment of Futtygurh this day (Wednesday). His Excellency saw the 63rd N.I. under arms at Poorah on Thursday morning, the regiment having halted there that day for the purpose. The weather is described as still mild; the mercury not mounting higher than 89 degrees in the middle of the day, wind easterly, generally a sign of rain; but none apparently expected. About the 11th or 12th proximo the camp will be at Barilly, and visions of a trip to Kemaon had begun to present themselves.—Ibid.

LIEUTS. BLAIR, TOVEY, and MOFFAT, of the 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers, were being tried by a court-martial, which commenced its sittings on the 4th Dec., for their reported assaults upon the Jewish merchant at Moulmein.

LADY GOMM has paid a visit to Lucknow, and has taken her abode at the resident's house. It is rumoured that Sir William has purposely abstained from visiting the royal city, with a view to mark the displeasure of our Government towards a king whose ill-government and systematic rejections of its representative's advice are so notorious.

THE 8TH IRREGULAR CAVALRY, under the command of Major C. Becher, left Benares on the 27th of January, and will be at Sussam 2nd, Shergotey 7th, Burhee 11th, Govindpoor 18th, Mungalpoor 21st, and Burdwan 26th February; Hooghly 3rd, and Calcutta 5th March. If they arrive at Calcutta on that day, the regiment will have marched from Cawnpore to Calcutta with only one halt.

BURMAH.—A correspondent, whose statements may be relied on, writing from Sittang on the 5th January, says:—"On the morning of the 23rd ultimo, a large body of Burmans made a very sudden and unexpected attack upon our small garrison at this place, and caused no little alarm amongst us. The troops were instantly ordered out, double sentries and a chain of pickets were posted on the south side of the stockade, and a brisk fire was opened upon the enemy, and kept up for some time, but it was not till two 24-pounders were brought into action that the enemy thought it prudent to betake themselves to their heels. They even attempted to set fire to the buildings erected without the stockade, but fortunately their designs were frustrated. One of our sentinels received a shot through his turban. It appears that the skirmishing party, after being out some time, brought back intelligence to the effect that a band of Burmans (supposed to number about 1,000) were encamped about four miles from this; so we shall, in all probability, have some more unpleasant encounters. Sundry improvements are to be made here shortly, for which we are indebted to our active and zealous assistant commissioner, Lieutenant Holmes. The enlargement of the station is projected; 2,000 rupees have been advanced for the erection of a roofed-bazaar, similar to the one in Maulmain, and a bridge across the river, together with a substantial wharf, are to be constructed forthwith."

CIVIL FUND.—The meeting of the subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund had to be postponed, there being only six members present, whereas according to the rules nine are required to form a quorum.

The Gazette of Feb. 1 contains a Draft Act for amending the law relative to the several banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay. The Act is very short, and might have been provided with another section without incurring the imputation of prolixity. The first section authorizes the secretary to draw, accept, endorse, and sign bills of exchange and notes, &c., in the course of current business, which every secretary does at present. The second section authorizes these banks to lend money on the shares of incorporated Indian railway companies, a kind of business which might have been safely left to the discretion of the directors. We propose a third section, authorizing these three banks to deal in exchange generally, as they could do it to great advantage, and their shareholders would get better dividends than they are otherwise likely to see for some years.

RANGOON is to be garrisoned entirely by Madras troops: H. M.'s 84th, the 9th, 19th, and another N.I. regiment from Madras. Bassein is to be garrisoned from Moulmein, where of course only Madras troops will be: Sitang also receives its garrison from Moulmein. Shewgyne is garrisoned from Toungoo,—Pegu from Rangoon. All the Bengal troops are to be at and above Henzadah.

MEERUT, JAN. 28.—The week has been an unusually lively one, in consequence of the reviews, and their attendant dinners. On Thursday and Friday Gen. Anson inspected the artillery, and they certainly realized his expectations; the great gun and mortar practice took place yesterday afternoon (Friday), before the largest crowd of native spectators I ever saw on a military occasion. The miniature fort was exploded at the second shot, and every missile went dangerously near to its mark. The heat of the weather is dreadful; a cloudy sky without a breath of air, has been our lot for two or three days; but early this morning, there is a brisk dust-storm, smelling of rain in the distance. People are beginning to wear their April suits, and the "oldest inhabitant's" memory knows no such season. The races commence, I believe, on or about the 5th proximo, when there will be sufficient excuse for another week's gaiety.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 2.

INSPECTORS OF JAILS.—Government has for the present sanctioned, as a temporary measure, the appointment of an inspector of jails for Bengal; but the Governor-General proposes to take an early opportunity of recommending the appointment as a permanent one for the approval of the Court of Directors. In according his sanction, his lordship remarked, that the position of the inspector in Bengal should not be different from that of the inspector of the North-West Provinces in respect to salary. The Bengal inspector, he believed, would have to exercise a wider control, and perform far more arduous duties than his colleague in the North-West Provinces; and if the union of the offices of magistrate and collector should hereafter take place, as his lordship contemplated, the Bengal inspector's position will, in all respects, be precisely similar. The monthly cost of the establishment allowed to the North-West Provinces inspector was Rs. 307, and his lordship would sanction the same scale of establishment for Bengal, with the exception, that instead of the inspector's drawing a consolidated travelling allowance of Rs. 250 per month, he shall receive a daily allowance of Rs. 10 for the time actually spent in travelling away from his head-quarters, which will be ordinarily fixed at the Presidency.—Englishman.

KOHAT.—A friend writing from the Trans-Indus States says:—"I heard from Kohat the other day, and was surprised—as you will be—to know that the Afreedie Pass was again closed. So the last Kothul campaign, from which so much security and good were expected, has, as usual, turned out to be mere child's play! The pass had been sealed for a fortnight up to the date of my letter. The people of one village only, situate in the centre of the defile, are understood to be the evil-doers. Be this as it may, it seems to be quite enough to cut off the communication between two important posts, and the last treaty, if treaty there was, has been dishonoured. I have been in that niche in the world yclept Kohat, and do not wonder that some "sauce" has followed the "chops", which were eaten at Akhore the other day. An Afreedie, like every other mortal, has his virtues. You may slake your thirst at his door and share his meal one day—but beware! on the next, lest he prove a chap-at ee too hard for digestion! Negotiations would appear to be thrown away on such savages. They have hitherto been allowed to act with impunity. Large bodies of troops have visited their fastnesses, but visited them only to retire precipitately. What next will be done to bring the Afreedies to order remains to be seen. It may not be generally known, that the remains of an old road leading up to the Kothul are in existence. When and by whom this road was cut, tradition has not handed down.

It is called by the people "the Hindoo road," and was built with as scientific an eye as that which recently marked out the highway which is to connect Hindostan with Thibet. I once strayed along this ruined line of road; it is perhaps two miles or more long, and as level as any Jehu could wish. But in too many places it was not walking, but hopping from rock to rock, whilst in others, where there are extensive land-slips, some perilous climbing was required. The day may come when this old Hindoo road will re-awaken the echoes around, and the ghosts of a past century be startled—by the sound of the modern locomotive! Just now, the direct road up the Kothul is of course preferred, as the old line is too unprotected; to say nothing of the cost for repairs. Indeed, the work and expense would be equal to opening a new road—with the simple advantage of having the base line already traced, perhaps by Alexander.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 2.

MILITARY ON-DUTY.—The Hurkaru states, that Col. Stuart has officially intimated that he does not intend to resume his appointment as military secretary. Col. Birch will of course be confirmed.—H.M.'s 51st regt. are to embark at Moulmein direct for England.—The Englishman's correspondent in the vicinity of Meerut states that the Commander-in-Chief has been called upon to appoint Lieut.-Col. Horsford, of the 8th battalion artillery, to act in the room of Lieut.-Col. Huthwaite, as president of the committee ordered to be convened at Futtighur to inspect and report upon the stocks, &c., in the gun-carriage agency.—The left wing of H. M.'s 29th regiment are to leave for Rangoon in the Berenice, on Jan. 28.—The 47th regiment N.I., now encamped on the Esplanade, commence their move towards Burmah in the Tenasserim steamer.—The head-quarters of H. M.'s 80th regiment go home in the Blenheim.—General Anson was expected to arrive in Delhi.—The Commander-in-Chief having reached Futtighur, was received by the usual guard of honour, band, &c., of the 2nd Grenadiers.—Colonel Mountain, C.B., lay very dangerously ill in the head-quarters' camp (Feb.). Our latest accounts are very unfavourable, and state that even should he rally and get over the attack, he will have to proceed to England.—The 41st N.I. marched out of Mooltan on Feb. 3. They expect to be at Abbar about the 15th, Ferozepore 22nd, Karnaul 10th of March, Delhi the 18th, Allypore 26th, Etah 31st, Mynporie (where they will detach the left wing) 3rd of April, and Etawah about the 6th or 7th of April.—The 14th N.I., completing the relief of the Mooltan force, had arrived at that station.—The 59th N.I. under Colonel Colin Troup, have marched from Cawnpore en route for Umritsur.—The 4th irregular cavalry were expected to march into Hansi on the 6th Feb., and the detachment of regular cavalry, which are doing duty there, will then return to their station.—From Bareilly the camp is expected to go direct to Moradabad.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MEDAL FOR SERVICE IN BURMAH.

Prome, Dec. 22, 1853.—The Governor-General has the satisfaction of announcing to the force in Pegu, that the Queen has been graciously pleased to grant a medal to the troops that served during the war against Burmah.

The Governor-General feels a sincere gratification in thus making known to the troops the distinction by which the Sovereign has marked her sense of their services, whose value has been not less fully appreciated by the Government of India.

PERMISSION OF FAMILIES OF PUBLIC SERVANTS TO RESIDE AT BASSEIN.

Rangoon, Jan. 8th, 1854.—With reference to G.O. by the Governor-General in Council, No. 543 of the 6th July, 1853, the Most Noble the Governor-General is pleased to notify that the tranquillity and settled condition of the country around Bassein are such as to permit the families of public servants to join them there. His lordship regrets that the other stations in the province are not yet sufficiently secure to warrant any further extension of this permission at the present moment.

FURLONGHS VIA BOMBAY.

Head Quarters, Camp, Barah, Jan. 11th, 1854.—An erroneous impression being found to exist, that permission to proceed to Europe on furlough on private affairs can be accorded by the authorities at Bombay to officers of this presidency who obtain leave to visit that port preparatory to applying for such furlough, it is notified for the future guidance of officers, that the sanction of the government in Calcutta to their embarking for Europe is indispensable, and should be applied for in the same manner as though the embarkation were to take place from Calcutta, viz., through the assistant adjutant-general of the army there; but as this arrangement may possibly be productive of delay and inconvenience, the simplest and most advisable course is to include in the application for leave to visit Bombay, a further request to be allowed to proceed from thence on furlough to Europe, in order that if granted, the sanction of government to the two solicitations may be announced in one and the same order, and when no further steps in the matter will be necessary.

2. It is further notified for general guidance, that solicitations for leave to proceed to places beyond the limits of this presidency, and to visit stations within the presidency, should not be preferred in the same application:—in the one case the sanction of government is necessary; in the other it can be accorded by the commander-in-chief, and the indulgences should therefore be applied for in distinct and separate applications.

ENS. J. P. COCKS, 53RD N.I.

Fort William, Jan. 18.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Hon. the Court of Directors to the Governor of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, No. 132, dated Oct. 26, 1853, are published for general information:—

37. We have received no tidings of the arrival of Ensign Cock in this country.*

38. If at the date of your receipt of this despatch this officer shall not have rendered himself up to the military authorities, to be dealt with under the Mutiny Act and Articles of War, you have our authority for removing his name from the list of the army.

The Hon. Court's letter having been received on the 22nd December, 1853, Ensign Cock is to be struck off the strength of the army from that date.

EXAMINATION OF CIVILIANS.

Notification.—January 24, 1854.—The college of Fort William is abolished.

The following rules are prescribed for the examination of the newly appointed members of the Bengal civil service in the languages of India prevailing in the presidency of Fort William, for their guidance and control until declared qualified for the public service by knowledge of those languages, and for the discharge of other duties heretofore performed by the secretary and examiners of the college of Fort William.

I. There shall be a Board of Examiners in Calcutta, consisting of a president, and as many members, ex officio or otherwise, as the Government may from time to time appoint, with a secretary, who may be also a member of the Board.

II. The Board, in addition to the duties hereinafter enjoined, will perform those now devolving on the central committee for the examination of assistants.

III. For the more convenient despatch of business, the Board may form itself into sub-committees, each consisting of two or more of its members, and the president shall appoint a secretary to each sub-committee from among the members of the Board and its secretary. There shall be one sub-committee for the examination of civil servants by the qualification test and for honours, and for the performance of the other duties heretofore discharged by the examiners of the college of Fort William; and another sub-committee for the examination of assistants. The correspondence and miscellaneous executive business of the Board shall be conducted by the secretary acting under the orders of the president.

IV. The president of the Board shall be the president of each sub-committee, and the act of each sub-committee shall be, and be described to be, the act of the Board.

V. Every person appointed by the Court of Directors a member of the civil service on the Bengal establishment shall, immediately on his arrival in Calcutta, report himself in person to the secretary to the Board.

VI. Every such civil servant on his arrival in Calcutta, and until he is either attached to the public service, or directed or permitted to proceed to the interior, is under the orders and authority of the president of the Board of Examiners, and is bound to obey all orders, general or special, which he may receive from the president, either direct, or through the secretary to the Board. All such orders shall be regularly entered in an order-book to be kept by the secretary.

VII. The standing-orders of the college of Fort William so far as they consist with the rules now promulgated, shall continue to be binding on the young civil servants in Calcutta; but the Board will take immediate measures to revise and consolidate these standing orders, and bring them into conformity with the new system.

VIII. The newly-appointed civil servants of each term shall be allotted to the public service as they arrive, in such proportions as may be determined from time to time by the Government of India. For the present, one-half of the civil servants of each term (including the odd number when there is one) will be allotted to the lower provinces, and the other half to the north-west provinces and the Punjab.

IX. Of the civil servants of each term, those who first report themselves to the secretary shall have the preference, until the number to be allotted to one or other division of the presidency is complete. But if two or more arrive at Calcutta in the same ship, and report themselves to the secretary within twenty-four hours after arrival, the preference as between them shall be given to the senior in rank.

X. Every civil servant must qualify himself for the public service by knowledge of two languages according to the prescribed test. Those allotted to the lower provinces must qualify in Bengalee and Oordoo. Those allotted to the north-west provinces and the Punjab must qualify in Persian and Hinddee.

XI. The allotment of civil servants to either division of the presidency shall be reported to the Government, and no change shall be made in the allotment without the special sanction of Government in each case.

XII. Every civil servant shall be examined, as soon after his arrival as possible, in any language or languages he may have studied at the college of Haileybury, and a report of this initiatory examination shall be made to the Government.

XIII. There shall be a general examination at the commencement of every calendar month, at which all unpassed civil servants resident in or near Calcutta are required to attend, and the result of every such examination shall be reported to the Government. Intermediate examinations may be held for those who are studying for honours, but not otherwise, except under peculiar circumstances, and with the express sanction of the president.

XIV. Every civil servant is expected to pass the test of qualification in one language at or before the third general monthly examination after his initiatory examination, and in a second language within three months from the date of passing in the first. Failing either of these expectations, a civil servant will not be allowed to remain in Calcutta, but will be sent to complete his studies under some civil authority at a station in the interior.

XV. On good cause being shown, a civil servant will be permitted at any time after his initiatory examination to prosecute and complete his studies under some civil authority at a station in the interior.

XVI. A civil servant who fails to pass the test in two languages within eighteen months from the date of his initiatory examination (allowance being made for duly certified sickness) will on the expiration of that period be finally removed from the service.

XVII. No civil servant will be permitted to study for honours except in Calcutta, and unless he pass the test of qualification in two languages within four months from his initiatory examination.

XVIII. No civil servant will be permitted to continue studying for honours of whom it is not certified by the Board in the general examination report of each month, that he has made good progress during the month, and is likely within the prescribed time to obtain either a certificate of high proficiency or a degree of honour, as the case may be.

XIX. Twelve months from the initiatory examination is the extreme period allowed for obtaining honours in one language, and eighteen months from the same examination for obtaining honours in two or more languages.

XX. No civil servant who fails to obtain a certificate of high proficiency within eight months from his initiatory examination, shall be permitted to study for honours in a second language.

XXI. The first language in which a civil servant will be permitted to study for honours is the vernacular language of the greater part of that division of the presidency to which he is allotted, that is to say, Bengalee for the low provinces, and Hinddee or Oordoo for the North-West Provinces and Punjab. After obtaining a degree of honour or a certificate of high proficiency in any one of these languages within the prescribed term, a civil servant may apply himself to the study of any other of the dead or living languages of India.

XXII. The following is the test of qualification in the several languages:—

1. Construing with readiness and accuracy from the under-mentioned books:—

Persian.—Anwari Soheilee (first three chapters), and Gulistan. Oordoo.—Bagh-o-bahar and Ikhwānus Safa.

Hinddee.—Prem Sagur.

Bengalee.—Betāl Panchabīnshatī and Bangalār Itihās.

2. Translating into English with accuracy, a passage in an easy narrative style, not taken from the test books.

3. Translating intelligibly and with accuracy of grammar, into the language in which the examination is held, an English paper of an easy narrative style.

* Letter dated 24th June, 1853, No. 137.—86. Report that Ensign James Purvis Cock, 53rd N.I., is absent without leave, and is supposed to have proceeded to England on the steamer Queen of the South.

4. Translating in like manner a paper of English sentences.

XXIII. The following is the test of high proficiency:—

1. Construing with readiness and accuracy from the undermentioned books:—

1. In Arabic.—1. Alif Laila; 2. Ikhwanus Safa; 3. Nafhat-ul-Yarman.
2. Persian.—1. Gulistan; 2. Bostan; 3. Anwari Soheilee.
3. Hindoostanee or Oordoo.—1. Bagh-o-bahar; 2. Ikhwanus Safa; 3. Gooli Bakawullee; 4. Baital Pachisi.
4. Sanscrit.—1. Hitopadesha; 2. Mahabharata.
5. Hindee.—1. Rajneeti; 2. Prem Sagur; 3. Bagh-o-bahar.
6. Bengalee.—1. Bangalar Itihas; 2. Betal Panchabinshati; 3. Purush Parikya.

2. Translating from and into English as prescribed for the test of qualification; but from papers of a more difficult nature, and with greater accuracy of idiom and neatness of expression.

XXIV. The following is the test for a degree of honour:—

1. Construing with readiness and accuracy from the undermentioned books:—

1. In Arabic.—1. Nafhat-ul-Yaman; 2. Talmiur Namah; 3. Muqamati Harri.
2. Persian.—1. Akhlaqi Julali; 2. Inshai Abulfuzl; 3. Sikan-dur Namah; 4. Dewani Hafiz.
3. Hindoostanee or Oordoo.—1. Bagh-o-bahar; 2. Ikhwanus Safa; 3. Kbirad Afroz; 4. Kaliyati Souda; 5. Prem Sagur.
4. Sanscrit.—1. Hitopadesha; 2. Mahabharata; 3. Raghu Vansa; 4. Sakuntalla Nataka.
5. Hindee.—1. Prem Sagur; 2. Sabha Bilas; 3. Ramayan, by Tulsi Das; 4. Bagh-o-bahar.
6. Bengalee.—1. Purush Parikya; 2. Betal Panchabinshati; 3. Bangalar Itihas; 4. Mahabharata; 5. Probodh Chandrika.

2. Translating into English with accuracy two passages, one in prose and the other in poetry, selected from some difficult work, not being a test-book.

3. Translating a difficult passage from English with accuracy, elegance, and neatness of expression, and perfect correctness of spelling and grammar.

4. Conversing (in the vernacular languages) with accuracy and fluency.

The examination for a degree of honour will be of a searching nature, and the exercises, both oral and written, must be performed with such excellence as distinctly to establish a claim to eminent proficiency.

XXV. To every civil servant who gains a certificate of high proficiency there shall be awarded a donation of eight hundred rupees, and a certificate under the signature of the president of the Board.

XXVI. To every civil servant who gains a degree of honour, there shall be awarded a donation of one thousand six hundred rupees, and a diploma under the signature of the head of the Government of Bengal.

XXVII. But two pecuniary rewards for the same language will not be given; and if, after obtaining a certificate of high proficiency, a civil servant becomes entitled to a degree of honour in the same language, he shall on the second occasion receive only the difference between the rewards attached to these two several distinctions.

XXVIII. To every civil servant who passes the test of qualification in any language with marked proficiency at or before the third general monthly examination after his initiatory examination, there shall be awarded a medal of merit; and to every one who passes the test in two languages within that time with similar proficiency, there shall be awarded a medal of merit, and a donation of one thousand rupees.

XXIX. Certificates of high proficiency and medals of merit shall be delivered to those entitled to them by the president at a full meeting of the Board. Degrees of honour will be conferred by the head of the Government in person.

XXX. When a civil servant has completed his course of study, and has been attached to one or other division of the presidency, for employment in the public service, he shall receive from the secretary to the Board of Examiners a certificate specifying the proficiency he may have acquired, the rewards adjudged to him, and the general tenor of his conduct while engaged in his studies.

XXXI. No civil servant unattached shall leave Calcutta or its vicinity, including a circle with a radius of five miles from Government-House, without the permission of the Government. Every instance in which this rule is transgressed, shall be reported to the Government by the secretary to the Board.

XXXII. Any young civil servant who may be guilty of any irregular or indecorous conduct, which may not appear to call for a report to Government, shall be admonished by the president. But serious instances of wilful disobedience, or of disorderly and unbecoming conduct, shall be reported for the information and orders of the Government.

XXXIII. Whenever it may appear to the secretary, or to any member of the Board of Examiners, that a young civil servant is likely from expensive habits, from idleness, or any improper indulgences, to incur debt or otherwise disgrace himself, and set an injurious example to others, a report shall be made to the president, and the president after admonition, shall, if he thinks necessary, report the matter for the information of the Government.

XXXIV. The contracting of debt by the civil servants of the East-India Company is prohibited. Those who enter the public service under pecuniary embarrassment, implying the contraction of habits of prodigality, will be held to be disqualified for employment of trust and confidence, so long as those habits and embarrassments continue.

XXXV. The young civil servants will, on the same conditions as heretofore, be allowed the use of the Oriental books belonging to the library of the late College of Fort William, which library will now be in charge of the secretary to the Board of Examiners.

XXXVI. The accounts of the office of the secretary to the Board of Examiners will be kept, audited, and rendered, in the same manner as those of the late College of Fort William.

XXXVII. Civil servants who are not qualified for the public service, but are permitted or ordered to reside in the interior, will be placed under the authority and orders of the commissioner of the division, or the judge of the district, in which they severally reside, and are bound to obey all orders they receive from him. They are not permitted to quit the station and its vicinity without the sanction of the Government.

XXXVIII. The examination of unpassed civil servants in the interior will be conducted as at present by means of written papers prepared by the board, and forwarded under seal by the board's secretary to the chief civil authority of the station.

XXXIX. Civil servants will receive from the date of their arrival in the country until they pass the test of qualification in one language, a salary of 250 rupees a month; and so long as they remain in Calcutta, an allowance of eighty rupees for house-rent. After passing the test in one language, they will receive, until attached to the public service, a salary of 300 rupees a month; and while they remain in Calcutta, eighty rupees as house-rent.

XL. Native teachers will be allowed to the young civil servants at the public expense. In Calcutta each civil servant will be at liberty to entertain a moonshee or a pundit, according to the language he is studying; and every such teacher will receive from the secretary to the Board of Examiners the authorized allowance, on the production of a certificate duly attested by the student on whom he may have attended. An examination for admitting moonshees and pundits will be held by the board in the months of February and August, and only such as gain testimonials of qualification to teach shall be eligible for employment by the students. A testimonial is to be given for each language in which, on examination, qualification is established; the test for such examination being the same as that laid down for a degree of honour, including a fair knowledge of English. One moonshee or pundit will not be allowed to draw pay for more than three students in one month.

XLI. In the interior, the choice of the moonshee or pundit will be subject to the approval of the chief civil authority; and on the production of a like certificate, the authorized allowance will be paid by the collector of the district, and debited in his accounts to the secretary to the Board of Examiners.

XLII. So much of the foregoing rules as relates to the time at which unpassed civil servants are to pass the several examinations for qualification and honours, will apply fully only to those who have not yet arrived in India. In the case of those now in India, the general monthly examination held in February, 1854, shall, for the purposes of these rules, be taken in respect to those who have not yet passed in one language, to be their initiatory examination; and in respect to those who have passed in one language, to be the date on which they passed in that language. But no such unpassed civil servant shall thereby acquire any advantage, or be permitted either to study for honours, or to remain in the service longer than he would have been permitted under the rules heretofore in force.

The Board of Examiners is hereby constituted as follows:—

PRESIDENT:

Sir Robert Barlow, Bart.

MEMBERS:

[A. J. M. Mills, Esq.

H. Ricketts, Esq., Member of the Board of Revenue.

C. B. Trevor, Esq.

THE FIVE PER CENT LOAN.

Fort William, Financial Department, Jan. 28th, 1854.—Notification.—Notice is hereby given, that all the notes of the five per cent. loan, bearing date 30th June, 1841, which have not been already advertised for payment, and are still outstanding, will be discharged at the General Treasury in Calcutta, on the 29th of April next, on which day the interest thereon will cease.

Proprietors of the notes hereby advertised for payment are permitted, on or before the 29th of April next, to transfer the amount of their promissory notes into the four per cent. loan of 1854-55.

Proprietors who may transfer their promissory notes into the loan of 1854-55, through the government agent, shall not be subjected to the payment of the fees prescribed in the rules of the government agency for transferring notes from one loan to another.

All officers, authorized to receive subscriptions to government loans, are hereby required to receive applications in writing from individuals who may desire to transfer the amount of their notes into the four per cent. loan.

These applications, together with the promissory notes in reference to which they may have been received, shall, without fee or expense of any kind to the proprietor, be transmitted to the deputy accountant-general at Fort William, who will forthwith cause to be prepared and issued to the parties entitled thereto, promissory notes in the four per cent. loan of 1854-55.

Prompt settlement of the principal and interest, at the rate of five per cent. per annum, to the date of advertised discharge, will be made with proprietors who may tender their notes for transfer into the new loan; provided, however, that the principal only will be transferred, and that the interest at the rate of five per cent. up to the 29th of April inclusive, as well as anticipation interest at the rate of four per cent. up to the 30th of June, 1854, will be discharged in cash.

It is further notified that the Most Noble the Governor-General in council has, for the accommodation of proprietors who are not in India, authorized the deputy accountant-general to allow the conditional transfer of their notes to the four per cent. loan of 1854-55, on the applications of agents or friends, leaving it optional with the proprietors to confirm the transfer, or to require payment in cash; provided, however, that no notice disallowing the transfer will be received after six months from the present date.

Published by order of the Most Noble the Governor-General of India in council,

C. ALLEN,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.

The following communication from the Hon. the Court of Directors to the Governor-General of India in Council is published for general information:—

Military Department.

Copy-paragraphs which will form a No. in the next list of packets to the Governor-General of India in Council.

1. The law as affecting the absence of our servants from India having been revised by a recent Act of the Legislature, we have had under our consideration the regulations for furloughs to Europe, and for leave of absence at the Cape of Good Hope, New South Wales, and elsewhere out of India.

2. Our officers avail themselves of these regulations to a very large extent, as will appear from the following statement of absentees (excluding regimental colonels), prepared from the latest official army lists received by us, dated in July, 1853:—

Numbers of military and medical officers on furlough to Europe, on private affairs .....	157
On furlough to Europe, on sick certificate .....	641
On leave to sea, the Cape, New South Wales, &c. ....	125

Besides large numbers absent on sick certificate, and on private affairs in India.

3. With the view of adapting the regulations to the present increased facilities of communication, and to correct as far as possible any tendency in them to deter officers from resorting to the places which may be most conducive to the restoration of their health when a change of climate is required for that purpose, we have resolved to adopt the following rules, to have effect from the date of their promulgation in general orders, in substitution for the existing rules, viz.:—

4. Furloughs or leaves of absence, on sick certificate, to be granted for a term not exceeding eighteen months, whether they be to any place in Europe or elsewhere out of India. The regimental allowances of his rank for a term not exceeding six months to be granted to the officer receiving such leave, from the date of his departure from his presidency; regimental pay to be drawn during the period of his absence.

5. Extended leave may be granted as at present, on production of medical certificates, for further periods not exceeding eighteen months in the whole. During this further time regimental pay to be continued, but under no circumstances for a longer period than three years altogether, from the commencement of the absence.

6. Furloughs on private affairs to be allowed for a period of two years at the expiration of ten years' service, and for a second period of two years after twenty years' service in India. Officers who have taken the benefit of the regulation for the grant of fur loughs on sick certificate, to Europe or elsewhere beyond sea, to be ineligible to a furlough on private affairs until they have served six years from the date of their last return to duty.

7. Pay of regimental rank to be drawn whilst on furlough, but not beyond the period of two years in each furlough.

8. All grants of furlough on private affairs to be subject to the exigencies of the public service, and to the regulations framed for the preservation of the efficiency of each regiment by limiting the number of absentees.

9. Officers holding staff appointments may have leave of absence on sick certificate or furlough, for a period not exceeding six months without losing their appointment, and if on sick certificate receiving for that time half staff allowances, but on any absence beyond that period, the staff appointment and allowances cannot be retained except on special grounds, to be sanctioned by the government of the presidency. Any such special grant of leave to be reported to us directly with the reasons for it, and to be subject to our approbation.

10. Having made these arrangements for furloughs on private affairs and sick certificate, we think it right to modify the privileges conceded by the present regulations to absentees in India, at the Cape of Good Hope, and elsewhere within Indian limits, of counting their time of absence on sick certificate and on private affairs for their retiring pensions, whilst absentees on furlough or on sick certificate in Europe have hitherto had no such advantage.

11. Officers in consequence resolved that no furlough or leave of absence, as announced in general orders, exceeding two years in twenty years of aggregate service, three years in twenty-five years' service, and four years in thirty years' service, shall be allowed to count as service for the retiring * pension, and that no difference shall be made, in this respect, between leave of absence taken in Europe or elsewhere, or whether the leave be on sick certificate or on private affairs.

12. If regimental officers now in the service prefer retaining what may be considered the advantage of the present regulations, they may do so, provided they signify their wish to that effect through the proper department, when they next apply for furlough or leave of absence.

JAMES C. MELVILL.

FREIGHTS.

Our quotations are, to London and Liverpool, 4l. to 4l. 10s.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 4).—The import market, in some respects, has been good, chiefly for Grey Shirtings, White Shirtings, and other Plain Staples and Scotch Fabrics. Mule Twist has attracted more attention during the last week, and about 1,200 bales have been reported sold since last steamer left. Prices are not quite so firm, but there is very little difference; 40s. have sold at 3-8½ to 4-1 per morah. Something has been done in all kinds of Coloured Yarns at previous rates. Turkey Red, of first quality, is very well supported in value. The Metal market is very quiet. A few sales of Copper and Iron comprise nearly all the business of the fortnight. Prices are high.

MADRAS.

CUSTOMS.—The Englishman notices a case, which has recently been decided by the Supreme Court of Madras, and which is of some importance to importers. The collector of sea customs detained some bacon, on the ground that it was unfit for human food; the importers brought an action against him, and the court decided that he had no right to detain the bacon. The English law did not apply to India. Any one, therefore, is permitted to import any food he can pay for, and if he can find purchasers—caveat emptor.

CURRENCY OF THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman publishes a long and interesting communication on the debased currency of the Nizam's dominions. Two coins are current,—the residency rupee, or old coinage, in which all payments to the British Government must be made, and the city rupee, or current coin. They bear to each other the proportion of nine and 6½. The old currency is becoming scarce. The debased coinage has a fictitious value, and the heavier rupee is melted down and recoined. It is said that the British Government will soon suffer severely in the exchanges, and the writer suggests various schemes for remedying the evil. The simplest would be to abolish the local mints at once, and make the Company's rupee the sole legal tender from Peshawur to Tinnevely.

THE GOMPERTZ RETIRING FUND.—The Madras Spectator announces that the scheme for a retiring fund for the Madras army, drawn up by Captain Gompertz, has failed. Only twenty-nine regiments accepted it, and the project has therefore been abandoned. The army of that presidency still, however, desires the addition of an annuity branch to the military fund. We should imagine this might be accomplished by the aid of one of the great associations which grant deferred annuities.

NAGPORE.—The Bangalore Herald informs us that Lieut. Crichton, the officiating assistant-resident at Nagpore, has assumed the temporary administration of that country. Durbars are held daily, reports are received, and although the country is profoundly quiet, the hill at Nagpore has been fortified, and the battalion of artillery there stationed, ordered to stand fast.

HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—The Fort William Gazette of Feb. 1 contains a notification, altering the designation of the force, heretofore known as the "Nizam's Army," to that of "Hyderabad Contingent," and fixing the strength of the force for the future at four field batteries of artillery, four regiments of cavalry, and six regiments of infantry,—a very compact little army. The same order gives the names of the officers attached to each battery and regiment.

LORD ELPHINSTONE, accompanied by a party of twenty-five gentlemen, took a trip in February on the Bombay railway as far as Tanna.

BANGALORE (Jan).—Much distress, we learn, is beginning to be experienced in the neighbourhood of Bangalore, owing to the great rise in the price of grain, and all other necessary commodities.

MADRAS BANK.—The affairs of the Madras Bank (says the Overland Athenæum, Feb. 9) have been again exciting attention. A fresh stroke of financial reform has just been accomplished by the paying off of the remaining portion of the notes of the five per cent. loan of June, 1841, which are all advertised for discharge on the 29th of April next, when the interest on them will cease. Holders of five per cent. paper have, however, the option allowed of transferring the amount of their promissory notes into the new four per cent. loan, the principal only to be transferred, the interest up to the 29th of April being discharged in cash. With regard to proprietors of stock not in India, it is notified by the Secretary to Government, that the Deputy Accountant-General has been instructed to allow the conditional transfer of their notes to the four per cent. loan of 1854-55, on the application of agents or friends, leaving it optional with the proprietors to confirm the transfer or to require payment in cash; provided, however, that no notice disallowing the transfer will be received after six months from the date of the notification. The Spectator, noticing the objections that exist to the present system of management of the Madras Bank, says, with regard to the civilian Government directors, that they are generally unfit for the business, "because they have not the intimate acquaintance with commercial persons, markets, and transactions, which mercantile men must more or less possess in the natural course of things; that is, without special and invidious scrutiny into the affairs of their neighbours. Moreover, civilians cannot be expected to understand the principles of banking, and the importance of pursuing a steady course of dealing with the public, uninterrupted byrotchets and caprice, which leave constituents perpetually in doubt as to what treatment they may experience when they seek assistance—as well as merchants do. It is currently asserted, and probably with truth, that much of the vexatious uncertainty which has driven custom from the bank and kept dividends low, is attributable to the peculiar notions of one or two Government directors, who reject paper that should pass. Were discounts left to the secretary, this error would be corrected."

THE NAWAB OF THE CARNAATIC has, it appears, undertaken the leading role in a new play, "A Late Way to Pay Old Debts." In this character during last week he paid on Mr. Maclean's, debt to the common assignee, the sum of thirty thousand rupees from the Panjum Hissa just received from Government, being one-fifth of the amount due under two bonds in the name of Veeraperumall Pillay, the balance to be liquidated by similar annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent. Further, we are told that his highness is prepared to pay Mr. Arathoon and his other creditors in the same manner. We congratulate his highness's creditors on the measures adopted by his highness for the gradual settlement of their claims.—Athenæum.

MILITARY ON-DITS.—The last detachments of the relieving regiments, H.M.'s 12th lancers, 74th and 43rd foot, had arrived at Madras, and marched to take up their stations.—A salute of thirteen guns was fired from the saluting battery on the departure (in February) from the presidency, of Major-General McNeil, commanding centre division, on a tour of inspection.—A salute of seventeen guns was fired on the disembarkation of Sir Christopher Rawlinson, Kt., chief justice, who had arrived from Calcutta (2nd Feb.) on board the P. and O. steamer Bombay.—Amongst the on-dits of the day, was one current to the effect that Colonel Sandys has refused the command of the Pegu division, which, it is supposed, will cause his being passed over in future.—The following military items are taken from the United Service Gazette: "We learn that the appointment of principal commissary of ordnance has been offered to Colonel Hammond, but that Colonel Blundell, C.B., will fall back upon it, if Colonel Conran returned from the Cape before he is promoted; and he talks of returning immediately, to resume his command as brigadier of artillery."—The head-quarters of H. M.'s 43rd regiment, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Skipwith, had arrived from the Cape on board the ship Hougoumont.—The last detachment of H. M.'s 43rd regiment had arrived from the Cape in the Havering.—After a correspondence between the Madras Government, the Medical Board, the Court of Directors, and we know not how many commanding officers, of nearly twenty years, the barracks at Secunderabad have been at last finally and fully condemned. We (Athenæum) congratulate the Madras army on this result.—H.M.'s 15th hussars marched out of Bangalore on January 29th, en route for Madras, where they will embark for Europe, after a service in India of 15 years. Of the hussars, 147 have volunteered in the 12th lancers. The annexed we find in the Madras Spectator (Feb. 1):—"About the middle of January, a captain in one of the N.I. regiments stationed at Kamptee, who chanced to be at the presidency, received information that his services had been applied for, with a view to his appointment in the department of Public Works. The adjutant-general, however, objected to Government, that Brigadier Williams, commanding at Kamptee, had written strongly deprecating the withdrawal of any more officers from thence, on account of the paucity of those present with the force, and that the Commander-in-Chief subsequently could not sanction the transfer of the officer, in question who was ordered to rejoin his corps. Well, so far good; but last Friday's Gazette announced that the services of another party, whose regiment is also at Kamptee, Captain Holland, of the 37th grenadiers, had actually been allowed to that very department of public works, from which those of the first-mentioned officer had been withheld; and this notwithstanding Brigadier Williams's letter! So that while one on the spot, previously nominated to the staff, has at a great expense to find his way to Kamptee, under the pretext that public considerations demand his presence there, another captain is brought down at like expense from Kamptee, to fill the very appointment of which he has been deprived; and Government, moreover, loses the services of two officers during the time occupied in the double journey, instead of having one all along on the spot, where Brigadier Williams pronounces him necessary, and the other ready for instant employment where the executive has need of him! So much for the consistency and fairness of the adjutant-general!"

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAIL of Jan. 9th arrived at Bombay Feb. 6th (per Feroze).

RAILWAY SURVEY.—The Bombay Gazette informs us, that the reports of the engineers employed to survey the line between Kallian and Broach are most favourable. They consider that it will be perfectly possible to construct a line between Surat and Bombay, without any very severe gradients. The surveyors, it is said, are working at a rate which bids fair to realize the expectations of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company. They have been ordered to complete the survey in the present favourable season.

MALWA OPIUM.—The Bombay Gazette supplies us with some statistics of the consumption of Malwa opium. The total export last year from Bombay amounted to 25,237 chests, valued at Rs. 3,01,58,215, and the total amount of duty levied was Rs. 1,00,94,800. The trade has not greatly increased of late. In 1845-46, the export was 247,185 chests.

CONSERVANCY OF BOMBAY.—The local government has placed a lac of rupees at the disposal of the conservancy commissioners.

MILITARY RETIREMENT.—We hear that Brevet-Major Agar, of the 3rd N.I., superintendent of police in the Ahmedabad collectorate, and commanding the coolie police corps, is about to retire from the service. This vacancy will promote Lieutenant Evans Grant and Ensign Chapman to the superior grades.—Telegraph and Courier.

THE HEAD-QUARTERS of the 9th N.I. marched out of Belgaum on the morning of the 30th ult., en route to Rutnagerie, where they embark for Surat, the new station of the corps.

COURT-MARTIAL.—We understand that the court-martial on Colonel Gidley will sit on the 15th inst. The following witnesses have been warned for the prosecution:—15th Regt. N.I.—Major Watkin, Captain Kane, Lieuts. Comyn, Thompson, Coles, Wainwright, and Hammond. Artillery.—Lieuts. Billamore and Hoaken. Dr. Elliott, the messman, and gharwalla.—Telegraph and Courier.

COMMERCIAL BANK.—The appointment of accountant to the Commercial Bank, vacant by Mr. Robinson's transfer as manager of the Mercantile Bank, has been conferred upon Mr. J. W. Wood, who, for several years past, has been employed in the Bombay branch of the Agra Bank.

CIVIL CHANGES.—We understand that numerous changes are likely to take place very shortly in the judicial department, consequent on the rumoured return of Mr. Frere to Europe, on furlough. Mr. LeGeyt, in accordance with, it is said, the intentions of the Honourable Court of Directors, will resume his seat on the Sudder bench, and his place at Poona, will, of course, be occupied by Mr. Keays; his, again, by Mr. Stuart, lately returned from England. Other changes are mentioned; among them that Mr. Lockett, assistant magistrate of the Tannah Zillah, is to be appointed an assistant judge, with a view to succeeding to the registership of the Sudder Adawlut on the promotion of the present acting register to a higher post. The next Gazette will, doubtless, contain a confirmation of one or other of the reports which are afloat.—Bombay Times, February 8.

THE GOLD QUESTION IN INDIA.

WE resume the subject commenced in our last publication.

On the 25th April, 1806, the Hon. Court of Directors sent out a despatch proposing an entirely new regulation of the coinage of India; and the principles explained in this despatch were the bases of the reforms of system introduced by Act XVII. of 1835.

In paragraph 9 of that despatch the Court write:—

“Upon the subject of the fittest alloy for coin, and its proportion to the quantity of fine metal, our attention has been directed to a report made to the Right Hon. the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council, appointed to take into consideration the state of the coins of this country, and the present establishment and constitution of his Majesty's mint, January, 1803.

“In this report the British standard for gold coin, viz. 17 alloy and 11 fine gold, is, by a variety of extensive experiments, proved to be the best proportion, or at least as good as any which could have been chosen; and that such alloy for gold coin may be of fine Swedish copper, so as to answer every purpose of a mixed proportion of silver, without occasioning any further waste of that metal.”

Again, in paragraph 16, the Court say,—“We are by no means desirous of checking the circulation of gold, but of establishing a gold coin on a principle fitted for general use. This coin, in our opinion, should be called a gold rupee, and be made of the same standard as the silver rupee, viz. 180 troy grains gross weight, and 165 troy grains fine gold; so that the coins, both gold and silver, should be of the same denomination, weight, and fineness.”

Although this despatch was sent out in 1806, it was not until 1818 that the orders it contained for changing the standard of the silver and gold coin, were carried into execution in Bengal and Madras. In that year, the rupee of 180 grains, 15 of which were alloy, was coined at Madras, and by Regulation XIV. of 1818, the standard of both the gold and silver coin of Bengal was reduced to the same rate, viz.  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy; but the Government was not then prepared to dispense with the sicca currency; this standard was therefore applied to the coin of the 19th Sun, established by Regulations passed in 1792 and 1793. The sicca rupee was accordingly increased in weight to 192 grains by the addition of alloy, and the total weight of the Calcutta gold mohur was fixed at 204.710 grains, viz.—

Pure gold ... ..	Grains 187.65
Alloy ... ..	„ 17.05

The intrinsic value of this coin is thus one per cent., or one grain and  $\frac{1}{10}$  of pure gold, less than that of the old gold mohur; but when silver is the alloy, this difference barely covers its value.

The above statement shows that, notwithstanding the alteration of the standard by Government Regulation in 1818, the coinage of the old gold mohur of 1792 was renewed in 1825 on account of Government; and in September, 1829, upon the application of a bullion-merchant, the coinage of the old coin was renewed also on account of individuals. From that date to 1835, when the new Coinage Act passed, there were no low-standard gold mohurs coined for several years; all that were issued (and the coinage was larger than that of the seventeen years from 1801 to 1818) were of the old nearly pure standard: the reason for which is sufficiently apparent, on reference to the quotations of price for each description of coin in the price-currents of the day. The new gold mohur, though intrinsically containing only one per cent. less of pure gold, averaged in the market only 17 rupees, while the pure coin of the standard of 1792-3 sold for 18 sicca rupees. The motives of the Hon. Court, in ordering the standard of the gold coin to be lowered to  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy, were apparently, First, to assimilate the standard with the gold coin of England.

Second, to produce a coin which would better stand friction, the alloy having the effect of hardening the metal.

Third, to save the heavy expense of refining. This latter was the main consideration which led to the reduction of the silver standard; for dollars\* containing 10 per cent. of alloy, were the principal bullion imported, which, while the sicca rupee contained  $2\frac{1}{17}$  per cent. only of alloy, threw upon Government heavy charges for refining that metal.

Fourthly, the apparent simplicity of having both the gold and silver coin with the same proportion of alloy and of the same weight; was doubtless also a consideration with the Honourable Court.

It is not to be denied that the above considerations were entitled to great weight, and if gold had been the measure of value, and the coin in general use in India, the Government might well have resolved to assimilate its gold currency, and to submit to the sacrifices necessary to carry the measure through. But the Government of India has wisely avoided the error of making gold the measure of value; and although up to 1835 the gold mohur was a legal tender for 16 rupees, even that privilege has been taken away from it by Act XVII. of 1835. The Government stamp is now put upon gold merely as an assurance of the weight and standard of the stamped piece. It sells, like any other commodity, at the price it will fetch in the market; and the only inducement individuals have to bring their money to be stamped is, that it may readily sell without suspicion, under the assurance of the stamp. If, therefore, the Government continues to set its stamp on metal that carries with it no privileges as a legal tender, the first consideration is, not the fitness to bear friction, not the assimilation of what is stamped to the coin of other countries, but evidently to suit the system to the people's habits and wishes, so as to do the thing as extensively as possible.

The market of Calcutta has invariably exhibited a great difference of price between the pure gold mohurs of old standard and those of the new one-twelfth alloy standard. For seven years, that is from 1818 to 1825, the Calcutta mint coined nothing but new-standard gold mohurs; but in 1825-26, the Government having had a large receipt of gold from the Burmese, and having obtained also a considerable remittance of gold from Madras, consequent upon the substitution of rupees for pagodas in the currency of that presidency, this Government gold was, for the sake of the profit, coined into gold mohurs of the old standard, Regulation XIV. of 1818 prescribing  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy for the Calcutta gold, notwithstanding.\* There were above four lacs of old gold pieces struck in the Mint, and sold at the general Treasury at the price of the day. But it was only in 1829 that a similar privilege was conceded to private bullion-merchants. The consequence, however, of conceding to them the privilege of obtaining coin of the old standard was, that in the six years from the date when it commenced to 1835, when the new Act took the privilege away, nearly as much private gold bullion was brought to be coined as in the eleven preceding years: and when the privilege was taken away, there was a very limited coinage of the new gold coin, and that coinage was principally of Government gold. The only private bullion received for the first two years was sent in before the new die was determined upon and proclaimed, in the hope of obtaining old gold mohurs, while the Government was in the difficulty of not having settled the device of the new. But Lord Metcalfe, then Governor-General, adopted the experimental die cut for the double and single gold pieces, on purpose to defeat this attempt: however, the decision was made hastily, and there has never to this day been a formal publication of the devices for the different divisions of the gold coin, similar to that promulgated in the Gazette for the rupee, owing partly to there having been for a long time no private gold received for coinage, but mainly to the doubts which began to be felt by the Mint Committee as to whether it would not be necessary to abandon the  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy standard, if it were desired to obtain private gold bullion for coinage.

We have thus the following facts in favour of stamping pure, instead of alloyed gold :—

First. The difference of price between the old and new gold mohurs, which, instead of being only one per cent., has been at the lowest one out of eighteen, or between five and six per cent. This difference was not local, or peculiar to Calcutta; the returns obtained from the interior showed even greater differences.\* The preference is not peculiar to the Government stamp; it is the pure gold coin that the people of Bengal like to have in their possession; and if they could obtain it in Venetian sequins, that coin would bear the same premium.† The Jypoor gold mohurs, which are mere dumps of pure gold, bear the same high agio, and so long as any native mint in India, of sufficient credit and authority, will put its stamp on pure gold, all the private gold in the country will go there to be stamped, instead of being brought to our Mint. The premium on pure coin is indeed so high, that it is worth the while of any holder of Government gold mohurs with  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy, to melt and refine the gold, in order to procure it to be stamped as a pure coin, however inferior in execution, that he may sell it with the additional premium.

Second. The difference of price even of unstamped pure gold, as compared with stamped  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy coin, was such, that the Mint Committee of Calcutta, in the year 1836, applied to Government, and obtained leave to sell the Government bullion in its possession, instead of coining it. The calculation of profit was based on a comparison, not with the par fixed for receipts into the Government treasury (viz. fifteen of silver for one of gold), but with the price at which the same gold would sell as a coin; showing evidently that our stamp gave no additional value, but the contrary.

Third. After the passing of Act XVII. of 1835, there was for some time no gold sent into the Mint for coinage by individuals, except that first 10,000 pieces, which were sent before the device was declared, under the hope of compelling Government to strike it in mohurs of the old standard.

Fourth. The coinage of gold on account of individuals was, from 1810-11 to 1818, upwards of 13,00,000 in value per annum.\* From May, 1818, when the coinage was confined to mohurs of the new standard, it fell off to about one-tenth of that annual sum. In 1825-26 and 1827, the Ava gold was coined chiefly into mohurs of the old gold standard. It swelled the coinage for three years to an average exceeding twenty lacs in value; but this fell off again in 1827-28 and 1828-29. When, however, individuals obtained the privilege of having their gold converted into coin of the old gold mohur standard, the demand again rose, but not one of the coins taken was of the new standard. There is thus ground to assume, that if the standard of gold coin had been raised in purity to the scale of 1792-93, the Mint would have coined for individuals at least a lac of pieces per annum, giving to Government a seignorage, at two per cent., of 30,000 rupees; at one per cent., of 15,000 rupees per annum. Mr. Curnin, deputy assay master at that period, estimated the loss, by not coining pure gold, at 40,000 rupees per annum, which the improving receipt upon gold coined into old-standard mohurs since 1829 seemed fully to justify. While, however, the Government coined with  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy, it did not strike for individuals 10,000 pieces per annum; and these, very probably, were shortly after melted up, in order to be converted into Jypoor dumps, or some other pure gold coin.

By adhering to the  $\frac{1}{17}$  standard, therefore, Government sacrificed nearly half a lac of revenue, and did not succeed in the object of stamping gold for individuals, and stamped its own gold at a loss, as compared with what it would have sold at unstamped; which gold, when stamped and sold as standard coin, was most probably re-melted and refined, to increase its value.

But it is necessary to refer to the motives for altering the standard, that these may be weighed against the above disadvantages.

N.B.—In the Mint books the coinage of private bullion is not kept separate; this statement, therefore, exhibits both Government and private gold.

First. The gold coin of India, if pure, will not be like that of England. Against this is to be set the fact, that it will be like the old coin of Hindostan, and like that coined in Calcutta till 1835, and will be of all the most acceptable and the most prized by the people.

Second. The coin will be softer, will not take so sharp a milling, and will be more susceptible to friction and to injury by blows. Against this is to be set the fact, that it will be of uniform colour, more beautiful to look at, cleaner, and by its purity and weight will afford a ready means of detecting any imitation or injury. With respect to friction, gold coin is not carried about and passed from hand to hand like silver and copper, that it should be liable to this. The pure gold coins of Akbur, nay those of Chundragoota, are found with the device as perfect as when they were struck, 300, or even 1,500 years ago.*

Third. The expense of refining, which upon Government gold would have to be borne by Government, and on private bullion, if not borne by Government, would operate as a heavy charge in addition to the seignorage, to be borne by the bullion-merchants. Against this is to be set the facts—

1st. That great improvements having recently been made in the art of refining gold, so much so, that it is deemed worth while to extract one per cent. of gold from silver by the highly concentrated sulphuric acid process;† and even by the nitric acid process the refinement is comparatively cheap, and effected with little loss. This, therefore, is no objection as concerns Government bullion.

2nd. It is clear, from the statements given above, that when the bullion-merchants had to refine for themselves, or to bear the cost of refining to purity, they readily bore that charge, and brought their gold notwithstanding. But when relieved of the expense, and allowed to coin less pure gold, they would not bring it. The objection on the score of re-finance, that it adds to the charge for coinage laid upon private gold, is thus entirely done away.

There remains only the fourth ground, viz., the apparent simplicity of having both the silver and gold coin of the same standard of  $\frac{1}{10}$ . This, however, is purely fanciful. What may be good for silver may not be good for gold. Nobody has proposed to add  $\frac{1}{10}$  of tin to the copper we coin; and yet this argument, if of weight, should be extended to that metal. There is indeed an apparent simplicity in having the coin of the same precise weight as well as standard, because the relative value shows the exact ratio of gold to silver; and there might be something in this consideration, if the value were fixed and immutable, but this we know fluctuates, and by refusing to make the gold coin a legal tender, the Government has declared its desire to leave this to be settled by the market rate. We confess, therefore, we cannot see anything in this argument that ought to influence the Government.

We have more to say on this question, but must for the present defer it.

* Four gold coins of Tiberius Cæsar were, in 1836, dug up in the Dekhan. They were of pure gold, as bright, and with the impressions as perfect, as in the first year when they were struck. Two of them bore marks of having been tested by the chisel, but they were all of very nearly equal weight.

† Mr. Rothschild, we have heard, found it worth his while to carry sovereigns, alloyed with silver, to Paris, to have the silver there extracted, and then to bring back pure gold, in order that, obtaining it to be coined without seignorage, he might repeat the process. The gold coin of India has ordinarily been alloyed with silver, and it is that which gives the white colour to the new gold mohur.

RESOURCES OF INDIA.

In another part of our paper will be found a letter from a correspondent urging exertion on the part of Government for increasing the products of India, and especially of selecting two for encouragement; one of them new, the other long cultivated. With what is said of the Indian people it is impossible not to agree; but our correspondent appears to forget or to overlook what has been done by Government to introduce better modes of cultivation and better systems of management in all rural affairs. He speaks of model farms as altogether new and untried. There cannot be a greater error. So long since as the year 1788—sixty-six years ago—the authorities of the East-India Company commenced their endeavours for the promotion of the growth of cotton and for the improvement of its quality. These endeavours were never relaxed, and at a more recent period cotton-farms were formed under the care of American cultivators, from which great hopes were entertained; and though they have not been altogether realized, the fault is not with the Government: it has done its best. Again: the improvement of animals is recommended as a proper object of attention; and such it certainly is. The Government has felt this, and consequently model studs have been formed, and model sheep-farms maintained at vast expense. True, these establishments have not been brilliantly successful; but though the Company's Government has not been able to "command" success, it certainly has aimed to "deserve" it. With regard to the two objects now specially recommended to notice, wine and silk, it appears that both are assumed to be new in India. The latter, silk, has been produced in India for centuries. The English found it a standard article of production; but its quality was not of the highest class, and they did much to improve it. Ninety-seven years ago the Company sent out a gentleman named Wilder, reputed to be eminently conversant with the culture and preparation of silk, with instructions to inquire into the causes of the defective quality of the Bengal produce. This gentleman remained in India till his death, and laid the foundation of many improvements. Measures were subsequently taken to advance them, and the cultivation of the mulberry was encouraged in all possible ways. Italians, and natives of other southern European states, were sent out. The efforts of the Government were never discontinued; but were carried on through evil times and good ones down to a very late period. Into the causes of failure it is not necessary to inquire; it is enough to know that silk has enjoyed pre-eminently the fostering attention of the Government, though corresponding success has not followed. With regard to the production of wine, it is impossible to say whether, throughout the vast territories of India, there are or are not any spots, the soil and climate of which are adapted to it. To say that wine was once made in England does not prove that it can be made in India. But why has it ceased to be made in England? Certainly not from the apathy of the people or their want of enterprise; but because it can be obtained better and cheaper from abroad. At the same time we should be sorry to dash the wine with cold water. If there be any favoured locality in India where drinkable wine can be produced, we shall rejoice in its being devoted to the purpose; and nothing would give us greater pleasure than to receive a butt of the maiden vintage.

But why are all demands for improvement, not only in public works but in everything else, thrown upon the Government? Why do not private capitalists undertake those functions in India which they perform everywhere else? How have the colonial dependencies of Great Britain been cultivated? Not by State outlay; but in the legitimate way, by private capital and private industry. Why do not the Manchester men, for instance, instead of confining themselves to abuse and vituperation, send a few of their superfluous millions to improve India, where, they say, there is such an admirable field for their employment; where (if their views be correct) they may gratify, to the utmost, the first wish of their hearts, that of increasing the riches in which they now wallow? If the Government can do good, private enterprise can do much more; and if the condition of the poor ryot can be improved, this is surely better than unsexing miserable women and destroying wretched infants, as in those strongholds of the evil one, called manufacturing towns. Here is honest work before the dissatisfied; will they take it up?

Since the above was in type we have met with the following in the Bombay Telegraph, which is so much to our purpose that we think we cannot do better than to quote it:—

“A friend now in the Dharwar districts writes to us as follows:—

“The merchants of Bombay are little aware of the quantity of money which is to be made, by sending trustworthy European agents up here to purchase cotton. Of all the English houses at the Presidency, one only has an agent here, and a very active and intelligent fellow he is. But even he falls into the error of buying from the native dealers, which just adds so much to these gentries' profits, and takes off from the profits of the English house. What should be done is this: a European should go about the districts, from village to village, and set up his scales by his tent. ‘Here I am with ready coin, who'll sell me cotton at so much a pound?’ should be his cry. If this were done, the ryots themselves would come forward with the staple, and the money would go direct into their pockets instead of through the hands of the petty native dealers—sharp fellows, who make the most of their avocation; who keep the ryots deeply in debt, and manage to screw out of them their very hearts' blood. It is the fashion now-a-days to decry the Government of India, and to declare they have done nothing for the people of India. You editors, and other Europeans who never move out of the Presidency towns, assert this so often that people at last begin to believe it. Take a tour through these Dharwar districts, and ask the older inhabitants what used to be the state of affairs here before the revenue survey, and the Government cotton-plantations were introduced? They will tell you that Government has done everything in the world to ameliorate the condition of the cultivators, but European merchants will not come forward and second the exertions already made. A great outcry is made that if capital is sent into the Mofussil, there will be immense difficulties in recovering sums under dispute in the Company's courts. There may be some truth in this, but the evil is greatly exaggerated. Besides, in the plan I mention, of Europeans coming amongst the ryots themselves, and paying ready-money for cotton there and then delivered, what chance would there be of bad debts? None whatever. But John Bull prefers grumbling to attempting a remedy for himself, and the Anglo-Bombay merchant is no exception to the rule. I only wish I were free of the Hon. Company's service, had a capital of ten thousand rupees, and a fair knowledge of the qualities of cotton to start with, I would go home in five years with my three lacs, buy back the old place in Somersetshire, and give you and yours a hearty welcome every time I could lay hands on you. The Bombay native cotton-dealers are quite up to what I now advocate, and they are the men who really make their fortunes in this market. But if a dozen fair-dealing Europeans were to come amongst us, and go at once to the ryots, they would drive off the pice-screwing native dealers like chaff before the wind. I seldom get hold of a good English or Bombay price-current, but from the calculations I have made lately, putting the cotton here at the highest prices ever demanded by the cultivators, and the prices given in Bombay and England at the lowest figure ever quoted, I am convinced that an exporter, who bought in this market by his own agents, and with ready coin, might realise a net profit of twenty-five to thirty per cent. at the Presidency, and nearly as much in the home market. The native dealers do this, and even more, and it is of course their interest to keep the Europeans out of the market.”

RE-CONSTRUCTION OF THE COURT OF DIRECTORS.

ON Wednesday, the 8th instant, the present Directors of the East-India Company, together with those who vacated office in April, 1853, proceeded, in compliance with the Act 16 & 17 Vict. cap. 95, to elect from among themselves fifteen gentlemen, who, with three to be appointed by the Crown, are to constitute the Court of Directors from the 12th of April next. Five of the chosen are to hold office for two years, five for four years, and five for six years; and the following were elected for the periods mentioned. For two years:—Charles, Mills, Esq.; Martin Tucker Smith, Esq., M.P.; Elliot Macnaghten, Esq.; Ross Donnelly Mangles, Esq., M.P.; and John Harvey Astell, Esq. For four years:—Russell Ellice, Esq.; William Butterworth Bayley, Esq.; Major James Oliphant; Hon. William Henry Leslie Melville; and Henry Thoby Prinsep, Esq. For six years:—Capt. John Shepherd; Sir Henry Willock, K.L.S.; Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart., M.P.; Lieut.-Colonel William Henry Sykes; and William Joseph Eastwick, Esq.

The Act requires that of the fifteen Directors selected on the occasion just past, six shall be persons who have resided not less than ten years in India. Of the gentlemen placed in the new Court by their colleagues, four, Messrs. Bayley, Melville, Mangles, and Prinsep, are retired members of the civil service of Bengal; Sir J. W. Hogg held high office in the Supreme Court at Calcutta; Mr. Macnaghten was also engaged in the Supreme Court at Calcutta, and in the discharge of important duties connected with the failures of the house of Palmer and Co., and of another large firm, which he discharged in a manner that afforded universal satisfaction. Major Oliphant was a military officer on the Madras establishment. Lieut.-Col. Sykes and Mr. Eastwick were military officers in the Bombay service. Thus the number qualified by Indian residence is nine. Three others have been directly connected with India and the service of the East-India Company. Sir H. Willock was a Madras military officer, but was chiefly engaged in political duties in Persia. Mr. Astell was on the Company's China establishment, and Capt. Shepherd in its maritime service. The last-named gentleman is now Deputy-Master of the Trinity House. The three remaining Directors are members of eminent banking firms in the metropolis: Mr. Mills, of that of Glyn, Mills, and Co.; Mr. Ellice, of that of Roberts, Curtis, and Co.; and Mr. Smith, of that of Smith, Payne, and Smith. It may be noticed here, that Mr. Mangles, already mentioned as having the qualification of Indian residence, is a partner in the house of Mangles Brothers, bankers at Guildford, Epsom, Chertsey, Egham, Godalming, and Farnham.

MARCH OF GOOD MANNERS.—In reference to the Army of Exercise recently assembled at Poonah by the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay—our Indian Chobham, as it is called—an officer of rank has given the following opinion:—“It is my opinion that all arms have derived much benefit and instruction from what they have seen and practised under the indefatigable and painstaking Lord Frederick. He certainly has not spared himself during the campaign, and whatever he has said or done, has been, both in tone and manner, the most kind and conciliating. Not a single foul or harsh expression has fallen from his lips, nor has such been permitted by him to be used by any one under his authority. You need not be told how much soldiers appreciate gentlemanly and becoming language when reproof is administered, and with what feelings of contempt they look upon opposite treatment from their officers. The latter treatment, I am happy to say, is now nearly exploded from the army. I only know one or two regiments where officers curse and swear on parade.”—Indian Paper.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TWO FRIENDS FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—It is the duty of a Government to develop the resources of its country, as much as it is the office of a parent to unfold the mind of the child committed to its care. Whatever may conduce to the ultimate benefit of its population, it is its province to point out and encourage. Sometimes a blessing may be hidden and unknown, at other times known but not capable of being grasped from want of means. Private speculation is often limited, because the object to be attained is distant, the road to it expensive, and its ultimate attainment doubtful. The sure and certain road to profit and gain is eagerly trodden by us all, for the love of wealth is strongly implanted in us all. The Indian Government is essentially despotic; it has the power to do anything it wishes; but at the same time, although it may advise its subjects that this or that plan is profitable, it never resorts to force. Until, however, it proves its projects to be advantageous by a liberal expenditure of its own finances, no one will for a moment credit a bare assertion. There never was a people so utterly destitute of all public enterprise as the people of India, they will follow slowly, but never lead. When once the word gain is clearly written in the horizon of the future, there is no people so diligent and unremitting in their pursuit of it. Witness, for example, the Cabool merchants, who trade from Cabool to Calcutta by land. A few merchants, however, resort to Bombay, taking advantage of the steam-communication down the Indus, purchase piece-goods, and find their way from Shekarpoor in Scinde to Candahar and Cabool. Now and then a bright exception springs up and vanishes, but this spirit is the emanation of European intellect and talent, and fails to communicate any lasting impression upon the natives of Hindostan. All works of permanent utility must originate with, be carried on, and perfected by Government; when the path is clear and straight, the natives of India will tread it, but most cautiously at first.

Improvement is at all times slow in India, but that is no reason why attempts towards it should not be made. Canals, roads, and education have made considerable progress, in addition to the organization of an immense military and civil establishment. The tea plant has been introduced into the Himalayah Mountains, and has succeeded, to the great credit and honour of Government; it is an expensive undertaking, and except the Government, no one could have undertaken the project.

Whilst chemical agriculture has progressed in England, the Indian cultivator plods on in his own way, which was that of his ancestors; antiquity is the only recommendation of the agriculture of India. Model farms, established through the various provinces of India, would do much to improve the revenue; in a few years, with but little trouble, it might be rendered much more certain in its collection, from increasing the proceeds of the labourer. The labourer could learn in the model farm the nature of soil, and why this is good or bad. In a short time a better crop would lead him to adapt the practical application of a system to his own fields. The breeding of horses, sheep, and cows at these farms would soon improve the original stock. The export trade of wool might soon be increased; a sheep is never, however, bred with reference to the good or bad quality of its wool. This want of system, in a vast continent such as that of India, is a serious error. Machinery of all kinds, and especially agricultural machinery, is almost totally unknown in India. Paper is exported at a vast cost from England, when it might be made at a moderate cost in Calcutta. What becomes of all the rags of India? Medicines are sent, at an immense annual cost, from this country, when many of their ingredients are procurable in India. For instance, castor oil is sent to England to be refined, and is then sent back again to India.

Gold is washed down the streams which flow through the Himalayahs, but who has ever looked carefully for the mine? Sugar is manufactured, but seriously injured by the clumsy method in which it is made, which destroys many of its most valuable qualities. Cotton grows in abundance, but the absence of screws to press it, and of machinery to clean it, together with the mistakes in the method of picking it, render it only fit to mix with American cotton in England. Labour is so cheap in India, that if once the right sort of cotton is exported, and in a proper state, it must compete with, and also undersell American produce.

There are two subjects to which the Indian Government may favourably turn its attention,—the culture of the vine and silk-worm. From the culture of these two things, of which there is every reason to anticipate ultimate success, the population of India would be considerably enriched. There appears to be no reason why the trade in wine and silk should not be turned into the Indian market; for the latter article alone about two millions of money pass out of this country annually. The vine we first hear of as wild in the island of Sicily in the time of Homer; we then see it spreading to Italy and Gaul, which latter country was at first supposed to be too cold for its culture. England could in former days boast of its vines in its southern coasts. The vine is found in Persia, in the interior of the Himalayah mountains, and in many of the gardens of the European population through the North-west Provinces of India. The climate of the North-west Provinces of India appears to be very well adapted to the production of the vine; it is dry and warm. The difficulty regarding grapes is to ripen them before the rainy season sets in, but by judicious pruning in the autumn, and other management, this could be obviated. Light sandy soils to grow the vine in can be found in abundance. The vine does not come to maturity until about eight years, consequently, except Government, no one will be found bold enough to engage in the trial. Let the situations be judiciously selected,—one near Ambullah, one near Lahore, one at Mooltan, and one in the lower range of the Himalayah mountains. The rainy season sets in at Lahore later than at Ambullah, and at Mooltan it is seldom that there are any periodical rains. Cuttings of the best vines procurable in Europe might be forwarded to India in the cold season, care being taken lest they should be injured by the sudden change in temperature. A practical work on the vine should be sent out to each of the districts of India, such as that by Clement Hoare, and thus the officers of Government would soon become familiar with the subject. A work might also be translated into the vernacular, to instruct the native population. The excise of India would be much increased should the vine succeed, and the noxious drugs at present vended to the native and European population supplanted by a wholesome beverage; for a wholesome wine can be made from the superfluous leaves, tendrils, and young shoots of the vine; the only requisite is sugar, which can always be procured exceedingly cheap.

There seems to be no reason why, when the Government has proved the plan successful, the lower range of the Himalayahs should not be covered with vineyards, for the climate here is well suited to the European constitution. The avidity with which grapes imported from Cabool are purchased by the natives shows the taste which they have for this fruit.

We are indebted to China for the silk-worm, and their introduction into Europe has been the source of much wealth and comfort to its people; there appears to be no reason why it should not be extensively cultivated in India; it requires a temperature of 70° or 80°, and a dry atmosphere. The heat of India about Ambullah and Lahore is greater than this in the hot season; but should it be found too great, the temperature may be reduced by having recourse to the valley between the higher and lower ranges of the Himalayah mountains. Dhera Dhoon would be a good place to try the experiment in. A small outlay would be required to erect a suitable building for rearing the silk-worm in, and an experienced person would be required to superintend the winding of the silk. Mulberry-trees grow so quickly and so well that, on the score of food, there would be no difficulty. Silk-worms have been tried at different times in India, but have not succeeded, having been the result of private speculation. If eggs could be brought from China to Europe in a walking-stick, there would be no difficulty in transporting them to India in these days of rapid transit. Mulberry-trees might be planted along the canals now being constructed at hardly any expense. Two millions of money might be very advantageously transferred to India on account of silk.

The natives of India are naturally very apathetic and indolent, and from the seclusion in which many of the women live, who could not engage in any active out-door employment, the culture of the silk-worm would soon become a popular occupation.

If a trial is once made on a sufficiently large scale, the vine and the silk-work will soon be reckoned amongst the most valuable of Indian products.

BANQUET TO LORD HARRIS.

On Saturday, the 18th instant, the Court of Directors of the East-India Company gave a grand entertainment at the London Tavern to Lord Harris on his departure to undertake the government of Madras. Among those present, besides the nobleman just named and the Chairman, Deputy Chairman, and Directors of the E. I. Company, were the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Newcastle, the Marquis of Breadalbane, K.T., the Earl of Elgin, Earl Grey, Viscount Canning, the Right Honourable the Chancellor of the Exchequer, M.P., the Right Honourable Sydney Herbert, M.P., the Right Honourable Edward Ellice, M.P., Right Hon. S. R. Lushington, M.P.; Right Hon. Edward Strutt, M.P.; Right Hon. W. C. Hayter, M.P.; Sir E. C. Deering, Bart., M.P.; Sir Henry Meux, Bart., M.P.; Hon. Col. Boyle, M.P.; Lord Justice Knight Bruce; Lord Justice Turner;

Vice-Chancellor Stuart; Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Pollock, G.C.B.; Lieut.-Gen. Sir C. Pasley, K.C.B.; Rear-Admiral Sir G. R. Lambert, K.C.B.; Sir T. N. Redington, K.C.B.; the Solicitor-General; the Lord Mayor; Sir John Campbell; the Hon. Arthur Harris; the Hon. R. H. Temple; the Hon. J. C. Erskine; Sir J. C. Melville, K.C.B.; J. C. Marshman, Esq., &c. &c.

The usual loyal toasts having been drunk with due honours, the chairman (Russell Ellice, Esq.) rose to propose the toast of the evening, "Lord Harris." His lordship, he said, had been selected for the high office which he was about to enter upon, by a unanimous vote of the Court, and with the full approbation of her Majesty's Government. He was no untried man. As governor of Trinidad he had given the greatest satisfaction both to Government and the inhabitants, from whom he had received the highest testimonials of esteem. In India the recollection would ever be present to him of the gallant deeds of his noble ancestor, by whom Seringapatam was won for the East-India Company. Three subjects which would claim to draw largely on the noble lord's energies, he begged especially to recommend to his notice: these were, the land revenue, public works, and education. Proceeding to his important duties as his lordship did, in the enjoyment of the full confidence of the Court and the Government, he had only in conclusion to wish him a prosperous voyage, and all success and happiness.

Lord Harris, in returning thanks, said that he was deeply gratified by the kind reception which he had met, so disproportioned to his merits. He was fully aware of the great importance of the charge which awaited him, and of the vast responsibility which he was about to incur. But if the labour and responsibility were great, so also were the incentives to right actions which pressed upon him. In the memory of him to whom the chairman had so kindly adverted was a most powerful one, and the example of the great man who, had he lived, would at this time have exercised the government of Madras, was another.

The Chairman then proposed "The Navy," a toast, he said, always popular among Englishmen, but now peculiarly so, from the interest excited by the Eastern question.

Sir George Lambert, in acknowledging the toast, observed that the fleet which had just left our shores was the most noble one that ever sailed. The highest praise was called for by the great expedition with which it was fitted out, the judicious selection of officers, and its perfect efficiency.

The Chairman then gave "The Army." What he said of the navy was applicable to the other branch of the service. India had for many years been our only field of warfare; but there could be no doubt that the character maintained there would be upheld in other places.

Sir C. Pasley returned thanks.

The next toast was "Her Majesty's Ministers." The chairman regretted the absence of the premier, Lord John Russell; and others, but several of her Majesty's advisers were present. At this time their duties were especially arduous; but the course on which they had entered was a just one, and he trusted that they and the country would be brought gloriously through the struggle.

The Duke of Newcastle said the best evidence for Government was that they met with the confidence of all parties. Their most anxious wish was for peace. With regard to Lord Harris, he felt assured that he would never tarnish the honours won at Seringapatam. There were several present who felt for Lord Harris the most affectionate regard; and all felt confident that as he had quitted Trinidad regretted by the inhabitants, he would, when the time came for his quitting India, find the like expression of feeling in the natives of that country.

The Chairman then gave "The President of the Board of Commissioners for Indian Affairs" (who was unavoidably absent). No one, he said, could conduct the business with greater efficiency, or in a more conciliatory spirit.

The next toast was "The Marquis of Dalhousie," whose talents and sound policy were eulogised by the chairman.

The Chairman then proposed "Prosperity to the City of London."

Thanks were returned by the Lord Mayor.

The toast of "The Civil Service," was acknowledged by Mr. Sullivan.

The "Army of India" followed; and at a rather late hour the company separated.

BOOKS.

Ladák, Physical, Statistical, and Historical; with Notices of the surrounding Countries. By ALEXANDER CUNNINGHAM, Brevet-Major, Bengal Engineers. London, 1854. Allen and Co.

It is but seldom that the promise of a title-page is fulfilled. Here the intimation of what is to come falls far short of the performance; and the honesty and good faith of the author would recommend his work, had it no other claim to praise. It is, however, a work of extraordinary research and extraordinary completeness. Of Ladák we previously knew scarcely anything; now we may know almost as much as if each of us had visited it personally. The book opens a new chapter in the history of man, and whatever the taste of the reader, whether he be devoted to antique lore or to modern discovery, whether scientific knowledge be his object, or mere amusement, he will find much to his taste. Exterior beauty is a recommendation even to solid excellence. So have thought those who have aided in getting up Major Cunningham's book, a duty which has been performed throughout every department in admirable style. It is altogether a beautiful volume, and the illustrations, which are very numerous, are of the first class; not scratches or daubs in the sign-post way, but full of nature and spirit. With food for the mind and food for the eye, what more can be desired? We know not; and feel that our only remaining duty is to express our cordial wishes for the success of a book at once so good and so handsome.

"That this Court now take into consideration the case of the removal of Messrs. Grant and Le Geyt."

"That the time is arrived for taking into consideration the sufferings of the military who were punished on the ground of a mutiny of the 6th Light Cavalry of Madras."

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,--

TWELVE Months since you were pleased to manifest your confidence in me by electing me to the Direction of your affairs, from which I have been withdrawn by the operation of an Act subsequently passed, reducing the total number of Directors elected by you to fifteen, in the first instance, and eventually to twelve.

The interest which I always took in the affairs of India has been increased and strengthened by the short experience which I have already had, and relying upon a continuance of your kindness, I propose, when opportunity shall offer, to tender to you the renewal of my services, and venture to express a confident hope that you will be pleased to restore me to the position in which your suffrages so recently placed me, and from which I have been removed by circumstances beyond your control.

Allow me to express my warm and grateful sense of your past kindness, and earnestly to solicit its continuance.

I have the honour to be,

Your faithful and obliged Servant,

D. C. MARJORIBANKS.

4, Upper Grosvenor Street, 11th March, 1854.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,--

FROM the 12th April next, I shall (under the operation of an Act of Parliament of last Session) cease to be a Director of your affairs. When, on the 1st of May, 1850, I was placed, by a large majority of the Proprietors, in the proud position I had been long struggling for, I stated to the constituency that no exertion should be wanting on my part to justify the confidence reposed in me; and I can with truth assert, that I have faithfully endeavoured to carry out that determination, by a conscientious and zealous discharge of the important duties which devolved upon me. It would therefore have been a source of honest pride and gratification had my services been still retained. In returning my warm and sincere thanks to the many kind friends and Proprietors who have communicated with me since the result of the ballot on the 8th instant was known, I have only to add that I shall embrace the first legitimate opportunity that occurs under the constitution of the new Court, to appeal to you again for your suffrages, with a well-grounded hope that the same kindness and consideration which placed me in the seat which I am about to vacate, will not be withheld when the time arrives for soliciting your support.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

J. A. MOORE.

OFFICERS' BEDSTEADS AND BEDDING.

HEAL and SON beg to call the attention of gentlemen requiring Outfits to their large Stock of Portable Bedsteads, Bedding, and Furniture, including Drawers, Washstands, Chairs, Glasses, and every requisite for home and foreign service.

HEAL and SON, Bedstead and Bedding Manufacturers, 196, Tottenham Court Road.

EASE in WALKING.—COMFORT to the FEET.—

The LEATHER CLOTH, or PANNUS CORIUM BOOTS and SHOES, are the softest, easiest, and most comfortable ever invented for tender feet. They have no painful or drawing effects, and are softer and easier than any other boots or shoes. Sufferers from corns, bunions, gout, chilblains, &c., will find them invaluable. For warm climates they excel all others in durability and comfort. A boot or shoe sent for size will insure a fit. The material sold by the yard in any quantity.—HALL and CO., Patentees, Wellington Street, Strand, leading to Waterloo Bridge.

LADIES' & GENTLEMEN'S DRESSING CASES.—

MECHI, 4, Leadenhall Street, London.—His STOCK possesses peculiar advantages, both in quality and price. There is a general complaint that the internal fittings of dressing cases are often very inferior. Those who purchase at Mech's will be sure of having everything of the best, because he has long been celebrated for the superiority of his cutlery, and has bestowed equal pains in bringing to perfection his tooth, nail, hair, and shaving brushes, and other necessities. In fact, he considers it essential that each article in a dressing case should be perfect in itself, so as to render the whole useful and complete. Catalogues gratis. The largest assortment in London of papier maché manufactures, and the usual stock of articles suited for presents. Mech's peculiar steel razors, 7s. and 10s. per pair. His magic strops, 3s. 6d. to 6s. 6d.; paste, 6d. and 1s. per cake. Cutlery ground and repaired daily on the premises.

All articles warranted to stand an Indian climate.

LADIES' OUTFITS TO INDIA.

JOHN BESEMERES AND CO., Manufacturers of LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN, Under-clothing, Baby-linen, and every article required for a family proceeding to India, are now compiling Outfits at their Manufacturing Prices, thus effecting an important saving in the outlay. Wedding Outfits on the same terms.

Ladies' Long Cloth Chemises, 1s. 6d., 2s., 2s. 6d.; Frilled Night Dresses, 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d.; Long Cloth Drawers, 1s. 6d., 1s. 9d., 2s.; Petticoats, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d.; Dressing-gowns, 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 10s. each. A detailed Priced List of every article may be ordered by post. The Outfit Department is entirely superintended by young women of competent skill, aided by dressmakers of taste and experience.

All the Under-clothing is made up by selected classes of carefully-trained private hands, needlewomen, who receive constant employment throughout the year, at a liberal and fixed rate of wages. This system, ORIGINATED BY THIS THE OLDEST ESTABLISHMENT OF THE KIND IN LONDON, has effectually redeemed the character of Ready-made Linen for strength and neatness, while its admitted usefulness and economy for garments for family and general home use, have placed it among the successful manufactures of the day.

To the Merchant exporting to Australia and other settlements, these goods, from the high character they bear, are very attractive, and rank among the safest shipments to those parts.

Ready-made Linen Warehouses, 61, 62, 63, and 64, HOUNDSDITCH, London.

PAYNE and SONS' INDIAN CURRY POWDER,

UNEQUALLED for its delicious FLAVOUR and stimulating QUALITIES, in 1 lb. Bottles, 2s. 6d.; 1 lb. 2s. 3d.; or 7 lbs. for 21s.

CURRY and MULLIGATAWNEY PASTE, 1 lb. jars, 3s. 6d., 1 lb. 2s. 3d.

CURRY SAUCE, Delhi and Oselle Chutnee, 1s. 6d. per bottle.

Pickled MANGOES, HUMPS, TAP SAUCE, and every description of Indian Delicacies, may had, at greatly reduced prices, from PAYNE and SONS' FOREIGN WAREHOUSE, 328, REGENT STREET, LONDON.—A List forwarded on application.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE

MADRAS CURRY, and MULLIGATAWNEY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho Square; FORTNUM, MASON, and Co., Piccadilly; and of the principal Sauce Vendors throughout the kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

THE GENUINE INDIAN CURRY MIXTURE,

PREPARED BY A LADY (a long resident in India), who was instructed in the preparation by the late celebrated Fyzoo Kausumah, of Calcutta.

This mixture contains all the ingredients used in India in the preparation of a Curry, and requires no addition, is highly approved by those who have resided in India, and the Curries prepared with it pronounced by them "the best they have eaten since they left India."

To be had of Wm. ASHDOWN and Co., Indian Lamp Exporters, &c. &c., 167, Piccadilly, (wholesale) by letter addressed to Messrs. Edward and Co., 21, Pelham Road, Brompton.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION OF OPIUM

AND ANTI-SPASMODIC. This preparation stands highly recommended by the faculty both in India and England, and also in several large cities on the Continent of Europe, as a safe and efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium, but more especially in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting which so generally precedes EPIDEMIC CHOLERA.

As disgraceful attempts have been made in this country and in India to impose a spurious preparation by counterfeited labels and directions, it becomes the duty of Messrs. SAVORY and MOORE to caution the public against such impositions, and to inform them that JEREMIE'S SOLUTION OF OPIUM is now prepared (EXCLUSIVELY) in their laboratory in London, by desire of the representative of the late Captain Jeremie, and that every bottle will be surrounded with a Government stamp, without which none can be genuine.

London, December 1, 1858.

Agents in India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, & Co., Calcutta.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT, a sovereign remedy for the Afflicted.—The number of years this invaluable ointment has stood the test of public opinion, and the longer known the better appreciated, is a testimony of itself more powerful than anything that could be written in praise of the curative properties it possesses. For Ringworm, Scald Heads, and all diseases of the Skin, it is unequalled; recent Tumours, or old Ulcers, may very shortly be healed by its use. For Tumours, Bad Breasts, Scrofula, and Sore Legs, there is no remedy to be compared with it; and in conjunction, as a purifier of the Blood, and to effect certain cures, HOLLOWAY'S PILLS should be taken.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

THE TEETH AND HEALTH.—A good set of teeth ever insures favourable impressions, while their preservation is of the utmost importance to every individual, both as regards the general health by the proper mastication of food, and the consequent possession of pure and sweet breath. Among the various preparations offered for the purpose,

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, stands

unrivalled in its capability of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface; remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and, from its aromatic influence, impart sweetness and purity to the breath. It is important to observe that, when used early in life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realises the chief attribute of health and beauty.—A FINE SET OF PEARLY TEETH.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

CAUTION.—The words, "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," are on the label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, FLEET STREET," engraved on the Government stamp affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

In royal 8vo., cloth, price 38s.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

To Burmah, according to custom, we turn first, and, in conformity with late experience, it is to find next to nothing. The most exciting subject is furnished by the movement of Captain D'Orgoni, now called General D'Orgoni, or, to give his Burmese title, NEH-MYO-THE-EE-ZE-AH. This officer, it will be recollected, is a Frenchman, and has been very active in drilling the Burmese troops so as to make soldiers of them, if that may be effected. On the 4th January, he was the hero of a series of solemn ceremonies at Ava, enough to gladden the coldest heart. After various parading at the palace of Umerapoora, the general was conducted to the golden palace, whither the prince had previously proceeded, and where he was in waiting to receive his honoured guest. After a good deal more of ceremonial and five minutes' silence, which the report assures us was quite appalling, his majesty of the golden foot proceeded to address Captain D'Orgoni "in words" (we again follow the report) "pronounced in a gracious and endearing manner." What Burmese grace and Burmese endearment are like, must of course be matter of speculation. The tenor of the prince's address was to the effect that the captain had been called to the royal presence to be invested with titles never before conferred upon any European of any nation. Some, perhaps, will wonder whether they ever will again. The prince having concluded (princely orations are usually brief, and it seems particularly so in Burmah), a royal retainer read with a loud voice an imperial edict setting forth the reasons which had influenced the royal wisdom in conferring such a first-rate dignity upon a stranger. He then read aloud an exposition of the rank, power, and privileges of the newly-made grandee, after which, a herald, or some person corresponding with our notions of a herald, proclaimed, with all the force which he could command in the absence of a speaking-trumpet, the mysterious words quoted above, which were forthwith repeated by all the officers assembled. This is an improvement: by all means let such matter in future be proclaimed in the same way—verse and chorus. The word, which we will not again subject the reader to pronounce or try to pronounce, means, it seems, "D'Orgoni, cousin of the Emperor, a man of handsome appearance, and an unconquerable general." It is truly delightful to find that the gentleman thus honoured is as handsome as he is great, and that the Burmese have a just appreciation of manly European beauty. What would they say to the Apollo Belvedere? The last ceremony was, perhaps, the best of all. A gift of a quantity (what quantity is not stated) of pure silver was made to the general in three golden cups. This concluded the business. The king retired, as did the general, and all was over. A few days after, the general suddenly presented himself (not hostilely) at Meeaday, where he had an audience of an hour from Colonel Anthorp. He then proceeded to Prome, where he had an audience of Brigadier Dickson, of about half the length of that at Meeaday. Rangoon was his next stage; thence he was to proceed by the Fire Queen to Calcutta, and further our information does not extend. What transpired in the conferences with the British officers is not made public; but it is said the general would guarantee the safety of property and life to any one to whom he should give a passport. The question is mooted, why does he leave Ava? There is a rumour, that on a complaint made of his doings by the British minister at Paris, orders were issued for his return to his own country, and that his movements are consequent on communications made to him from Pondicherry. Some of the Calcutta papers speculate as to the account which the general will give of himself at home; but these matters are too elevated for our columns, and we must forbear to follow them. We cordially agree, however, in a dictum of the Englishman, that "he is well out of Burmah; for whatever he was doing at Ava, he was doing us no good." There is little else from Burmah. The following account of the joys of surveying there, will scarcely create any desire to participate in them.

"The engineer officer who proceeded some time ago to survey the creeks and ground between the Pegu and Nitang rivers has returned. Quiet people sitting under their punkahs in Calcutta, with all the comforts and luxuries of life about them, would stare at the method of travelling an officer has to adopt in this country. Fancy being placed in a small country boat with a roof too low to admit of sitting upright, with a terrific sun over head, the said boat being propelled by poles along the bed of a narrow muddy creek, at the rate of about 4 miles an hour; at length, so shallow does it become, that further progress by that method is impossible, the boat is turned into a sledge, and is dragged along the bed of the slimy nullah by buffaloes, who insist every quarter of an hour on lying down in the mud. At length even this method of progression ceases, and the boat is bodily lifted out of the mud and placed on the bank, which is covered with high elephant-grass; the buffaloes are tacked on, and coolies go ahead, pushing aside the high grass as they go along, and making a road for the sledge. The country in some parts of Pegu is so infested with wild elephants and other animals, that the Burmese cannot be induced to penetrate this high grass, and the officer, rifle in hand, has to lead the way, the mire through which he walks being so deep as to render it necessary at times to divest himself, not only of shoes and stockings, but also of another garment, which the proverb says cannot be taken off a Highlander."

Another paragraph is curious, if true :—

"By letters from Prome, up to the 23rd January, all was quiet there. The troops were healthy and the climate good. Some strange news had come in from Major Cotton's camp. It seems an officer of the 2nd E. B. Fusiliers had been detached with a party on elephants to surprise Goung-Gie, the dacoit chief; the party, on arriving at the village, found of course the chief gone, but one of his wives and some 200 carts were there, as also a large number of bags piled up together, which were examined as well as the darkness of the night would allow. The contents of the bags appeared to be lead. The officer commanding the party did not think it prudent to remain in the village, so drew off his men, leaving the 200 cart-loads of grain and bags of lead in the village. An artilleryman, however, took a bag of this lead away with him, and on return to camp sold it to a commissariat gomastah for Rs. 143, as being very good lead. The lead turned out to be silver, and the knowing native is said to have cleared Rs. 1,200 by the transaction. Some others brought bags away, and made the same discovery."

The North-West furnishes nothing.

There is much discussion about the state of affairs in the countries between India and Russia. The march of a Russian army to Khiva seems to be generally discredited. When the dispute arose between the British minister at Tehran and the Persian Government, it is stated that Prince Dolgorouski offered the latter a large bribe as the price of marching 30,000 men upon Bagdad. But it was not accepted. The dispute is at an end. The Russians keep their money, and the advance upon Bagdad is not made.

At Bombay the most noticeable thing is a reprimand which the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, has administered to Major Jacob on account of his remarks on the native troops of the Indian army which appeared in the London Times and in the Bombay paper bearing the same name. Its tone is very decided. Our readers will find it in another place.

Lord Elphinstone appears to be deeply engaged in railway affairs, and to be in the enjoyment of almost unbounded popularity.

In continuation of the extract from the China Mail in our last, on the dollar question, we resort to that paper again :—

"Since the present position of the dollar question at Canton was explained, we have been favoured with the notification by the U.S. Vice-Consul giving publicity to a despatch from the Hoppo, who—from a motive of potency with officials in all ages and countries, namely, to 'avoid the trouble of correspondence'—has agreed, or rather got the shroffs to agree, to receive Mexican at the same rate as Spanish dollars in payment of customs. The document, coupled with the declaration of the bankers of the western suburb, which we published last week, may settle the question, so far as the Chinese are concerned; and as some of them must be the chief sufferers by the innovation, we trust the few foreign firms that have opposed it will now give in with a good grace.

"Had the settlement of the matter lain with the mandarins, it might have been accomplished long ago; but whatever notion may be entertained of their absolute power, they themselves know that money-changers are too much for ministers in China as well as elsewhere. It is three or four months since orders to receive Mexican dollars at their intrinsic value in payment of duties were issued by the prefect and the district magistrates; but the shroffs would not have it so, until now that the pressure from without has apparently convinced them that it would on the whole be most for their interest to yield; and thus there are at length actual settlements of customs duties admitted in Mexican dollars at the same rate as Spanish.

"Duties are payable in Sycee silver by weight; but the treaties provide for their settlement in foreign coins, 'made equal to standard or pure silver.' In July, 1843, an assay of foreign coins was made at Canton by a native shroff, in the presence of certain Chinese and foreign officials; and according to it, Mexicans are about 11 per cent. below Sycee. The factitious value given to Spanish dollars has hitherto enabled the merchants advantageously to purchase Sycee for duties with chopped or broken Spanish dollars; but neither the growing scarcity of that money in any shape, nor the admitted fact of the Mexican being intrinsically as valuable, sufficed to secure the currency of the latter, the distinction being a source of profit to the money-changers, who, after the two coins had been officially declared to be on a par, refused to sell Sycee at the same rate for Mexican as for Spanish. As it was not without reason they did so, probably they might not have been coerced, had their refusal been restricted to ordinary commercial transactions; but by extending it to duties, which they had been ordered to receive in Mexican, a handle was given for complaining to their own authorities; and advantage was taken of the opportunity to have the change made general, by which, no doubt, others besides Chinese, under obligations payable in Spanish dollars, have benefited considerably."

BENGAL.

THE FURLOUGH REGULATIONS FOR THE MILITARY AND MEDICAL SERVICES.

The new furlough regulations are out at last. The difference of opinion between the Board of Control and the Board of Directors, has therefore been composed. Its effects, however, are distinctly visible in the tone of the new orders. It has for some time been suspected, that the new rules, however great an improvement on the ancient system, would be no boon to officers of the army, and the suspicion is justified by the event. The regulations, though beneficial to the interests of the state, are by no means liberal as regards its servants.

And first as regards the public interests. They were decidedly opposed to the further continuance of the former regulations. Under that system, an officer in staff employ could leave India for the Cape and Australia, and retain his appointment for two years. This was of course exceedingly convenient for himself, but the office, in which alone the public had any interest, meanwhile "got along" as it best could. The incumbent, aware that his tenure was only for a time, usually contented himself with the current business of the hour, or if he attempted to initiate reforms, found that he had not time to mark their operation. His removal affected every subordinate. Everybody was "acting" and nobody doing, and the business of the department had a tendency to become unhinged, to serve the convenience of individuals. Even where this was not the case, the evil was only prevented by rendering the iron routine more rigid than ever, and working the department as if it were a machine. We see some of the consequences of that system in the military board. Meanwhile, the rules having provided that the office should be injured, next determined that its holders should be neither instructed or improved by the injury. He was not to enlarge his mind, and perfect his early studies by observation or travel in Europe. If an artillery officer, he was strictly forbidden to improve his knowledge, while renewing his health, by an inspection of the continental schools. If an engineer, he could not obtain relief while studying the public works of the United States, which are frequently so applicable to the circumstances of India. He must remain amidst a narrow-minded colonial society, at the Cape or in Australia, and recruit his energies by taking an interest in the squabbles of the Cape Town municipality, or Mr. Latrobe's contention with the diggers. All this is abolished. The rules, defensible only when a voyage to England occupied eight months, and the only means of conveyance was a Dutch-built sailing vessel, have been swept away. The officer on sick leave may proceed whither he will, to Australia or Merthyr Tydvil, the Cape or Vienna, the Mauritius or Washington, and obtains at least the option of combining improvement with recreation. Moreover, his office is left vacant for six months. At the expiration of that time, it must be permanently filled up, and except in some exceptional scientific appointments, which are specially provided for, this innovation must be accounted a decided improvement. The state gains decidedly by the new rules.

The army gains but little, and that little is confined to regimental officers. The duration of sick leave is confined to eighteen months. By clause eleven, the total amount of leave which counts as service, is practically reduced to two years. Moreover, he must not by taking furlough increase the proportion of officers absent from their regiments. If by this sentence, the rule which limits the absentees to six from each regiment is intended, his furlough is practically abolished. The demand for staff-officers in Bengal is already in excess of the number permitted to be absent. If this be not the rule, what is? Again, it is true the officer will benefit if he is never ill, and takes his furlough without reference to sick leave. He then receives, instead of his furlough pay his regimental pay, and a donation, as it were, of six months' allowance besides. But if he is sick, he loses the option of proceeding to some place within Indian limits, and retaining his full pay and allowances for two entire years.

On the staff officers, the new rules will fall with peculiar severity. Hitherto, though not allowed to retain their appointments in Europe, they have been permitted to retain them for two years at the Cape, with their regimental pay, and half the difference between that and their consolidated allowances. To those who were anxious for a change of climate, and preferred emoluments to opportunities of improvement, this privilege was especially valuable. They may now proceed to England, but they will retain their appointments and half staff allowances only for six months, and for the remainder of their absence they must be content with regimental pay. We will make this clearer by an instance. A lieutenant holding a staff appointment with a consolidated staff salary of Rs. 500 per mensem, might by the old rule proceed to the colonies on medical certificate for two years, retaining his appointment, and drawing Indian regimental pay and allowances for that period, amounting to Rs. 6,159 0 0. Add to this the half difference between regimental and consolidated pay, or Rs. 2,920 8 0, and we have a total of Rs. 9,079 8 0. The whole period counted as service, whatever his stay, and whatever leave he might have had before. By the new rule, if he proceeded to Europe or elsewhere after ten years' service, for two years on furlough he would draw six months' regimental pay and allowances, or Rs. 1,539 12 0, and eighteen months' leave regimental or English pay, at the rate of six shillings and sixpence per diem, nearly £1,777 18 9, or say Rs. 1,779 6 0, giving a total on the two years of Rs. 3,319 2. But he must vacate his appointment, and the period can only count as service, provided he has no other leave in the previous ten or subsequent eight years. He may also, apparently, receive six months' half staff for six months, if he goes on sick certificate, but then also he must vacate his appointment. This would give Rs. 730 2 additional, making up the grand total of the two years—which on sick certificate may be extended to three years—to Rs. 4,049 4 considerably less than half what he would draw at the Cape or Australia. In practice he gains the option of proceeding to England instead of to the Cape, and loses eighteen months' tenure of his appointment, and a very considerable amount of money.

We put the six months' clause out of the question altogether. No officer not possessed of private property can afford to break up his establishment and subject himself to all the expense and annoyance of a voyage to Europe for the privilege of remaining there two months. Lastly, the staff officer is apparently deprived of even the option of adhering to the antiquated rules. This appears by rule 10 to be confined to regimental officers, and if we are correct in our interpretation, that rule will be felt, not as a hardship, but as a gross injustice. There are men in the service who have no desire whatever to revisit Europe. Not to mention the few whose home is at the Cape, there are scores whose views are fixed upon the southern colonies. By all such, the absence of any option will be most severely felt. It will be none the less so, because exaggerated hopes have hitherto been entertained. Amidst the cloud of suggestions which have been put forward, one hope has ever been most plainly manifest, that the rules would remain almost unchanged, while the lines of longitude would cease to be of any practical importance. That hope has been destroyed, and we are greatly mistaken if these rules do not create a feeling of the deepest disappointment.

Let us not be misunderstood. We are ready to admit that the retention of an appointment by an absentee, is in itself an injury to the state. But it cannot be absolutely removed. We have to choose between that injury and the still greater one produced by an unbroken residence of five-and-twenty years in India. The old rules disorganized the departments. The new regulations will render the staff-officers the men who are to rule provinces, and administer justice over great districts, the least enlightened servants of the state. Both evils might have been ameliorated if twelve instead of six months' leave had been permitted to office holders; and we hope the urgent remonstrances of the army will yet induce the Court to make this partial concession.—Friend of India.

FEMALE INFANTICIDE IN ETAWAH.

The war against female infanticide proceeds. We noticed recently how completely the authorities in the north-west, at Agra and at Lahore, had contrived to enlist the popular feeling on their side. So great has been the success of the preventive measures adopted at Mynpoorie and Umritsir, that we imagined repressive measures were dispensed with, that the evil was left to be cured by an increasing intelligence, and that the matter was taken altogether out of the sphere of the police. This is not the whole truth. Without the aid of the popular feeling enlisted against the crime, success would have been impossible, but it is still found advantageous to check its recurrence by incessant watchfulness. The moral sense of the people has been roused, but it needs the support derived from the knowledge that the custom has become a crime. Suttée is extinct, but were the law annulled, wives would be burnt as often as Brahmuns died. A short narrative of the schemes adopted to restrain the practice in Etawah, may serve to show the manner in which the agency of the police can be employed in extirpating a social vice. In that district, the crime has been observed, and facts connected with it specially recorded for more than seven years. It was brought to the knowledge of the authorities by a Thannadar, who reported its excessive prevalence in the village under his superintendence. The magistrate, the late Mr. G. H. M. Alexander, issued a proclamation, declaring infanticide was, in the eyes of Government, a crime, and would be treated as such. Crimes are not made by statute, and in 1848, farther measures were adopted. The crime prevailed almost exclusively among the higher castes, the Aheer Patucks, and Chohan

Thakoors. As in the Punjab, and in every other district where it has been investigated, its cause was avarice and pride. The father felt compelled to spend his wealth on the marriage ceremony of his daughter. His avarice, or prudence was offended by the extravagance, which his pride would not suffer him to diminish. He chose the third alternative, and killed the child whose birth entailed so heavy an expenditure. It was necessary first to ascertain the facts. Mr. Graigie was the Acting Magistrate, and under his orders a census of all the children, male and female, of the Thakoors was drawn up every six months. Every birth of a female child was reported to the police, and the Thakoors felt that the crime exposed them to a constant surveillance. In the following year, a new Magistrate, Mr. Monckton, made a further effort. The census was taken monthly. Every child, male and female, was enrolled, and every birth at once recorded. A new difficulty presented itself. Some of the Thakoors, determined not to abandon their custom, yet sensible of the condemnation of the Government, removed from its dominions for a time. They carried their pregnant wives into the Gwalior territory. If the child born were a son, it returned with them; if a daughter, they returned alone—a new instance of the utility of the Indian Palatinates. This practice was speedily checked. The police were directed to report the names of all Thakoors who made the journey under such circumstances, and of all who intended making it. They accordingly remained; but the root of the evil was still untouched. It was necessary to enlist the classes most obnoxious to suspicion. The resolutions agreed to by the Chohan Thakoors of Mynpoorie were forwarded to the native officials, and were signed of their own free will, but the success of the measure does not appear to have been perfect. In 1852, Mr. Thomason passed through Etawah, and the magistrate took advantage of the occasion to assemble the notabilities of the district. Some sixteen of the greatest landholders attended, and in the presence of the lieutenant-governor agreed to a resolution pledging them to assist their poorer brethren with marriage gifts, and to expel from caste any Thakoor known to have destroyed his female children. The remedy is a remarkable one, and differs considerably from that adopted in Mynpoorie and Umritsir. In those cases, it had been usual to specify a fixed sum which the expenditure must not exceed. In Etawah, the expenditure was not diminished, but the burden was thrown on the entire community. The marriage expenses became a voluntary tax, and as no individual of those who contributed had any personal pride in the expenditure, the probability was that its amount, and with it the danger to the female children, would be speedily reduced. The repressive measures, however, have not been relaxed. The police are ordered to send in monthly statements of marriages, with the names of the parents, the expenditure incurred, and the proportion of that expenditure contributed by the father. Every birth and death of every infant is reported, and a rough but most efficient system of coroners' inquests has been created. Whenever a death occurs, a Panchayat is empanelled. Of the five neighbours selected, one is always a police officer. The cause of death is investigated, and if it appears suspicious, the body is sent in to the civil surgeon. The returns are checked by the personal efforts of the higher officers of police, who make inquiries in every village, and the greatest care is exercised to prevent an oppressive surveillance. It is not difficult. A Chohan Thakoor is not a Bengalee, and a policeman who exceeded his duty might receive a hint as rough as a troublesome constable sometimes receives in England. The result of all this, of the social influence and the police agency, the resolutions of the chiefs, and the watchfulness of the Magistrate, is explained by the subjoined figures. The births and deaths of Thakoor girls from January 1st to November 30th, 1853, were

Births,	.. .. .	625

Surviving, .. .. . 526

The proportion of deaths is large according to European ideas, but the true proportion of infant deaths among a native population is not yet ascertained. Our own belief is, that the mortality is nearly three fold that of England, and we believe this opinion is entertained by the most experienced medical officers in the country. In the same year the number of marriages was 104, and the amount expended Rs. 10,502-4, an average of Rs. 100. This is less than the average among the Brahmuns of Bengal. In Mynpoorie almost similar measures of repression have been adopted. The result is almost identical. Of 422 female children born in 1853, 372 were alive on the 31st December; the deaths were 50, and although the proportion indicates that the crime still exists, it must have greatly diminished, since the time when a Chohan usually had but one daughter to the house.

The result of our narrative needs no comment. It is the popular support which has lent success to the vigilant supervision of the magistrate.—Friend of India.

THE CASH BALANCES OF INDIA.

Our London correspondent recently told his readers, that in England the closing of the four per cent. loan was regarded as a premature measure. The surplus should have been devoted to the debt, should have been employed in public works, should have been used to accelerated the progress of the railway; in short, the four per cents. should not have been closed. Other writers, either exasperated by the loss of interest, or unable to believe that the Indian Government can do anything wisely, quarrel with the conversion of the five per cents. It is said to be indefensible on true economical grounds, to be a bold stroke for popularity in England, and one individual is allowed in the Times to talk of the financial profligacy of offering to pay your debts. The simplest answer to every objection, and the clearest exposition of the policy of the Indian Government will be found in the subjoined table. Our readers are aware of the nature of our Indian cash balances. They are to the empire what the reserve is to the Bank of England. They comprise nothing but the accumulations of specie actually present in the three central and the numerous local treasuries.

The Government, acting on a policy now almost traditional, but none the less sound, considers it advisable to keep six months' expenditure invariably in hand. The minimum is seven millions sterling, and since 1832 the balances have never been allowed to go below that figure. As was proved in our issue of the 25th November, 1852, they have for nine years been steadily increasing. In 1851, they amounted to Co.'s Rs. 12,13,00,000. The Burmese war did not diminish them. Strict economy, the conquest of the Punjab, the expansion of trade, and the improving tone of the land revenue, led to incessant accumulations; and when in January, 1853, they rose to fifteen millions sterling, depletion became a political necessity. To withdraw such vast sums from circulation is invariably an evil. It is a bank restriction act of the most injurious kind. It diminishes the working currency, and, like every other restrictive measure, raises the value of the remaining currency in proportion to the actual wealth it represents. To use a familiar illustration;—if there are only a lack of bank-notes in the market, and everybody wants to remit in bank notes, the value of the notes will rise, a fact the Economist is labouring at home to make clear to the simplest understanding. The most obvious method of depletion was to pay off a portion of the debt. Circumstances favoured the attempt. The rates of money in England were singularly low. Men on change were talking of 2½ per cent. as a permanent rate of interest. There was a glut of money at the presidencies; millions were obtainable at 4 per cent., and in January, 1853, the first experiment was tried. The result of the successive experiments may be gathered at a glance.

It will be observed, the first offer, which affected three and a half millions sterling, produced no effect on the balances whatever. By April, they had increased a quarter of a million over the amount in the preceding month. The Government grew bolder. At the end of that month, half the loan of 1825-26 was offered for payment, and the offer was followed by an increase of two millions and a half sterling in the treasury. In the beginning of September, the four per cent. was closed, and was followed by a decline. Beyond this point we have not the figures, but without a loan open, except the three and a half per cent., no further increase can have resulted except from the ordinary revenue operations. In November, the first half of the loan of 1841-42, and in January of the present year, the remainder were offered for payment, and, we believe in both cases, though we are not absolutely certain of the fact, the result has been perfectly satisfactory. The cash balances are still enormously in excess of the actual needs of the state. They cannot long remain so. India, for the first time in thirty years has a surplus revenue.

If peace continues, the accumulative process will rapidly proceed, the Three and a half per cent. loan—pace the Englishman—will fill, and the Government, oppressed with a plethora of resources, must take at least one more step in advance.

It appears that the Parliamentary paper from which we last week quoted the amount of the converted loans is inaccurate. The amounts affected are, at 2s. the rupee.

COLONEL ROBERTS.

In the list of passengers about to embark in the Hindustan, we find the name of Lieut.-Col. Roberts, lately in command of H.M.'s 98th regt. of foot. The circumstances under which that officer was removed from his command have been only partially explained, and have left on the public mind an impression unfavorable to him; one at least of our Mofussil contemporaries, hinting that a court-martial was impending over him, when the fact is that Lieut.-Col. Roberts demanded a court-martial and was refused. He has been blamed for the irregularities which came to light on Quartermaster Gillespie's trial, it being seemingly forgotten that it was necessary for the accused to endeavour to clear himself from them, no matter at whose expense; and that the Commander-in-Chief was not satisfied with the verdict, and sent back the proceedings for reconsideration. The effect of the Court of Inquiry, has been to remove Lieut.-Col. Roberts from his command, leaving, as we have said, an impression against him, because the proceedings are not made public, while those of the court-martial are. Had a court-martial sat on Lieut.-Col. Roberts, the whole case would have been before the public, instead of the one-sided view which results from the defence of one whose safety lay in throwing the blame on the commanding officer of the regiment, and who endeavoured to account for irregularities in others by asserting even greater ones on the part of that officer. It appears to us, after a careful examination of the documents, that the only charge of any weight against Lieut. Colonel Roberts is, that he reposed his confidence in those that were unworthy of it, and who were interested in deceiving him. The present accusations against him are proved on the most conclusive testimony to be utterly confounded. That the discipline of the regiment was not relaxed, rests upon the testimony of Brigadier Lord Melville, who expressed his entire satisfaction with it when the regiment was inspected. That Lieut. Colonel Roberts's indulgence was grossly abused, and that an enormous quantity of liquor was sold to the men, is abundantly proved; but, as he lived a mile and a half from the barracks, and trusted in those whose duty it was to watch over the issues of spirits, it is by no means surprising that he was kept in ignorance of what was well known throughout the regiment. After carefully perusing the documents, we cannot find grounds sufficient in them for Lieut. Colonel Roberts's removal from the command in the manner it has been effected. If the tales circulated against him, and which appear to have been related at the court of inquiry, were proved, he ought certainly to have been brought to a court-martial; if not, and it seems they were all completely refuted, he has been unfairly victimized, apparently for having become obnoxious to an officer of greater influence.

It is not easy to enter into more particulars without implicating others, which we wish to avoid; but the impression left on us by the documents before us is such, that we cannot doubt that when removed from local influences and partialities, Lieut. Colonel Roberts will obtain justice, and that a different view will be taken of his case at the Horse Guards from that which it received at Simlah.—Englishman, Feb. 4.

THE ACT EMPOWERING BANKS TO GRANT ADVANCES ON RAILWAY STOCK.

The official Gazette contains the draft of a proposed Act, entitled, "An Act to Amend the Law relating to the several Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay." It contains only two sections, the first of which empowers the secretaries and treasurers to sign, on behalf of the bank, all documents connected with the current and ordinary business; and the second renders it lawful for the above banks to lend money on the security of shares in such of the incorporated railway companies as hold a guarantee from the East India Company with regard to interest. To the latter section is, however, attached the proviso that such loans shall in no case exceed in amount three-fourths of the nominal value of the shares. It is not our intention to inquire how far a legislative enactment was necessary for the objects stated, inasmuch as the secretary and the directors of the banks already possess the very powers, for the exercise of which the draft act provides. We wish to point out rather the effect which it is obviously intended to produce, and the result to which it is likely to lead in our financial position.

By rendering it lawful for banks to advance three-fourths of the nominal value upon railway shares, scrip in point of intrinsic value becomes in the market as good as Company's paper. It bears a certain fixed rate of annual interest, and with regard to price, is like a Government promissory note, subject to the fluctuations of the market. It is true that the registration of transfers will likewise cause a transfer of the responsibility, but such responsibility is more nominal than real, as long as Government guarantees the payment of the interest, and in measure as the matter becomes better understood, railway shares will be considered even by the natives of this country a desirable and permanent investment. Government have thus by the above enactment been instrumental in attaching to railway scrip a general market value, which otherwise would have been limited only. However desirable that object may be, yet as far as the state is concerned, it must operate unfavourably towards the three and half per cent. loan. When there is an opportunity of investing funds with perfect safety at four per cent., it is not likely that the afore-mentioned loan will find much favour, and supposing that money continues plentiful, its only chance is in the returns which the railways may yield being superior to the guaranteed rate of interest. These returns will regulate the market value of the railway shares, and then it will be a mere matter of calculation whether it be more advantageous to buy railway scrip at so much premium, or take three and half per cents. at par. As the time, however, is still far distant when the railways can be expected to yield any thing in excess of the fixed rate of interest, a high premium on the value of the shares is not likely to be soon established. It remains now to be seen, whether the banks will advance upon the shares at the rate of interest at which they grant loans on Company's paper, or whether the scrip will be classed in the category of general commercial bills.—Hurkaru.

DEATH OF COLONEL MOUNTAIN, ADJUTANT-GENERAL OF H. M.'S FORCES IN THE EAST-INDIES.

The intelligence of the demise of Colonel Armine Simcoe Henry Mountain, c.b., which melancholy event occurred at Futtighur on the 7th Feb., will be received with heartfelt regret throughout the army. Colonel Mountain was an ensign of 1815, and consequently served in the army for thirty-nine years. His regimental promotion was not very rapid in the beginning, for we find that he did not obtain his lieutenantancy before 1818; but then he seems to have been more fortunate, for he became a full captain in 1825; was promoted to a majority in the next year; advanced to the next step in 1840, and attained his colonelcy in 1846. Col. Mountain has seen much active service in the East. He served as deputy adjutant-general throughout the war in China, and was present at the first capture of Chusan, storming of the heights and forts above Canton; action of the 30th May, taking of Amoy, second capture of Chusan; storming of the fortified heights of Chinbae; taking of Ningpo and sortie at the repulse of the night attack; action of Tscke; capture of Chapoo, where he received three severe wounds; assault and capture of Chin Kiang Foo; and investment of Nanking. In the campaign of 1848-49, he commanded, as brigadier, the 4th brigade of the army of the Punjab, at the passage of the Chenab, and in the battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat; and as a brigadier-general, the Bengal infantry division of Sir Walter Gilbert's force at the passage of the Jhelum. Col. Mountain was an A. D. C. to the Queen; and in April, 1849, named to the high post of adjutant-general of H.M.'s forces in the East Indies, which appointment he continued holding up to the time of his death. In office he was a strict disciplinarian, but not the less a kind and warm-hearted friend, and his loss will be very seriously felt by a large number of friends and acquaintances.—Hurkaru.

THE IRON DISTRICTS OF INDIA—GWALIOR AND KUMAON.

We beg to suggest to the Government of India the expediency of publishing a report upon the iron districts of the empire. The subject has of late acquired an unusual importance. The development of the railway system, the employment of iron steamers, the adaptation of iron to every purpose of domestic life, and the extension of the process which increases wages alike in Merthyr Tydvil and Penyalvania, all tend to destroy the expectation of a speedy reduction in its price. Its present cost, meanwhile, while it offers the greatest inducement to the discovery of new sources of supply, offers also the best prospect of profit to the discoverers. But to obtain a clear view of the possibility of finding such new sources in India, we need information, and it can only come through official channels. There is probably not a mine in India.

the history, out-turn, and capabilities of which has not been officially recorded, but the records are lost in the archives of five separate Governments. It is necessary to combine them, and they can be combined only by the Government of India. Meanwhile, we contribute to the general information on the subject, such scattered memoranda as we are enabled to collect.

In the North-West Provinces, the best chance of discovering iron in great quantities appears to be the neighbourhood of Gwalior. A special report is still needed upon the nature and extent of the works there carried on, and such reports are not easily procurable from a native state. We know, however, that Gwalior did once export iron in considerable quantities, and that it has been the subject of some experiments in finance, which remind us rather of the manner in which the Plantagenets obtained their "aids," than of any system of taxation popular in the nineteenth century. In 1836, a great and beneficial reduction was effected in the inland tariff of the North-West Provinces. The policy of Sir Robert Peel was anticipated. A cloud of imposts which produced nothing but vexation, was swept away, and only eighteen articles remained subject to taxation. One of these was iron, perhaps of all productions not used as food, the one which it is most permanently injurious to tax. As if to make the duty as oppressive as possible, it was levied in the clumsiest manner. It was in itself heavy, ten per cent. ad valorem; but while in Delhi, Agra, and Bundelkhand, it was levied on unwrought iron only, and less than forty pounds was allowed to pass free, at Mirzapore, wrought and unwrought iron were taxed alike, and only ten pounds' weight was allowed to pass without payment of the impost. This evil was speedily reformed. In 1837, the duties were equalized; they were limited to iron carried as merchandize, and the collectors were strictly ordered not to interfere with the trade, except when it crossed the customs' line. The custom of levying the duties according to the quality of iron, still, however, remained a fertile source of oppression. There were a dozen different qualities, all ascertained by reference to an arbitrary standard; and it was not till 1839 that Mr. G. H. Smith, in conference with the governor-general, drew up a plan in which he proposed that the tax upon iron should be totally abandoned. The board refused to consent to the abolition, which was, moreover, bitterly opposed by the iron dealers. They fancied that the duties acted as a protection, and the result proved that their anticipation was correct. The exportation of iron from Gwalior amounted at this time to about 50,000 bullock-loads; but the moment the protection was removed by the abolition of the duties, it sunk to 15,000 loads, and has never since recovered. The native manufacture was swamped by the importation from England, and, at the present moment, English iron is used to build bridges, facing iron mines. On the northern road from Almorah to Nynsee Tal, there is an iron bridge over a stream which flows downwards from Ramgurn. It is built of English iron, and one end of the bridge actually rests in one of the abandoned Ramgurn mines! The English iron is cheaper, and better shaped, than the native product; but the fact remains, that iron can be procured from Gwalior, in almost any quantity, as soon as the English price renders it expedient to work the mines.

In Kumaon, again, there are mines actually at work, in a region supplied with an abundance of fuel and water for machinery. In the valleys of the Kotelar, and the Khetasree in that district, according to a report before us, there are seven mines, affording ore for 146 forges. These forges support 627 families, and although the processes are rude and wasteful in the extreme, the profit appears to be sufficient. The extent to which the ore can be procured, cannot be ascertained without experiment, but it exists over a range of hills thirteen miles long. No idea of its richness either can be obtained, for the miners work upon a system which would in Europe render the realization of a profit simply impossible. They excavate the ore without steel tools, draw it from the mine in barrows made of a dried cow's-hide, give it to their children to break up for the smelter, and throw away the dust. The iron remains in the furnace for twenty-eight hours, and the "blast" is made continuous by the use of a series of buffalo-hides, after a most primitive fashion. When one is emptied, another is squeezed, a process that would extort a groan from the humblest fireman on Crawshaw's establishments. The "blooms" produced by this process are again refined by passing them through another furnace, and beating them into bars fit for the market. The loss of ore in the process is very nearly ninety-one per cent., the exact proportion of bar-iron produced being to the ore as 8½ is to 100. Moreover, to produce even this result, nineteen pounds of charcoal are required to two pounds of iron, or about five times the proportion expended in the Swedish mines. Nevertheless, a profit is obtained; and we cannot but think that, were these mines once viewed by English miners interested in success, iron might be obtained from them in large quantities. Fuel, which for a time, at least, may be considered exhaustless, exists within a distance of three miles; labour, though scarce, may be imported, and the greatest difficulty of all, the absence of a road by which to convey the iron when produced, is overcome by the native miners.

There is yet another place much nearer to Calcutta where the metal can be obtained in abundance. We are informed by a most competent authority, who visited the spot some years ago, that at Kasmar, in the Midnapore district, he saw specimens of iron which looked as if they had been quarried. The ore yielded fifty per cent. of pure metal, or nearly six times the proportion now obtained from the ore of the Kumaon valleys. Two men could gather and smelt about 1½ maunds daily, which at two annas for three seers would yield five rupees a day. This is the statement of the miners themselves, and appears exaggerated; but there can be no doubt whatever of the existence of the ore within a few miles of Calcutta.

It is facts like these of which the public and the railway company stand in need, and which might be obtained in endless profusion by the Government of India. Such a collection with the minute information readily obtainable would excite in England a belief that India may one day produce something besides sugar, indigo, and cotton.—Friend of India.

The LONDON MAIL of January 8th arrived at Calcutta February 14 (per Bentinck).

PRINCE GOLAM MAHOMED proceeds to England in the steamer Bengal.

ENQUIRY INTO SIR J. BROOKE'S CONDUCT.—It is stated that the Governor-general has recommended to the home authorities the advocate-general and the Honourable H. B. Devereaux as members of the commission to sit on the court of enquiry into Sir James Brooke's conduct.

THE BRIG Susan, Captain A. Woodward, struck on the 3rd instant, on the Oyster rock, and sunk almost immediately, just giving time enough for all hands to save themselves, and allow two horses to swim ashore.

DR. W. B. O'SHAUGHNESSY has established at Cawnpore a school for training young men for the electric telegraph department.

NAGPORE.—It is stated that the Governor-general has come to the resolution that the Nagpore territory, which lately lapsed to the British Government, is to be governed by civilians of the Bengal presidency, and that no military men are to be provided for on the occasion, the commander-in-chief being opposed to their being taken away from their regimental duties.—Hurkaru.

MR. PRINSEP'S HOUSE at Allipore has been bought for the new lieutenant-governor of Bengal for Rs. 80,000.

THE WEATHER.—On Saturday, Feb. 11, the sky, towards noon became suddenly clouded, and the long-expected rain came down, accompanied by slight thunder, as if to warn us to get the punkahs ready for the approaching hot weather. About midnight it blew very hard, and the wind very shortly afterwards settled down into rain, which lasted for about an hour. We hope that it has extended to the surrounding districts, where the dried fields were much in need of relief.—Ibid. Feb. 13.

THE ARMY COMMISSARIAT.—We have very frequently alluded to the insufficiency of the numerical commissioned strength of the army commissariat, and we pointed out the necessity that existed for an immediate increase to the department. We are therefore glad to observe in last Saturday's Gazette that Government have appointed four additional sub-assistant commissaries-general, who are to enter the department on probation under the rule prescribed in General Orders.—Hurkaru, Feb. 13.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.—The Asiatic Society, in a resolution passed at their meeting on the 1st, recorded their deep sense of the loss the society had sustained by the death of their distinguished member, the late Sir Henry Elliot, and paid a handsome tribute to his memory. It is in contemplation to collect and publish the papers left behind by Sir Henry, which are said to be very valuable; and the two first volumes of his great work "The Mohammedan Historians of India" are ready for publication. The industrious and distinguished author had, however, altered his original plan of the work before his death, and made many improvements and additions. We have not heard to whom the task of collating the posthumous works of Sir Henry is to be committed, but we hope that they may fall into competent and judicious hands, as if so they will form a valuable addition to our stock of Oriental literature.—Morning Chronicle.

OPIMUM.—The following is the result of the last opium sale:—
Behar, Chests 2855. Average 793.10. Proceeds 22,65,825.
Benares, " 1170. " 810.1. " 9,47,800.
The decline in prices appears to have been checked.

PIRACY ON THE COAST OF LABUAN.—The Singapore Free Press reports, that the Sultan of Brunè, in Borneo, is dead, that Sarawak is flourishing, and that piracy is rife on the northern coast of Labuan. The merchants have no one to blame but themselves. Irritated, because Sir James Brooke chose to keep his own antimony for his own benefit, they have incessantly attacked him. He has lost his influence, and, as a natural consequence, the pirates have regained theirs. The crime will now in all probability increase, until the Indian authorities take up the matter, instead of the British government. It will then disappear at once and for ever.

OORCHA AND JHANSEE.—A correspondent of the Englishman notices, that by the demise of the Rajahs of Oorcha and Jhansee, those states lapse to the British Government. The revenue is estimated at twenty-two lakhs of rupees a year. It is said, that an attempt is to be made to find heirs, we suppose, on the part of the relatives interested. The Government of India is not likely to be deceived by any such clumsy device.

COTTON FROM BURMAH.—Mr. Price, superintendent of cotton experiments in Dacca, is to proceed to Pegu to examine into the capabilities of that province for cotton cultivation. There is no doubt whatever, that excellent cotton is produced in Burmah, as it is exposed for sale in the Rangoon bazaar, but we had imagined the cotton field was a little beyond our territories.

DISTRICT OF JESSORE.—Mr. Dunbar is about to inquire into the state of the district of Jessore. The planters are accordingly desirous of giving Mr. Dunbar every assistance, and intend to collect information on the courts, the state of education, and the tenure of land. They suggest also the propriety of making European residents, justices of the peace, a question often canvassed, and never yet satisfactorily determined. If the planters will really collect facts, they will perform a most important service.

KUMAON TEA.—The Agra Messenger publishes the official report of the prices obtained at the recent sale of Kumaon tea. They averaged—green, Rs. 1 7 5 per lb.; black, Rs. 2 2 8 per lb.; bouca, Rs. 1 2 2 per lb.

COMMUNICATION WITH BURMAH.—The establishment of the monthly line of communication between Calcutta, Akyab, and Kyouk has greatly increased the traffic. Both the last steamers were so full, that further applications for freight were declined, and the Government has been compelled to send the Buoy vessel Grappler with its own stores.

CALCUTTA CITY MISSION.—The Citizen states, that nearly five hundred persons were present at the first annual meeting of the Calcutta City Mission. It passed off admirably, and the speakers appeared willing to forget all sectional differences, in their zeal for the redemption of the outcasts of civilization. The yearly expenditure of the mission is estimated at Rs. 6,000. Up to the close of 1853, the support accorded has been most gratifying. The donations amounted to Rs. 4,400, and the expenses to Rs. 2,000.

MILITARY ON DITS.—The Hurkaru understands that Col. Stuart, Military Secretary, is about to apply for leave of absence under the new rules, and proceed to England. He will subsequently resign the service.—Capt. R. W. H. Fanshawe has obtained leave in anticipation of his being transferred to the invalid establishment.—Lieut.-col. Bates, of H.M.'s 98th Regt. is to be Military Secretary to Lord Elphinstone, the new Governor of Bombay.—The last detachment of H.M.'s 98th Regt. arrived off the Fort Feb. 8th, and marched into garrison.—It is reported that Lieut.-col. Birch, c.b., late officiating secretary to the Government of India in the military department, proceeds to Rangoon in the Zenobia.

SHIPPING.—The report of the Seamen's Friend Society, acquaints us with the total number of vessels which entered Calcutta in 1853. The number was 736, with an aggregate tonnage of 303,500 tons. The subjoined table indicates the quarter from from which they have arrived:—

COLONEL OUTRAM leaves Calcutta, Feb. 20, for Bombay and Baroda.

RANGOON, FEB. 5.—The hitherto peaceful district of Bassein is at present in a somewhat disturbed state. A requisition came for some troops a few days ago; but no steamer being available, a company of the 19th M.N.I. were despatched on the 28th ult. in country boats. The ruler of the district being absent in the direction of the Negrals, some disaffected men have appeared, to take advantage of the weakness of the garrison at Bassein. When will the military authorities learn not to place too scanty bodies of troops in detached garrisons like Bassein? Sir John Cheape and the commissioner left on the 28th December for Prome. It is believed to be the general's intention to proceed across from Meeaday to Tounghoo, Major Allan having preceded him some weeks ago, with 100 Seiks, ten sappers, and ten irregular horse, to test the fact of there being water enough in the mountain passes for a force to travel that route. A fleet of fifty commissariat boats starts on the 30th, with a complete company of the 65th N.I., for Prome, where they will join their corps, which is to be stationed at Meeaday.

SINGULAR ESCAPE FROM A TIGER.—A correspondent of the Englishman informs us, that Major Vetch, deputy-commissioner in Assam, has had a singular escape from a tiger. The brute reached the pad of the elephant, seized the barrel of Major Vetch's gun, and twisted it round. Meanwhile, the elephant, in his struggles, contrived to throw off both the tiger and his rider. Major Vetch was stunned, and on his recovery, found elephant and tiger gone, and himself unhurt.—Friend of India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DEATH OF COL. A. S. H. MOUNTAIN, C.B.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Fultehgurh, Feb. 8, 1854.—The army will learn, with a grief corresponding to that with which the Commander-in-Chief announces to it, the death of the distinguished adjutant-general of H.M.'s forces in India, Colonel A. S. H. Mountain, C.B.

The melancholy event took place in the cantonment this morning.

Her Majesty's service has sustained a great loss.

Doubtless, the important duties of the department over which Colonel Mountain has presided, through a course of five years, have been discharged with equal punctuality by various predecessors, and with equal regard for the discipline and honour of the army; but rarely, if ever, exhibiting that intimate blending of urbanity of demeanour and considerate feeling with unflinching steadiness of purpose and impartiality unswerving in the performance of those not unfrequently onerous and painful duties.

The Commander-in-Chief has no need to record for information in India, or of Her Majesty's army generally, that the able official adviser and friend whose loss he is deploring, served as head of the same department throughout the Chinese war of 1840-2, and held command of a brigade throughout that of the Punjab, in 1848-9; was with the force under Sir Walter Gilbert, in command of a division; and uniformly acquitted himself, in each of those important trusts, with the sound judgment and soldier-like ardour which never failed to animate him whenever the opportunity offered.

In all the social relations of life Col. Mountain made himself extensively beloved, and universally respected and esteemed; and Sir William Gomm feels well assured that his departure will be sincerely and deeply regretted by numbers of all classes and orders of society in India, as well as at home.

(Signed) W. M. GOMM, General-in-C., East Indies.

WAR BATTA.

Feb. 14, 1854.—The following resolution passed by the Governor-General of India in council, in the home department, on the 27th ult., is published for general information.

The Most Noble the Governor-General of India in council is pleased, under the orders of the Hon. the Court of Directors, to determine that no claim for war batta shall hereafter be admitted for any services for which donation batta is granted to the royal and Indian navy.

By order of the Most Noble the Governor of Bengal, Cecil Beadon, Sec. to the Gov. of Bengal.

APPLICATIONS FOR FURLOUGH.

Feb. 21st, 1854.—The particular attention of all officers is called to paragraph 12, G. O. G.* 14th February, 1854, No. 44.

On the first occasion of applying for furlough or leave of absence from the Commander-in-Chief or Government (on medical certificate or private affairs), and whether for leave within or beyond the limits of the presidency, officers who were in the service on the 14th February, 1854, are to state whether they wish to abide by the old regulations or not. In the event of any officer applying for furlough, &c, omitting to signify his wish, it will be concluded that he desires to take advantage of the new regulations.

MADRAS.

THE FAMINE IN MADRAS.

For once the Madras Government has acted wisely. Misled by reports from single districts, by stories of agrarian outrage, and by statements which took their hue from the fears rather than the knowledge of their writers, the local press has expressed the strongest apprehension of a famine. So accurate did their statements appear, that in many quarters it was really believed that the Madras Presidency was about to endure that most fearful of visitations, an oriental famine. In England, such a calamity would instantly have been carried to the account of the local government, and, moved by the extremity of the danger, the authorities collected information throughout the country, and published it when received. The returns furnished are accepted as correct, and they dissipate much of the alarm. It is useless to reproduce a mass of statements much too concise, and filled with details in every dialect of Southern India. The general result is this:—there is no famine in Madras, no danger of men dying from actual want of the grain usually so plentiful.

But over the greater portion of the presidency, the crops have failed to an extent which will make grain so dear, that the lowest class of all would without assistance be unable to procure a sufficiency for subsistence. Already the average increase of prices is about ninety per cent., but little more, be it remarked, than the increase in the price of the English quarter loaf since the commencement of 1853. The very lowest class in Madras, however, are exposed to serious danger from such a rise, and in many districts it will be necessary to employ labourers on the Public Works. In Nellore, the worst district of all, 50,000 labourers must be employed, in Bellary 25,000, and in most of the other districts as many as can be induced to work at rates lower than private employers usually afford. This expedient is the only one recommended by the collectors, and it will be adopted. The circulation of money thus produced, will encourage importation, and prices will be kept down at an endurable, though high level. On the whole, it would appear that although the harvest has fallen short, although great distress may be anticipated, and although the cattle will be in danger for want of fodder, no famine, properly so called, need be apprehended. It is simply a distress, such as has frequently been experienced in England, and which, though a terrible evil in itself, does not require that the Government should take upon itself the subsistence of a nation.—Friend of India.

A MEETING of the shareholders of the Madras bank was held February 13th, at which Messrs. Thomson, Nelson, and R. O. Campbell were elected directors.

DURING the past year no less than 858,784 copies of the scriptures have been circulated in the Tamil, Telugu, Canarese, and Malavalam languages by the Madras Auxiliary Bible Society.

A CLEVER DEFALCATOR.—A gentleman of the ecclesiastical establishment at Fort St. George, is reported to have been drawing several sums of money from the different treasuries under false pretences.

H.M.'s SHIP Sybil was expected to touch Madras on her way from Calcutta, to Trincomalee and Bombay.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS.—The Madras Athenæum, in a long article, essays to prove that the army of Madras is habitually slighted and neglected. He takes, first, a list of thirty-six political appointments common to all three Presidencies. Twenty-eight are held by officers from Bengal, seven from Bombay, and only one from Madras. Again, Madras and Bombay supply only nine officers to the Secretariat, while Bengal supplies sixteen. Lastly,—

“Out of 1,000 civil and military appointments held by military officers in India,—

The Bengal officers hold	..	581
The Madras officers	..	252
The Bombay officers	..	207”

There can be little doubt that the Madras army in particular is badly off in respect to patronage; but if we mistake not, its promotion is more rapid. The increasing needs of the State must speedily, however, remedy the disparity. Every regiment in India, unless some new system is introduced, will shortly be required to yield its full quota for political employ.

DEFECTIVE RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—Complaints are heard from the Mofussil of the great want of carriage for private purposes, in consequence of the demand by the railway and telegraph officials.

A DETACHMENT of H.M.'s 15th Hussars was expected at the presidency in February.

VIZAGAPATAM.—The 35th regt. N.I., under command of Major C. Pooley, marched into this garrison on Feb. 7. The regiment only lost eight men on the march from Kamptee, and latterly altogether their journey has been a prosperous one. There are some companies detached to Kenedy, Chicacole, &c., to relieve the detachment of the 7th regiment, now daily expecting shipping to take them across to Burmah. Major Hornsby, our new judge advocate-general, has arrived, and assumed charge of his office. Major Faunce, the acting paymaster, is expected per Hugh Lindsay steamer. Majors Archer and Blake will consequently leave for their regiments shortly.—Correspondent of Athenæum, Feb.

COCHIN.—Correspondents at Cochin inform us that the trade of that port is rapidly increasing, and that it bids fair to become one of the most thriving emporiums on the western coast. There are at present sixteen European ships in the Cochin river, besides a large number of native craft; many vessels, too, are in dock undergoing repairs, and a fine steamer is being built for Mr. Oughterson, a merchant of the place.—Madras Athenæum, Feb.

MILITARY ON DITS.—We are very glad to hear that matters are going on most happily in the new regiment, the 3rd Europeans, at Bellary. Injured as some of the officers believe themselves to be, in their prospects of promotion, it is highly creditable to them that they have at once dismissed all feelings of private irritation and pique, and devoted themselves, heart and soul, to the promotion of the efficiency of their new corps. Lieutenant-Colonel Whitlock, we are told, reports most favourably both of officers and men.—Athenæum, Feb. The head-quarters of the sappers and miners was in camp at Madras, and had marched from the presidency to Frazerpett.—A board of medical officers have been ordered to assemble on the 17th Feb., to examine and report upon the state of health of Lieutenant E. Currie, H.M.'s 84th regt.—The invalids of H.M.'s 25th regt., under the charge of Lieutenant Breedon, of that corps, embarked in February for England from Cannanore, on board the Earl of Balcarra.—A detachment of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders arrived from the Cape on the Regina, in Feb., under the personal superintendence of the master-attendant, and proceeded to the camp opposite the Camp Equipage Depot.—The Commander-in-Chief inspected H.M.'s 15th Hussars on the island, Feb. 21.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

BRIGADIER F. F. WHINYATES.

Fort St. George, Feb. 10, 1854.—No. 38 of 1854.—Brigadier F. F. Whinyates, being about to embark for Europe, the Right Honourable the Governor in Council desires to record the high sense which he entertains of that officer's services.

At an early period of his career, Brigadier Whinyates was actively employed in the campaign against the Mahrattas, during which he was engaged at the battle of Mahidpoor, in the conflict at Talneir, the capture of Jilpee Annair, and the siege of Aseerghur.

He has since successively filled, with the highest credit to himself, every appointment and command connected with his corps—and now, after a long and honourable course of more than forty years' actual duty in India, he retires from the command of the Madras Artillery, carrying with him the sincere respect of Government and the cordial esteem of the army at large.

OFF-RECKONINGS.

Fort St George, Feb. 14, 1854.—In consequence of the demise of Colonel Francis Haleman, of the infantry, the following addition to the list of officers entitled to Off-reckonings is authorized.

Colonel Benjamin Robertson Hitchens to half a share from the Off-reckoning Fund from the 3rd January, 1854.

BOMBAY.

ALI MORAD'S DOMINIONS.

Our readers will remember the mysterious movement in the beginning of 1852, which terminated in the annexation of the territories of Meer Ali Morad. That prince, convicted of having broken his faith alike to his family and to the British Government, suffered the penalty of forgery in the loss of nearly all his possessions. The decree of the 21st of January, 1852, which announced his fall, completed the annexation of Scinde to the British Empire. It was observed at the time, that the acquisition of these districts would redress the balances of the country, and supply the deficit created by a military expenditure, which, though necessary, is too large for the resources of the province. The revenue was calculated at 100,000*l.* a year, and though all admitted the justice of the sentence, their appreciation of its equity was quickened by the belief of its advantages. It does not appear, that these prospects are likely to be realized. The Government of Bombay has published the reports of the officers appointed to receive charge of the "resumed districts," from which, amid a mass of valuable information, we collect the statement of the actual revenue received. The territories have been placed under three officers, all subordinate to the collector of Upper Scinde. They include nine pergunnahs:—

Pergunnah.	Population.	Area in beegahs.	Revenue.
Booldoka .....	13,416	3,54,396	56,800
Shahbeyla, Cluck, } Syudabad .....	14,547	1,21,304	28,927
Oboura .....	12,096	70,266	1,08,000
Meerpore .....	17,654	2,00,000	94,891
Northern Naura....	8,212	"	12,880
Ludda Gagnu ....	"	"	52,000
Moghllee .....	"	29,435	7,200

And even of this sum, some 10,000 rupees may be lost through claims to rent-free lands hitherto unsettled. Ali Morad's country, although covering a large area, is by no means so rich a windfall as was at first imagined.

For the rest, it is evident from every line of these reports, that the annexation has allowed to the country, for the first time, the possibility of improvement. The vast plain of Booldoka, which covers a hundred thousand acres, was turned by Ali Morad into a hunting-ground. Almost covered with jungle, scarcely nine thousand acres were under cultivation, and all inhabitants "from whom any amount of cultivation could be expected, were driven out." The wretched remnant were by no means left to enjoy an immunity from the tax-gatherer, as compensation for the absence of protection. The farm of the district was assigned to a wealthy money-lender of Roree, who realized the revenue in kind, and affixed his own price to the grain, in which the people were compelled to pay. Cattle were stolen daily, and "this crime is evidently viewed by the Booldeks as of a very venial nature, and the system hitherto obtaining for its punishment tended but little to check it. On apprehension, in case the culprit did not confess, which he seldom objected to do, he was subject to severe corporal punishment till he did, and then fined double the value of the stolen property. The necessary amount to cover the fine was quickly forthcoming from his accomplices and friends, who, if they did not possess it, effected another robbery for the purpose of procuring it. As the fines were appropriated in all cases by Government, a considerable addition to the revenue was thus realized. In civil suits a fee of one-fourth the amount sued for was taken." Under such treatment the population appears to have rapidly declined. The wells were filled up, manufactures disappeared, and the inhabitants could talk to Lieutenant Webster only of the decay of their prosperity. The district had no trade, and no facilities for creating it; out of 164 wells, 128 had gone out of use, and the few remaining canals were cleared by the cultivators or petty zemindars. The remaining districts appear to be in a somewhat better condition; but in all there is ample proof, that the annexation ought to be the commencement of progress in the district.—Friend of India.

The LONDON MAIL of Jan. 24 arrived at Bombay Feb. 21 (per Semiramis).

RUSSIANS IN CANDAHAR.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier states, on the authority of a letter from a native banker at Shikarpore, that three European gentlemen are in Candahar. They are Russians, and they promise that in the spring an army of Russians and Persians will pass through Candahar en route for Scinde. They will commit a fatal mistake. Scinde might be a battle-ground for years, without affecting the stability of the empire.

MR. LUARD.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier states, that Mr. Luard is to be compelled to retire from the service on his pension.

GUZERAT SCINDE RAILWAY.—A prospectus has been received at Bombay, of a "Guzerat and Scinde Railway." Its objects are,—1st. To open out a land communication with Bombay for the produce of the very rich zillah of Kaira and Ahmedabad, in supercession of that by Cambay, only available at spring tides. 2nd. To open out a communication with the port of Gogo, for the produce of the salt-pans of Jinjoowarra and Patree, and the immense cotton-producing country comprised in the Ahmedabad zillah, the territories of the rajahs of Wudwan and Limree, and the eastern portion of Kattiawar. 3rd. To open out, in connection with the Bombay and Agra line, already approved of by the Court of Directors, a direct line of communication with Bombay, between the above countries and also Scinde, during the period of the year all communication by sea is closed." The capital required will be two millions sterling.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

OFFICERS' ALLOWANCES.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Feb. 20, 1854.—With reference to the regulation and order marginally noted,* the Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to rule that an officer absent on duty which gives him command allowance for one company, cannot draw allowance for a second company with the head-quarters of his regiment.

MAJOR JACOB'S REMARKS ON NATIVE TROOPS.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Feb. 11, 1854.—1. The attention of the Commander-in-Chief having been drawn to a paper headed "Remarks on the Native Troops of the Indian Army," under the signature of "John Jacob," which appeared in the Bombay Times newspaper of the 30th ultimo and the 1st instant, and contains observations and statements of a most objectionable nature, relative to the organization, discipline, and order of the native army, his Excellency feels himself called upon to express his marked disapprobation of the way in which Major Jacob has chosen to make his opinion known to the public. All officers have a perfect right to form opinions on the organization and order of the army they may have the honour to serve in; but they are not to publish their opinions in their official capacity. Major Jacob had full permission to make any suggestions he might have conceived would have been for the benefit of the army, to the Commander-in-Chief, and indeed he was called upon to do so by the General Order, No. 1, dated 1st June last. He had no right, therefore, to reflect upon and censure nearly every rule, regulation, and order framed by his superiors for the administration of justice and discipline, and for the well-being of the Bombay army—conduct, to say the least of it, most unmilitary, and tending to sow discontent in the native ranks, and thereby greatly wound the discipline of the native corps. Grieved as his Excellency is to have been obliged to make the foregoing remarks, his Lordship is still more so in having to censure Major Jacob for pointedly using the words "the refuse," as applicable to the regimental officers, an expression as unfounded in justice as it is insulting to that most excellent, hard-working portion of the army, composed, as it is, of officers full of zeal and assiduity, and whose thoughts and wishes are to do their duty. To these soldier-like sentiments and feelings of the officers doing duty with their corps, the Com.-in-Chief can fully testify, his Lordship having had the honour to have made the personal acquaintance of a large proportion of them within the last year; and a more gentlemanlike, zealous, hard-working set of officers does not exist. The Com.-in-Chief deeply laments being forced to observe that the conduct now so strongly condemned, emanated from one who has received (most justly) honours from his Sovereign, and the approbation of the Government he has the honour and good fortune to serve.

By order of His Excellency the Com.-in-Ch.,
H. HANCOCK, Lieut.-Col.,
Adj.-Gen. of the Army.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

THURSDAY, March 30, 1854.

THE GOLD QUESTION IN INDIA.

THE facts and statements bearing on this question, which were given in our last number, are extracted from an official paper laid before the Government of India in the year 1837, by the financial secretary of that day, who with his brother, then assay master at Calcutta, and secretary of the Mint Committee, was the chief projector of the changes of currency adopted in 1835, and whose duty it was to watch and superintend the execution of the measures taken to carry those changes into effect. Strongly as these two public officers urged upon the Government the expediency of reverting to a pure standard for the gold coin of India, they could only procure from Lord Auckland, who was then Governor-General, a cold assent to a reference of the question to the Court of Directors. His lordship had formerly been master of the Royal Mint of England, and was at the time, therefore, strongly prejudiced in favour of the British standard; he had naturally also a high reverence for the great names upon whose authority that standard had been fixed. In the Council of India, too, there was at that juncture a Madras member, Col. Morison, who, because the  $\frac{1}{4}$  alloy standard gold coin obtained currency and circulation as money in that presidency, for some time after the pure gold of Bengal had entirely disappeared from all payments, considered that as a strong reason for continuing its issue, and for permanently preferring it to the purer coin. The reason for its longer circulation was manifest: the gold, which as pure coin would have borne an agio beyond the relative value of 15 to 1,—sufficient to prevent its being ever used for payments at par,—was depreciated by the addition of  $\frac{1}{4}$  alloy, so as to bear a price nearer to that relative value, and to be occasionally used even at par for such payments. But this circulation of impure gold coin was an affair of more than ten years' antecedent date; for it was well known that all the gold coin in circulation at Madras, whether pagodas or hoonas, or low-standard gold rupees, had been used for remittance to Europe between the years 1820 and 1827, until the whole had disappeared. Indeed, as stated in the paper cited, the Government had, as far back as in 1825, caused a considerable amount of gold coin and bullion, received in the treasuries of the Madras presidency, to be sent up to Calcutta, to be converted there into pure standard gold mohurs, for the sake of the profit at which the coin of that description was sold in that city.

But although this indifference of the Governor-General led to the question being submitted to the Court of Directors in 1837, with no very strong recommendation from the Government of that day, the opinion of Lord Auckland was very much changed before a year had elapsed; for being then engaged in the Affghan war, and desirous, therefore, to have large bullion resources available for his purposes in the north-west, he cast his eye on the gold in deposit at the mint and treasury of Calcutta, and asked for it to be sent up, to be used as a war resource. He was induced to this by learning that gold was at a high premium in the Punjab. When, however, his first supply of lion-stamped gold mohurs of the  $\frac{1}{4}$  alloy standard arrived in Upper Hindostan, he found they could not be disposed of, except at a very considerable loss, the debased gold coin being actually unsaleable at the par rate to silver of 15 to 1. Upon this he wrote to the secretary at Calcutta that he had become convinced that he and the Mint Committee there were right in recommending a return to the pure standard, and Lord Auckland expressed regret that he had not more strongly urged its adoption on the Court of Directors.

Having, however, been thus coldly referred by the Government of India in 1837, we cannot wonder at the Court refusing to sanction any change. The Court\* said, in reply, that the new standard gold mohur had scarcely reached any of the districts of Bengal in 1837, or of the North-West Provinces; which was undoubtedly true, for more than 10,000 pieces had not then been struck. The Court argued, therefore, "that it was only in a few instances that it could be said that a preference existed for pure gold, or for that which was nearly pure." They thought also that the preference, where manifested, must be an effect of some shroff combinations, and they remarked on the want of firmness in the Government, which, after introducing by law the  $\frac{1}{4}$  alloy standard in 1818, had nevertheless continued for some years afterwards a coinage of pure gold mohurs; that is to say, in 1825 for Government account, and from 1829 to 1835 for individuals, as already stated. Owing to these circumstances, the Court said they were not surprised that the prejudice, where it existed, was not eradicated. They expressed a hope that it was giving way, and considered twenty years as a proper period to be allowed to expire before they should be asked to give up the attempt to make the gold coin of India conform with that of Great Britain; a measure to which they attached importance. Consequently, as no such prejudice for pure coin was reported to exist at either Madras or Bombay, and it would be preposterous, as every one must admit, to have one standard for Bengal and another for those presidencies, the Court refused to sanction any departure whatsoever from the law of 1835, which prescribed the  $\frac{1}{4}$  alloy standard for both gold and silver coin, and prohibited the striking of any other.

There was another question submitted on the same occasion by the Government of India, at the suggestion of the same public officers, viz., the propriety of reducing the seignorage upon gold from two to one per cent., under the hope that the lower rate of charge might induce a larger production of gold for conversion into coin. This recommendation was based on the argument that of the two per cent. charged on silver, one half, or one rupee, was the actual cost of converting the metal into coin; therefore the Government tax or duty on that metal was in fact only one per cent. But one hundred gold pieces could be struck at the same charge of one rupee as the silver, therefore the duty on gold was double that on silver, less  $\frac{1}{4}$ ; and if the pure coinage was restored, that  $\frac{1}{4}$  might be set against the charge of refining, which the bullion-merchant must bear. The Court of Directors were not disposed to listen to the arguments in favour of this measure, but the Government of India soon after adopted it upon its own responsibility, and the Court were compelled reluctantly to confirm it experimentally.

To pursue, however, the subject of the relative merit of the pure or impure standard for a gold coin. The Government of India again brought the matter before the Court, in replying to the despatch above cited, and on the 3rd September, 1845, the Court repeated its prohibition to make any change, stating it as their "fixed determination to allow of no departure from that established." No evidence of loss sustained by the Government, nor of inconvenience felt by the community, could move those who influenced the counsels of the Court at this time, to believe that they had committed an error in adopting for India the base standard of the gold coinage of England.

Again, in 1848, the Mint Committee of Calcutta, in reporting on the effect of the reduction of seignorage upon gold, stated that this advantage had produced no permanent benefit in inducing bullion-merchants to bring their gold to the Calcutta mint for coinage, in consequence of their continued reluctance to have their metal converted into debased standard coin, which only it was now lawful to strike. The Court, at the end of the same year, repeated in reply their old often-refuted arguments for retaining the base standard. They wrote thus: "Admitting the probability that the opinion of the committee is correct, we are not disposed to sanction any experiment for testing its accuracy ; because we do not think the alteration of the standard of gold coin would be attended with any practical result!! There can be no doubt of the fact, that the pure gold mohur was preferred by the native community ; but we believe the preference to have arisen, not from the utility of the gold coin as a medium of circulation, but because, for the purpose of hoarding, and for conversion into ornamental jewellery, its purity caused it to be highly valued by the wealthy class of natives."

This reasoning would seem to imply that the Court preferred the inferior standard coin because it was better adapted for money purposes, and because it would circulate better with silver at the then relative value of the two metals. To effect this object, they were prepared to require bullion-merchants to bring their gold to be made less valuable in the shape of coin than as pure metal. Whether this was wise or not, is one question ; but there is here an argument that is intelligible, though unsound. The same despatch, however, proceeds :—"There is, moreover, no necessity for change. The absence of a gold coinage does not appear to create any inconvenience ; and supposing difficulty to result from this cause, we apprehend that it would speedily be obviated, since gold would then naturally be brought to the mint [i.e. to take a relative value to silver of 15 to 1, when in the market it bore a relative value of at least 15½, but more generally 16 to 1, and in the pure state 17 to 1], and the demand for this currency would immediately call forth an abundant supply."

The Court, be it observed, wrote this thirteen years after the Act had passed which deprived gold coin of the privilege of being a legal tender, and brought it back to the condition in which it had been struck and issued by Akbar ; that is, as a coin to be circulated at the value it might bear in the market, and which the treasury might receive or not at a price fixed by Government, according to the convenience of the State and the uses to which it might be desired to apply it. If it was wise to bring gold coin in India to this condition, in which it would not be money with a fixed value, where was the necessity for making sacrifices, and requiring bullion-merchants also to make sacrifices, in order to lower the value of this gold coin, and bring it to circulate at a rate nearer to the fixed rate of 15 to 1, than the metal itself intrinsically bore in the market? That Government did make sacrifices will be evident from the following statement of gold coinage at Calcutta since September, 1835, when the coinage of pure gold pieces ceased. From May to September of that year there was, as above stated, a value of Rs. 10,24,032 struck and issued in pure gold pieces, in the remainder of the year 1835-36 only Rs. 98,477.

The above is a statement of the actual coinage in Calcutta of lion-device gold mohurs. It shows that in seventeen years a value of Rs. 73,53,356 was struck, giving an average of only Rs. 4,31,962 per annum. Between 1829-30 and 1834-35 the coinage of pure gold pieces represented a value of Rs. 1,14,55,936, giving an average of Rs. 19,09,342 per annum. But the coinage is not the test of the Government sacrifice by not coining in a shape to increase the value of the gold metal, for it includes both Government gold and private gold. We have obtained a statement of the deliveries of private gold into the Calcutta mint for coinage carried back to the year 1829,* when permission was given to convert it into pure gold pieces. A mere glance over this statement will be sufficient to show the loss of seignorage sustained by stopping the coinage of pure gold pieces. An increased receipt of gold will be remarked in the four years from 1837-38 to 1840-41, in consequence of, or rather coincidentally with the reduction of seignorage. At this period, from some cause that was never sufficiently traced, gold came to bear a lower relative value to silver than was usual in India ; and the deliveries of this metal were, in fact, sales of it to Government at the price of 15 of silver for 1 of gold, the mint certificates having almost universally been paid into the Government treasuries at that par, instead of the lion-device gold mohurs being claimed for them by the bullion-merchants. It was this gold that was used for the remittances made, by Lord Auckland's order, to the north-west. It is right that against these sales of gold to Government should be set the quantities of gold imported into Calcutta in the same years, the whole, or much the greater part of which, would assuredly have been sent for coinage, if the Government had continued to give the metal the increased value attaching to a pure coin. We have added this statement to prevent its being supposed that the cessation of coinage on private account was in any way owing to a short supply of the metal. It will be seen that the years of smallest coinage were by no means those of least importation, and in fact, in consequence of the practice of the treasury of Calcutta, which received mint-certificates at the par of Rs. 15 for the lion-device gold mohur in payments for opium and salt, the whole of the gold received in the mint for coinage represents only sales of that metal at that established rate.

WAR! WAR! WAR!

THE question of peace or war is no longer a question. It is settled, and we now know that we are actually embarked in war with Nicholas, the great autocrat of the barbarian empire of Russia, the present aspirant to universal dominion. What will be the result, how long hostilities may continue, and when terminate?—these are questions beyond the power of finite man to answer. "The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water;" it may flow to a greater extent than was designed or contemplated, and produce consequences never looked for. Who shall say what shall be the effect of war in Europe, where courts are for the most part bent on upholding every species of abuse and tyranny, while millions of discontented spirits—spirits never to be contented by any degree of reformation, are equally bent on razing to its foundations every form of government that exists, and placing themselves in readiness to repeat the operation on whatever form may be established in the place of the old one. As far, however, as Europe is concerned, such matters are not precisely within our province; but every movement of Russia must excite a thought of India. Not indeed that there need be much apprehension at present; but no one who has watched the progress of Russia during past years can feel quite at ease for the future, unless he be a Russian, or imbued with admiration for that people. Russia is slow, but sure; she "bides her time," and rarely strikes till there is at least some chance of success. Russia means to have India; but she can wait. If we do not acquiesce in her views, we must never be off our guard. We must never allow ourselves to say or to think, "All is quiet, and we may go to sleep." It is true that there are difficulties—enormous difficulties—in the way between Russia and India; but the former country is accustomed to see no difficulty in the way of its ambition, or rather the ambition of that unprincipled family which, in wielding its sceptre, has brought so many evils on the civilized world. Persia is a mere tool of Russia, or something lower, and the skill in intrigue possessed by the emissaries of Russia would, if only left alone, speedily prepare the way for a march to India. Russian intrigue never slackens in its labours: it is awake and active, while all around are slumbering. The only counsel applicable to those exposed to its effects is that of warning—"Beware! the wild beast is prowling about. Be watchful, and you may be safe; but be assured, that without watchfulness there is no safety!"

TEA IN INDIA.

TEA has become almost a necessary of life in the British islands, and the taste for this beverage is extending very much on the continent of Europe. The state of China might reasonably warrant some apprehension as to a steady continuity of supply; and it is therefore highly gratifying that the cultivation in India is increasing. From Assam half a million of pounds is looked for next season, and double that quantity in the succeeding one. In the north-west and other parts planting is in progress; and though China should become a prey to convulsion, we may yet get the cup—we would make the usual quotation from Cowper, but that it has been made so often that it is almost worn out. In the lighter literature of a large part of the last century, tea is invariably associated with scandal. It may be hoped, that now the connection is severed, that the scandal has disappeared, though the tea remains; and further, that the flavour of the one is not at all impaired by the absence of the other. We are not teetotallers, but we rejoice in the prospect of an undiminished supply of tea.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Quarterly General Court of the East-India Company was held on Wednesday, March 22nd, at their house in Leadenhall-street, Major Oliphant (Deputy-Chairman) presiding.

The minutes of the last General Court having been read, The Deputy-Chairman said, I am sorry to acquaint the Court that the Chairman is indisposed, and therefore has begged me to apologize for his absence. I have the honour to state that the Court of Directors have proceeded to give effect to the statute of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 95, by proceeding to a ballot for constituting the future Court of Directors, and that a minute of the proceedings on the occasion will be laid on the table of the proprietors' room.

The heads of papers and returns laid before Parliament since the last court-day were then read.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I have now to announce that this Court has been made special at the requisition of nine proprietors.

Mr. Lewin said he knew that when a special Court was appointed, it was often to get rid of the ordinary business of the Court, he therefore wished to ask whether a special Court does take precedence?

The Deputy-Chairman.—The only answer I can give is this, that upon all occasions whenever a Court is made special, that business takes precedence. The rule of this Court must be the law of the Court.

Mr. Lewin said, if argument or law that such is the rule could be shown, he should be satisfied.

The Deputy-Chairman objected to the demand.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee said this was a very important question. He hoped that if the Company's counsel were here, he would give his opinion as to the legality of it.

Mr. Jones said that he sent a notice of motion, on the 16th of February, to the secretary, but received no answer. On a subsequent day he wrote to be informed whether his notice had miscarried, and still received no answer. He then wrote to the Chairman to ask the reason, when he was informed, on the 2nd March, that the reason was, that the Court of Directors had not sat from the 16th February to the 2nd March, whereas by the Bye-Laws it was required to sit every week. He was further told that he could bring forward any motion at this Court, but that it could not be advertised, because he had given no notice of it at the previous Court, although the Bye-Laws require that all notices of motion shall be advertised a specified period previously to the Court of Proprietors being held. He submitted, therefore, that the Directors and secretary have neglected to observe the Bye-laws, and have been guilty of a wilful breach of those laws.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I believe that this has nothing whatever to do with the business now before the Court. The hon. proprietor (Mr. Lewin) spoke as to the Court being made special, and I have answered his question. I have stated that upon all occasions special business takes precedence. I am quite sure there will be plenty of time to discuss the business of the day, therefore there is no necessity for entering upon this question.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee did not see why a private motion should precede the business of the Court.

Mr. Grant held the established practice could not be disturbed when there was no controlling law to the contrary.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee objected.

The Deputy-Chairman said—I do not see any irregularity whatever in our proceedings. This is a quarterly Court, and generally certain proceedings take precedence of everything else. Then if there is any special notice of motion, that is the first business to be entered upon. That being the order of the Court, I now call upon the secretary to read the notice.

An Hon. Proprietor said, if he understood the question, after the special business shall have been disposed of, it would be competent for hon. proprietors to bring on any other business that may be transacted in the ordinary Court.

The Deputy-Chairman.—Certainly.

Mr. Lewin said, if other business might come on afterwards, he waived his objection.

CLAIMS OF THE CALCUTTA STEAM-NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The following requisition was then read:—

"London, 23rd February, 1864.

"Sir James C. Melville, K.C.B., Secretary, &c., East-India House.
"Sir,—We, the undersigned Proprietors of East-India Stock, request the Quarterly Court, to be held on 22nd proximo, may be made special, for the purpose of taking into consideration the following motion, to be submitted by Mr. Robert Browne:—

"That, referring to the Papers laid before the Court of Proprietors, in accordance with the resolution of the Quarterly Court of October last, regarding the claim of the Calcutta Steam Company for the public services rendered by their steamer the 'India,' it is the opinion of this Court that those services should be acknowledged, by payment of the sum claimed, namely, £20,000."

Mr. Browne said that all interested in India knew how much public feeling was directed to the great object of establishing a regular steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, and Suez. He need only refer to the papers which have been laid before the Court, particularly to a letter which was addressed to the Court of Directors on the 10th September, 1839, to show what efforts were being made in India to promote this great and important object. In that letter Mr. Curtis, who represented a company which had been formed, or was on the point of being formed in England, for the purpose of carrying out this great object, says:—"I have consulted the wishes of India, and in corroboration of which I beg to refer to the public meetings held in various parts of India, and to the subscriptions raised, in Calcutta alone amounting to 120,000*l.*, and in Madras to 22,000*l.*" The Governor of Madras, writing on the same subject, expressed the wish of the natives of India, both in the interior and the ports, that this long-desired object should be obtained. He (Mr. Browne) knew personally the interest which Lord William Bentinck took in the matter. He joined those who were about to get up a company for the purpose of carrying out this object, and that company put itself in correspondence with the Court of Directors. He had read part of the letter which was addressed to them, and what was the answer? On the 14th of October, 1839, Mr. Secretary Melvill—Sir James Melvill now, he was happy to say—in reply to Mr. Curtis, said:—"I am commanded to inform you, that the Court is duly sensible of the advantages of maintaining an efficient steam communication with India, and that their anxious endeavours have been and still are directed to the accomplishment of that object. To any well-devised measures, by which the established means of communication might be extended, the Court will be ready to afford due encouragement." The Court, though alive to the importance of this object, were not prepared with any plan of their own, but they were willing to give encouragement to others. Time passed, the negotiation was carried on, and there was every reason to hope that it would be brought to a successful termination. Under these circumstances, several gentlemen connected with the company which had been in correspondence with the hon. Court, in order that no delay might take place in carrying into effect the plan which was contemplated, arranged to send out the India, the largest and best-suited steamer that could be found in England at that period, for the purpose of having her on the spot to commence the voyages from Calcutta to Suez as soon as the arrangements were completed. They advanced to the builders of that ship a very large sum of money, and she was despatched to India in September, 1840. In the following year (1841), the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company appeared upon the stage. In a letter dated the 16th February, 1841, that company, after adverting to the anxious feelings of the people of India on the subject in question—namely, placing steamers on the Indian seas—inquired whether, "in the event of the hon. Court considering it premature to enter into a permanent contract, it would meet with the views of the Court to grant assistance or remuneration, in some shape, to the proposed services." To this application Mr. Secretary Melvill, on the 19th of March, answers:—"I am commanded to state, that the Court have duly considered the subject of your letter; and that any encouragement they may grant for the extension of steam communication with India, must, for the present, be in the form of a pecuniary contribution. Looking to the importance of the object in view, and to the warm interest it has excited, both in this country and India, the Court are accordingly prepared to make a grant of 20,000*l.* per annum to the Peninsular and Oriental Company, for the period of five years, in aid of the measure contemplated." It was further stated, that the payment of the above sum was to commence on one steamer being placed on the line; two voyages to be made in the first year; and it was particularly stipulated "that, in the event of the East-India Company wishing, within the above-mentioned period of five years, to enter into any contract for the conveyance of the mails, the pecuniary contribution now granted shall merge in the sum that may be payable under such contract." In the mean time, parties in India, who well knew that the Peninsular and Oriental Company would not commence the service until 1843, formed another company for immediate commencement. They did it, relying with confidence on receiving a just and equitable consideration for the services which they should well and effectually perform. They accordingly made arrangements for sending a steamer, the India, from Calcutta to Madras and Suez, and incurred the large expenses which such an enterprise involved. They felt,—and it was acknowledged by the acts of the hon. Court, by the public voice, and by the very arrangement that was made—that no private party could undertake such a service without ruin. Therefore it is plain, unless we suppose that men having large possessions in Calcutta were incapable fools, that they would not undertake to do what was acknowledged could not be undertaken, without having support from the public purse. It was arranged that the steamer should start from Calcutta, on her first voyage, on the 17th of November, but a circumstance occurred to delay it.

While the India was preparing to start for Suez, news reached the Governor-General of India that the sovereign of Ava was preparing to advance on Rangoon, with the purpose of re-conquering the Tenasserim provinces. Immediate reinforcements were pressing demanded by the local authorities. The Indian Government had no available steamers for the purpose, and therefore urgently applied for the India, to convey troops to Moulmein. The steam company, in engaging to take the troops, were obliged to derange all their plans, and incur a heavy loss; but they consented, and within a very few hours, H.M.'s 50th regiment was embarked on board the India. The voyage was performed with great rapidity; but, instead of landing the troops at Moulmein, the steamer was sent to take up a position at Rangoon, where the king and his army were. The reinforcements thus rapidly brought from Calcutta, showed the Burmese that, in case of war, the Bengal Government could command powerful steamers of a class hitherto unknown to them, the only one employed in the previous war having been a small, and hitherto useless river-boat. The desired object was effected, and Thurrawaddie, finding himself too late to effect his purpose, retired with his army to Ava. The India, having landed the troops at Moulmein, returned to Calcutta, bringing information that no further reinforcements were required. The probability was, that by these services the Burmese war was at that moment averted, and that, too, at a time when a war was about to rise in India. It might be said that this result was an accident, but it was a very fortunate accident for the Government of India. The hon. proprietor here read an extract from a letter of the Commissioner of Moulmein, in confirmation of his view. Having now, he said, disposed of this matter, he would return to the general service of the India steamer. An order came to Rangoon, and she sailed on her first voyage to Suez on the 10th of January, 1842. It was well known that, during her first voyage, she enabled the Government of India to communicate with the honourable Court at a time when a very serious occurrence took place. The Court knew perfectly well that but for the fact of the steam company having been formed at Calcutta at that particular moment, in all probability the India would have been included in the arrangement made with the Peninsular and Oriental Company. He had not made this statement without authority. In a letter, dated the 29th September, 1841, to the East-India Company, the Peninsular and Oriental Company observe:—"The anxious desire of the people of India for the immediate establishment of steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, and Suez, has lately been forcibly pressed on the attention of the directors, and they greatly regret that, notwithstanding every exertion, a considerable time must still elapse before the Company can be prepared to carry on the communication with the East-India presidencies; during this time, the Government and the East-India community will continue deprived of all the benefit from the measure, the early establishment of which they have been so long expecting; to expedite this object, therefore, is the ground of the present proposal." By the agreement made by the Court of Directors with that company, the sum of 20,000*l.* per annum has been agreed to be paid, and under certain circumstances continued, for five years, to commence from the time when one steamer should be placed on the line. It was understood that in 1842 one or more steamers should occupy that station. It appears from the statement of the existing engagement between the Peninsular and Oriental Company and the Court of Directors, that only one voyage was obligatory upon them during the first year. The Hindustan vessel was first sent out in 1842. In the letter before him it is stated that it was very probable a delay might take place in sending out the first steamer, owing to the long continuance of the wet weather, and that therefore the arrangement could not commence sooner than November or December; and then it goes on to say: "The directors of this company have lately been offered for purchase the India steam-ship, now lying at Calcutta, ready for immediate service, and, though not so large as the vessels they are building, she is of sufficient power to make the voyage to and from Suez and Calcutta at all seasons. The Court conceive that, by taking advantage of the offer referred to, the public benefit that must follow the opening of the line to the East-India presidencies may be anticipated by nearly twelve months. The Court therefore propose, for the consideration of the Hon. Court of Directors, that the grant of 20,000*l.* shall commence from the date on which the company may place the India steam-ship on the Calcutta and Suez line." It therefore appeared that the Peninsular and Oriental Company were anxious to receive the India into their service. Men of experience admitted her capability of performing that service. But, from what cause it happened he did not know, the moment the Peninsular and Oriental Company heard of the commencement of the steam company in India, they at once withdrew that proposal. They withdrew that proposal knowing perfectly well that they could never send a ship even one voyage without public aid, and they attempted to reap all the benefit of the engagement with the East-India Company, which the latter company suffered, leaving the Calcutta Steam Company to ruin. Returning to the India. She performed four voyages; and from the performance of them great social benefits and advantages were derived, and it is on those advantages that the Calcutta Steam Company rest their claim. He (Mr. Browne) did not believe that the Court of Directors themselves thought that ample justice had been dealt out in this case. He need not advert to all the memorials which have been presented by the parties who have represented the East-India Steam Company in this country to the hon. Court of Directors. The Court, in dealing with this matter, gave an answer to these several memorials dated the 25th January, 1852. After alluding in detail to the different letters received, the secretary says: "In reply I am commanded to acquaint you, for the information of the parties interested, that the Court have decided that the shareholders in the India have no claim whatever either to the sum of 20,000*l.* or any part of it." This is a very unsympathising answer to a very hard case. If there were a legal claim to stand upon, it would not have been necessary to plead in this Court to-day. The strong arm of the law would have done justice; and the strong arm of the law has obliged even the hon. Court to do justice when it had formed an erroneous view of its obligations. He must, too, take the liberty of saying, with all due respect to the Court, that it has not always been guided in its disposition of the public money by strictly legal considerations. He was not a man who would find fault with acts of generosity; but it required no pundit learned in the history of the East-India Company to discover that it has exercised a wide generosity in many cases, that it has rewarded men for a very few years of public service who had already received princely remuneration for doing what their duty and their conscience bound them to do,—that it had rewarded men with princely gifts, in instances he would not attempt to count, where certainly there was no pretence of legal obligation. He gave all public bodies credit for economy, but he did not like to see economy exercised at the expense of justice. He believed, also, that the Court had more than once granted the public money not only where there were no merits to plead, but where the very reverse was the case. He was not here to rake up the ashes of the past. It was not his character to be factious. He had never troubled this Court since he had been a proprietor, but feeling a deep interest for those native friends in Calcutta whose case he represented, he felt well entitled to express himself in the language of his heart and of his judgment. It was the infirmity of human nature, it was the infirmity of great bodies as well as of individuals, to attach very great value to services which they eagerly desired, but the comforts and advantages of which, when they have once enjoyed them, often become of very little value in their eyes. He was sorry to be under the necessity of saying that he thought the Hon. Court had, in treating the present case, brought itself within the category which he had described. Public bodies would even do things which individual gentlemen would be sorry to justify. The present occasion reminded him of an accident which once befell a gentleman in India. This gentleman, who was both prudent and wealthy, was proceeding on board ship, when it unfortunately happened that he was upset in a storm on the Ganges. He could not swim; his life was in danger; it was saved by a vigorous Bengalee. For this service he would have given half his fortune while in danger of being drowned; but when he got on shore he praised the Bengalee for his bravery, and finished by presenting him with a rupee as a reward.

Mr. Lewin.—I must rise to order. What the hon. proprietor is now saying is totally irrelevant to the subject before the Court. The Chairman.—I hope my hon. friend will proceed with his case as briefly as possible.

Mr. Browne said he would do so. The Court of Directors, in their reply to the memorials, went on to say: "But that, as the steamer had, in her first voyage to Suez, been the bearer of important despatches, the early receipt of which was of great public utility, it was proposed to acknowledge the service by a grant of £500." He would not make any observation upon the condition of that grant, which rendered it impossible for the shareholders of the India to accept it. But he was not insensible to all the difficulties which surrounded the Hon. Court in treating questions of this nature; he had therefore, on reconsideration, made up his mind not to bring forward the motion in its original shape. He believed there would be no objection to his modifying it; therefore he should, instead of the original motion, submit this:—

"That, referring to the papers laid before the Court of Proprietors, in accordance with the resolution of the quarterly Court of October last, regarding the claim of the Calcutta Steam Company, this Court, having duly considered the claim, are of opinion that it deserves the equitable and liberal consideration of the Court of Directors, and they accordingly recommend to it their favourable and immediate consideration."

Mr. Mackillop seconded the motion.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I think that this amended motion which the hon. gentleman has proposed is entitled to consideration; but if the Directors were recommended to give a much larger sum of money than they had themselves offered, the Court would be actually deciding the whole question, and I must fairly say that I could not agree to any such motion. If the hon. gentleman were to move that the papers should be again taken into consideration by the Directors, that could be done; but at the same time I cannot hold out any hope that the Directors will depart from the resolution they have already come to. The hon. gentleman himself admits that he has no legal claim, therefore I will not enter into that point. Under the distinct understanding that it is left entirely to the Directors to re-consider the case, I will not, as I had intended to do, move the previous question; still I am afraid I can hold out no hope that the object of the hon. gentleman will be attained. Is it your pleasure that the motion, as amended, be agreed to?

Mr. Jones thought that there was a very strong claim upon the Court.

Mr. Dent (a Director) said, at the time this company was formed in Calcutta, he had many schemes before him for promoting steam navigation between India and the mother country. He joined the "Comprehensive Company," and to that circumstance he must attribute it that he escaped a most heavy loss which has fallen upon the gentlemen who promoted the Calcutta Steam Company. He was in Calcutta when the news arrived which appalled the whole of India; he meant the disastrous affair at Cabul. There can be no doubt that the Government of India would have provided one of its own steamers to bring the intelligence home, but as the India steamer was on the point of sailing, the Government took advantage of that circumstance, and placed the despatches on board that vessel, which she brought on. He could bear testimony that Capt. Anderson, immediately he arrived at Suez, applied to the Pasha to provide means to forward the despatches with all speed. All must recollect the immense sensation which the news of that disastrous affair created. The speech made by Sir Robert Peel in describing the auspicious success which afterwards attended our arms under Gen. Nott, must also be fresh in the recollection of hon. proprietors. He believed that it was entirely owing to the fortunate circumstance of the intelligence of what had occurred being brought to England by means of the India, in anticipation of the regular mail, that those memorable instructions of the Governor-General were sent to Gen. Nott which gave him full discretion to advance upon Cabul. He thought it necessary, in justice to those gentlemen who permitted the India being placed on the line, from what he believed were purely disinterested and public considerations, to state thus much. He sympathised with their losses; and all the more, perhaps, because he himself very narrowly escaped being a great loser.

After a few words from Mr. Lewin, the motion as amended was put and agreed to.

THE CASE OF MESSRS. LE GEYT AND GRANT.

Mr. Lewin said that the question which he was about to bring before the Court, and which he had brought before a former one, related to the removal of two judges of the Sudder Court of Bombay. One cause of the removal of these gentlemen was stated to be that they were in debt. In the case of Mr. Le Geyt, it is well known that his liabilities arose from a wish to assist his father, who had fallen into difficulties. The fact of his being in debt became known to the editor of one of the newspapers in Bombay. This editor thought proper to promulgate it. The cases of these two gentlemen, Mr. Le Geyt and Mr. Grant, are well known. They had both been chief magistrates, and both had acquired the highest character. At the time of their removal addresses were presented to them, one of which he would read to the Court. It was presented by the most respectable natives in India living under their jurisdiction, and was signed by a gentleman well-known in this Court, in India, and indeed, all over the world, for his great humanity and benevolence,—Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy. (The hon. proprietor read the address.) There were 900 signatures attached to it. These two gentlemen, on whom the natives reposed the highest confidence, were sacrificed to the press. After these gentlemen (Messrs. Le Geyt and Grant) had been removed, Mr. Warden wrote letters to both of them. (Extracts of these were read by the hon. proprietor.) If these gentlemen were unfit for office, what justification was there for permitting them still to hold office? With regard to indebtedness, he quite agreed with Mr. Grant in what he says in one of his letters to Mr. Warden. "Ninety-nine out of a hundred natives will tell you,—and experience has shown how very correctly they judge,—that it is the man with a 'Laluch', or craving for money—not the indebted man—that is open to bribery; and that in almost every case in India in which public servants have yielded to corruption, they have been men with well-lined purses like yourself—not men in debt.’ The man most to be feared is he who covets everything he can lay his hand on. We all know that there was a man who had received £900,000 of the public money in salary, and just before his death the Company were obliged to give him £20,000, to prevent him from going to gaol. He (Mr. Lewin) could mention the names of several judges, who had gone out to India for the purpose of getting money to pay their debts. One was a chief judge in Bengal, and another a judge of Madras. That was not considered a disqualification on their part. There is one charge of an act of impropriety against one of these accused gentlemen,—Mr. Grant, but it is very clear that the Government must have known of it; and it is a subject which neither he (Mr. Lewin) nor the Government had anything to do with, unless this gentleman outraged public decency. Lord Falkland had no business to throw the first stone. He (Mr. Lewin) had no idea of men being so nice. It was mawkish and foolish sentimentality. He had read in one newspaper, published in Bombay, that the very act of indebtedness attaches to Lord Falkland himself. It is stated that his own salary is drawn by agency. Whether that were a disqualification for office he would not say; but if it is for these gentlemen, then the Court of Directors ought also to have removed Lord Falkland from office. The hon. proprietor then moved, “That the Court take into consideration the case of the removal of Messrs. Grant and Le Geyt, two judges of the Sudder Court of Bombay.”

Mr. Romer said that the first and grand mistake, the fons et origo, of succeeding evils was that unfortunate resolution of the Bombay Government to stand forward in behalf of the judges and prosecute alleged libels. This was done in disregard of the advice of the Advocate-General, whose opinion it now appears is confirmed by that of the Hon. Court. Up to this time, the Government over and over had been subjected to the virulent abuse of an insolent and licentious newspaper press, and had rightly disregarded it. Suddenly its policy is changed, from what cause, or rather at whose bidding we may conjecture, but do not certainly know. An ostensible motive, however, may be found, to the following effect; that the Government, regarding its character as deeply involved in that of the Sudder Adawlut, resolved to place itself in the position of the Supreme Court, and to require the judges to say whether they were prepared to deny upon oath the allegations made against them in the newspaper. The call was accordingly made, and promptly answered, the judges declaring themselves ready explicitly to deny on oath every allegation reflecting on their integrity and honour as touching a conscientious discharge of their public duties; but they did not deny what the Government perfectly well knew—the indebtedness of both, and a moral lapse of one. He held it to be quite clear, let these answers be examined ever so closely, that had a fair and dispassionate view of them been taken, they would have been found sufficient and satisfactory. Unhappily the Government thought otherwise, and here committed the second great mistake, that of not knowing where to stop. It would seem as if the Government, willing to improve a reputation somewhat tarnished in the public eye, had hastily made up its mind for the vigorous exhibition of correctional power, and acting on a mistaken idea of what it took for a call of duty, proceeded by the pen of the secretary to deliver a judgment so uncalled for, so regardless of consequences, so palpably unjust, as must for ever stand rebuked and condemned wherever good government is known and respected. Hear the sentence. Because “Messrs. Le Geyt and Grant have not shown that they are in a position to punish the libeller, or in any way to vindicate themselves in a public manner against the public defamation to which they have been subjected, his Lordship in council deems it the obvious and bounden duty of the Government to remove them from the bench of the Sudder Adawlut.” He paused to inquire whether any real grounds existed to warrant the application of a measure of such great severity. He could find none. No expressions of public feeling adverse to the judges were heard. A miserable newspaper alone assailed them. No zeal for the purity of public morals can be fancied to have influenced the quarter whence the fiat came, and no wise care for vindicating the reputations of judicial institutions can be supposed present to justify an act which no respect for the actors forbids naming—an act of senseless oppression, absolutely inverting the obligations of duty to the public as faithful guardians of its courts of justice. Happily the stigmatizing effect of this proceeding was early arrested—the voice of condemnation was heard on all sides, and the native community throughout the presidency of Bombay hastened to express their deep dissatisfaction at the conduct of the Government, and their warmest sympathy with the highly-esteemed and valuable public servants subjected to such unworthy treatment. He had now arrived at the last and most important stage of these lamentable transactions—the reception given here to the appeal for redress, preferred to the constituted authorities in the memorials of

Mr. Le Geyt and Mr. Grant, and the decision passed thereon. Differing toto celo from that decision, allegiance to the cause which he had undertaken, not incompatible with the deference due to the authorities whose proceedings he presumed to question, bound him, in all truth and sincerity, freely to say what he thought of the merits or demerits of these doings. It would be admitted that in the few words which he had felt bound to address to the Court, he had not travelled out of the record; that he had confined himself strictly to the sense and merits of the question, and to stating it fairly; that he had spoken to the judgment, and had made no ad misericordiam appeal to the feelings; and that the addresses remonstrating with the authorities and sympathising with the judges, stand out most gratifying and valuable testimonies to worth, conduct, and character. He would fain hope they may yet have due effect as honest exponents of public opinion. The last of these addresses he would now read.

Mr. Grant asked if the hon. proprietor ought not to be informed that the address had been read already by Mr. Lewin?

Mr. Lewin said it was not the same address. It was one to Sir Charles Wood.

Mr. Romer then read the address, after which he resumed. He had hitherto not made mention of certain disgraceful acts, which have drawn down most severe and merited censure on a colleague of the judges; but he was bound before sitting down to bring to notice the wretched double-dealing of the gentleman in question. Undetected at first, it should not at any time have been allowed a prejudicial influence in the cause of the judges; yet the hardy-concealed treachery is said to have turned the scale against them.

A Proprietor said he should be very sorry for it to go forth as a statement made and uncontradicted in this Court, that the Court gave 20,000*l.* to the Marquis Wellesley, to keep him out of gaol. He believed the Marquis Wellesley was as far from gaol as any person in Court.

Mr. Lewin said, that was using a common expression when speaking of persons in difficulties. Of course, being a peer of the realm, the Marquis Wellesley could not be placed in gaol.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I trust hon. proprietors will do justice to the Court of Directors in believing that the case of these two gentlemen was taken into their most deliberate and painful consideration, for it was exceedingly painful from the very nature of the case. For two gentlemen who had occupied the bench, and who, up to a certain time, had fulfilled their duty, and had borne most excellent characters—to which even the governor of Bombay himself bore testimony to—for two such gentlemen to be removed from their offices must be exceedingly distressing. But the reasons for their removal had been placed before the proprietors, and those reasons also had been before the directors, who felt themselves justified in the line of conduct they had deemed it their duty to adopt. The hon. mover and seconder have done no more than was to be expected from them; at the same time, I think it would be a very unwise proceeding if the Court of Proprietors should endeavour to take the case out of the hands of those whom they have themselves appointed to be the judges on such matters. It would be casting a severe censure on the Court of Directors if the present motion were to be affirmed. I therefore beg to move the previous question.

Mr. Daniel observed, that the chairman had spoken of the conduct of the two gentlemen, Messrs. Grant and Le Geyt, as having been, up to a certain time, free from taint, thereby implying, that since that period their conduct as judges had not been correct.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I had not the slightest intention of saying any such thing, or that their conduct as judges had at any time been otherwise than correct.

Mr. Daniel said—When Mr. Le Geyt was appointed to office, it was at the time that Sir George Clerk was governor of Bombay. He was intimately acquainted with Mr. Le Geyt's circumstances, and especially spoke of them, and said that there was not any objection to Mr. Le Geyt on that account. From that time Mr. Le Geyt had been reducing his indebtedness. But at a particular moment the governor of Bombay was assailed by the public press, and Mr. Le Geyt and Mr. Grant were sacrificed to propitiate the press and spare the governor. Mr. Le Geyt had been charged with having made a fictitious transfer of a debt; but that gentleman had declared that he was willing, upon his oath, to say that the transfer was not fictitious; he at the same time very unnecessarily added, that he could not take an oath as to what others might have done. But since that time Sir Charles Wood had received from the party to whom the transfer was made, an expression of his willingness to lay all his accounts before the Board or the Court of Directors, that it was a bonâ fide and honourable transfer. The result of all this is, that Lord Falkland returns to England enriched by the East-India Company; whether he has done them service or disservice, he (Mr. Daniel) knew not; but he had, on the double-dealing of a member of Council in Bombay, sacrificed two innocent and honourable men. Yet this man—Mr. Warden—remains in India and in office, while these two gentlemen are suffering under a severe and unjust sentence.

Mr. Sullivan said, the hon. gentleman had met this motion with the usual stereotype sentence, "leave it in the hands of the Court;" but the proprietors were here to review the proceedings of the executive; to revise their proceedings; to advise and to censure if it should be thought proper. He laboured under the disadvantage of not having read one page of the papers. But he had heard the statements of the hon. mover and seconder, and if it was the same case as was mentioned in the papers, he could only say that he could not conceive a more unwholesome state of things than that gentlemen seated on the highest bench of justice should feel themselves sitting with the sword of Damocles hanging over their heads; so that if they should give a judgment inimical to the views of the Government, that Government may remove them from the bench. He found that the charges against these gentlemen were—that one of them is in debt, and that the other has committed an outrage on morality. When he went to college at Calcutta he believed insolvency was the rule, and solvency the exception, in the civil service. He knew several judges on the bench who were deeply in debt; and he would ask, what did they go to India for but to get out of debt? What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and when a gentleman is admitted to the justice-seat he should have fair play. If he neglects his duty you remove him, but don't let him remain dependent upon the will of the Government. If you do, you can never have a pure administration of justice.

The Deputy-Chairman.—There is one thing which has fallen from my hon. friend which I wish to notice. He says that this Court is a check upon the Executive, and that it can control the acts of the Executive. Now, it is a fact, that the Court of Proprietors cannot alter a despatch which has already gone out to India.

Mr. Sullivan said the Court of Directors could do it. They can do anything. If there is a will there is a way. It is not the way but the will that is wanting.

The Deputy-Chairman.—My hon. friend misunderstands me. What I say is, that the Court of Directors having these questions referred to them, they alone have authority to deal with them; and that it is not in the power of the Court of Proprietors to alter their decision.

Mr. Sullivan said the Court of Proprietors could do nothing, he granted, but all know that they might entreat the Court of Directors to do it.

Mr. Jones.—I know nothing about the case, and yet I am called upon to give my judgment respecting it. At the last court day the papers were ordered to be printed.—(No, no!) Well, it was a misunderstanding.

Mr. Helps said it appeared to be the opinion of the Court of Directors, that the gentlemen, whose conduct was impugned were excellent judges, and it was confirmed by that of the people of India. On what ground are they set aside? A ground on which it was to be feared, many public servants are assailable. And while on the one hand there was to be considered the great advantage of having unindebted public servants, on the other was that of having an independent bench. With respect to what had fallen from the chair, he understood it to imply that the proceedings here are futile. Very likely they may be. He was afraid all were left, even the Court of Directors, with the ghost of authority rather than with the reality. He did not expect that hon. gentlemen on the opposite side of the table would speak out. He thought Sir Charles Wood was the man who ought to be responsible for the act of removal of these gentlemen.

The Deputy-Chairman.—You are very wrong there, I assure you.

Mr. Helps was sorry to hear it. If the Government have done wrong in this case, it is better for them to acknowledge it than endeavour to bear them through it, right or wrong.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I did say that the judges in their judicial capacity were unimpeachable; and I said, that not only was the Court of Directors of that opinion, but that the very Government who removed them were of the same opinion.

Mr. Helps asked what was the cause assigned for their removal.

The Deputy-Chairman.—You have not read the papers. The real fact is, that they were removed for bringing the Court into contempt by being in debt.

Captain Shepherd said, if there one point more than another which this Court ought to be very anxious to establish, it was that gentlemen holding high and important stations in India ought to be independent, not in their judicial character only, but also independent in circumstances. Now, the circumstances of both these gentlemen were such as gave rise to remarks which were not creditable to a court of justice. A knowledge of those circumstances came before the public, and the Government felt it its bounden duty, in deference to public opinion, to take steps for the removal of these gentlemen. The facts of the case were then referred to the Court of Directors, and that court considered that the Government of Bombay were justified in so doing. It might be true that those two gentlemen were placed in their situations with a knowledge on the part of the Government that they were in debt, and still that it was not necessary, so long as the fact remained unknown to the public, to take steps for their removal; but when the circumstances were put forward and commented upon in the newspapers, and the whole public were made cognizant of them, and when those circumstances were bringing the seat of justice into discredit, in such a state of things those judges ought to be removed. And if it were dangerous to have judges who were not independent in their pecuniary circumstances, it would be still more dangerous if this Court were to replace them after they had been removed.

Mr. Lewin said, taking the example of the hon. proprietor opposite (Mr. Browne), he would, with the permission of the Court, alter the terms of his motion, and move, "That the Court of Directors be requested to reconsider their decision in respect to the cases of Mr. Le Geyt and Mr. Grant." On the question whether or not the transfer of debt made by Mr. Le Geyt were a bona fide one, he would refer to a letter written by Mrs. Le Geyt to the editor of the Times upon the subject. (This letter the hon. proprietor read.) He trusted this letter of Mrs. Le Geyt would not escape the notice of Sir C. Wood, and now requested to propose his amended motion.

Mr. Grant said he found that one of these gentlemen was in debt, and in a very peculiar position. He had got a case before him as judge, and it appears he was obliged to transfer a debt to another party before he could try the case; and whether the way in which he has parted with his interest is bona fide or not, no one could tell. The case of the other party is one of immorality; it is a case which, he must say, does bring a taint with it, and must throw a blot on the escutcheon of a judge. He could not go into these cases; nor argue whether it is possible that all judges should be out of debt; nor determine at what degree of immorality we may stop. But judges ought to be men not only upright, honourable, and just, but above suspicion in every way. Therefore he opposed the motion.

The motion was then put.

The Dep. Chairman decided that it passed in the negative.

Mr. Lewin called for a division, and the Court divided.

Mr. Lewin postponed his motion for taking into consideration the sufferings of the military who were punished on the ground of a mutiny of the 6th light cavalry of Madras, till next Court day.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER'S ADMINISTRATION.

Mr. Lewin said he understood the Court of Directors were in possession of papers relating to Scinde, which had not been laid before the proprietors; he wished to know whether there would be any objection to producing them.

The Deputy-Chairman.—If the hon. proprietor will give notice of his motion, I shall be ready to say whether there is any objection or not.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF BERAR.

Mr. Sullivan said,—By the last mail we have advice that the Governor-General of India more suo has taken possession of the territory of Berar, upon the pretext that the late sovereign having died without heirs, it had become an escheat to the British Government. Now he would attempt to show, in a few sentences, that the Russian aggression upon Turkey is really a peccadillo compared with this flagrant aggression upon the territory of an Asiatic ally. At the conclusion of the Mahratta war, in 1818, we became the head of a great confederation of native states. We entered into treaties with between 200 and 300 native princes and chiefs of Hindoostan, to whom we pledged perpetual friendship and alliance, and whose territories we solemnly guaranteed to them, "their heirs and successors." As, by those treaties, we were bound to support the rightful heir, it became necessary to ascertain who that heir was, and, in 1825, in recognising the adopted son of the Rajah of Kotah as heir to that principality, we admitted the right of all Hindoo sovereigns to perpetuate their successions by adoption. In 1837, in acknowledging the adopted son of the Rajah of Oorcha as his successor, the British Government reiterated their recognition of this right. In 1841, an attempt having been made to question the right of the Rajah of Oorcha to name a successor, upon the plea that he would not have been permitted to exercise such a right under the Mogul emperors, the Governor-General of India, Lord Auckland, decided in his favour; and, upon a similar occasion, his lordship formally renounced all right to deal with the native states of India, by virtue of powers which had been claimed for us as successors to the Emperor of Delhi. These principles thus formally laid down by Lord Auckland and his predecessors have been acted upon for more than twenty years, namely, from 1826 to 1847, during which time fifteen native sovereignties were continued by adoption, with our express recognition. In 1848, these same authorities, completely ignoring their own recorded principles, and the acts done under them, without any reason whatever assigned for the change, denied that Hindoo sovereign princes had a right to adopt their successors, and resolved that "heirs and successors" in our treaties could have no other meaning than 'heirs male of the body.' By virtue of this new code, they have recently seized upon the principality of Berar, embracing an area of 76,432 square miles, and a population of 4,650,000 souls, upon the plea that the deceased sovereign of that state having died without heirs, it had become an escheat to the British Government. It is to this recent aggression that it is desired to draw the attention of the Court, because though that aggression has been perpetrated by the local government, the act awaits the ratification of her Majesty's Government. The question is not one that requires Indian experience for its solution; it is a simple question respecting the construction of treaties, and the observance of national faith. The ancestor of the late Rajah of Berar had established his independence as a sovereign prince before we appeared upon the political stage of India, and as such we negotiated with him upon a footing of perfect equality. In 1816, we entered into a treaty of offensive and defensive alliance with him; and in 1817 the principality was placed at the mercy of the British Government, by a gross breach of that treaty, and by the reiterated treachery of its ruler, the Rajah Appa Sahib. We were then at liberty to have dealt with it as we pleased. We might, without any imputation on our justice or moderation, have annexed it to our dominions, or we might have partitioned it amongst our allies, or having determined, as we did, to restore it to the next heir, we might have made it a life grant, or have limited the succession to the Rajah's natural heirs, giving ourselves a reversionary interest in it on the failure of such heirs. All these alternatives were within our choice, but we deliberately rejected them, and retaining such portion of the territory as suited us, we restored the remainder to the Rajah Ragojee Bhonsla, then a minor. In 1826, on his attaining his majority, we concluded "a treaty of perpetual friendship and alliance" with him:—"The late Rajah Moodjee Bhonsla, commonly called Appa Sahib, agreed to cede to the Honourable Company certain territories for the payment of the expenses of the permanent military force maintained by the British Government in his highness's territories, and in lieu of the subsidy of Rs. 7,50,000 formerly paid by the said Rajah, and of the contingent he was bound to maintain by the former treaty. These territories, as detailed in the schedule annexed to this treaty, shall remain for ever under the dominion of the Honourable Company. His Highness Maha Rajah Ragojee Bhonsla hereby renounces all claims and pretensions to the territories aforesaid, and all connections with the chiefs and zemindars, or other inhabitants of them. The British Government, on its part, hereby guarantees the rest of the dominions of the Nagpore state to Maharajah Ragojee Bhonsla, his heirs and successors." Here there is a mutual guarantee; the Rajah, on his part, cedes a certain portion of his dominions to the British Government for ever, and that Government guarantees the rest of his dominions to him, his heirs and successors. Now when it is remembered that the adoption of an heir in failure of blood heirs is with a Hindoo, prince or peasant, not a matter of choice, but of religious obligation, it will be seen that when we enter into a treaty with a Hindoo prince, "his heirs and successors," we know that except by some extraordinary accident, he never can want heirs and successors, even if all his blood relations should have become extinct. Heirs and successors, therefore, in our Indian territories, are synonymous with perpetual cession. We renounce all claim to that which we give or guarantee for ever, and the other contracting party renounces all claim to that he cedes for ever. Our empire in India is made up of territory thus ceded to us "in perpetual sovereignty," under treaties with native princes. It is now contended that whilst the cessions thus made to us are ours for ever, the cessions made by us, and the guarantees given by us in perpetuity, may be redeemed, and our obligations cease and determine,—not when it has been proved, but whenever we may choose to pronounce that a native prince has died without heirs, and that the British Government, as successors to the emperors of Delhi, is then at liberty to seize upon his possessions as an escheat. This novel doctrine will appear to be more monstrous, when it is recollected that whenever in our treaties we wish to limit succession to their heirs, we do so in express terms. We did so in our treaty with the Rao of Cutch, in 1818; with the Holkar chief, in 1844, and with the Rajah of Cashmere, Gholah Sing, in 1846. It is by this arbitrary process, viz., by setting aside without a hearing those who claim to be heirs, and then seizing upon their inheritance as escheats, that we have already obtained possession of four Indian principalities, viz., Colaba, Mandair, Sattara, and Berar. The last seizure now waits for the ratification of the Home Government. To leave out all considerations of justice, would it be politic at any time to sanction such flagrant aggressions? Is it prudent at this moment to give our enemies an opportunity of casting these things in our teeth? At the meeting of Parliament, Lord Aberdeen declared that we were precluded by treaties from entering the Dardanelles until war had actually been declared between Russia and Turkey; but to what purpose is this scrupulous observance of our treaties with European powers, if we break them by wholesale with our Asiatic allies? The late Rajah of Berar did not adopt a successor. He objected to the humiliation of having his adoption refused. He considered the Rajah of Benares, whose adoption had been rejected, to be his superior, and therefore he felt that if he made an adoption it would also be rejected; but as he did not adopt, his widow has a positive right to do so, and that without any delegation of authority from the deceased rajah. Upon these grounds, and by virtue of the treaty in which we agreed to guarantee his territories to the rajah, his heirs and successors, I call upon all those directors who denounced the annexation of Sattara as being in violation of all treaties, to stand up and make the same battle for the Rajah of Berar.

The Deputy-Chairman.—Have you any motion to propose?

Mr. Sullivan said no. Have you any papers upon the subject?

The Deputy-Chairman.—No. You appear to know more about it than I do.

Mr. Sullivan said—It is notorious; and you are the main-spring. Here is a principality annexed by the Governor-General to your dominions.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I am not aware that any such thing has been done. How my hon. friend has got his knowledge, I know not. It is unknown to the Court that any such annexation has taken place.

Mr. Sullivan.—It is known to the rajah's heirs at Nagpore.

Mr. Mangles.—By the last mail but one—I mean the mail which arrived a little more than a fortnight ago,—I received a letter telling me that the case, so far from being settled, had not been officially minuted upon.

Mr. Sullivan.—Nevertheless, you have taken possession of the territory. I don't say that it has been officially annexed.

The Deputy-Chairman.—Having answered the question of my hon. friend, I suppose the Court may proceed to other business?

Mr. Sullivan.—This is a most important subject. Don't get rid of it by a side wind. The Governor-General maintains that the Rajah of Berar has died without heirs, and your troops have marched into the territories.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I don't believe that a single man has marched. There is an extract in a paper from Nagpore, and I see no mention of the fact.

Mr. Princep.—May not those men have gone to Nagpore to take possession—the person who claims as heir being a minor—until it is decided who shall be the successor? If the Government did not exercise its paramount authority, by sending its army there, the territory, pending the question of a successor, might not be occupied at all.

Mr. Sullivan.—The territory is now in your possession. I have only to observe that if the Governor-General takes possession, and you ratify the act, it will affect the future destiny of more than 200 native princes and chiefs, who await your decision with trembling anxiety; for upon it depends the fate of their heirs, whether they shall be princes as their ancestors were, or pensioners first, and beggars afterwards.

Mr. Twining.—I think the subject is not at this time in a shape to be discussed, and therefore I would suggest that the matter should drop.

PRACTICE OF THE COURT AS TO NOTICES OF MOTION.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I beg to set the hon. proprietor (Mr. Jones) right with regard to a note which he sent to the secretary. It appears that, on the 10th of February, a note was sent by the hon. proprietor with a notice of motion, and requesting that it might be advertised. That note was submitted to the Court of Directors on the 22nd of February. There was no reason for sending a reply to the hon. proprietor, because the thing is a matter of course. It is not usual to send replies: but on the 24th of February the hon. proprietor wrote to know whether his note had been received; and on the 2nd of March he was officially answered that his note had been received, and that no notices of motions could be advertised, unless the notices were given at the previous quarterly court.

Mr. Jones said, the chairman's letter informed him that since the receipt of his (Mr. Jones's) letter, up to the 2nd of March, no court had sat.

The Deputy Chairman.—It must be a mistake.

Mr. Jones referred to the by-laws.

The Deputy Chairman.—The question is, What is a notice? A notice must be given at the previous quarterly court.

DISTRIBUTION OF PAPERS.

Mr. Jones said that the purport of the motion which he was about to submit was, that some better means than at present exist should be adopted to afford to the proprietors a more complete knowledge than they now possess of India and of its government. Parliament might take a general notice of India; but it is utterly impossible that its members should have that practical knowledge which is necessary for watching its administration. His object, therefore, was that the Court of Proprietors should receive from the Directors such information concerning India as Parliament receives from the cabinet ministers. He noticed a desire among the Directors to obtain public estimation; what opportunity can they have more favourable for gratifying that passion than by the Court giving a practical statement of their proceedings in the management of the affairs of India in every department?

Mr. Grant.—I rise to order. What is the question? The hon. proprietor is entering into the whole system of legislation for India.

Mr. Lewis thought the hon. gentleman was perfectly in order.

The Deputy-Chairman (to Mr. Jones).—Go on.

Mr. Jones said the gentleman (Mr. Grant) seemed subject to this infirmity, whenever he (Mr. Jones) spoke. The natives of India at present have no part whatever in the management of their own affairs. It was his object to invite them to send over their representatives to this Court. He considered the Court of Proprietors had been sadly negligent of their duty in not having whipped up the flagging attention of the Directors upon the subject of barracks. Again, there is the judicial department. He (Mr. Jones) read in the diary of a chaplain—one of the Company's servants—that, in a district of Madras, if a man does not buy a certain quantity of salt per annum, it is concluded that he must smuggle it, and he is put into gaol. He could not believe it. (Hear, and laughter.) He found also that a man cannot make his complaint before the courts of law, because his caste does not happen to be equal to the caste of the judge you put upon the bench.

The Deputy Chairman.—I think the hon. proprietor is travelling out of the record. I don't see the slightest connection between that object and the argument he is pursuing.

Mr. Jones said the connection was this: we want a race of men to govern India, and he was endeavouring to show you that we do not have the right men now. If we did such grievances would not continue. Again, the courts are open on a Sunday. Let all the missionaries hear it, and cry shame at the system. Then a mint is maintained at Madras which costs 9,000*l.*, when you might do the work done better for 4,000*l.* The rupees are badly coined, and the standard is not kept up. If we were more fit for our duties as proprietors we should not be so insulted. It was only last court-day, when a proprietor was speaking, that the chairman anticipated everything he had to say, stopped him in the course of his speech, and declared the Court adjourned. At the last court there was an instance of some benefit being derived from publications. An opportunity was thereby offered of ascertaining that great injustice had been done to Sir Charles Napier. That was however only by accident. If there had not occurred something behind the scenes between an hon. gentleman and the chairman it would not have been known. How did that hon. proprietor know that the Duke of Wellington had expressed an opinion upon the subject?

Mr. Grant.—It was notorious to the public.

Mr. Jones said it might be notorious to a man who happens to move in the society of a Director, but Sir Wm. Napier knew nothing about it. He would here observe that Sir Charles Napier had been treated very scurvily. With regard to the necessity of this Court receiving more information that is at present afforded, he was happy to find his opinion confirmed by the judgment of a very active man, Sir Charles Trevelyan. He recommends that a similar process to what has been suggested should be adopted. Now, the check he wished to put upon the Government is the fear that we shall keep so strict an eye upon all the measures of the Directors that Government shall not dare to put in second-rate men. At a former time, the proprietors were told that they had no liberty of action, because they were always in anticipation of some favour from the Directors, either for themselves or their relatives. Thank God, he (Mr. Jones) have none that he cared about. But it was thus that the Directors shut the mouths of the proprietors, so that they could not say anything adverse to the Court of Directors. But now we are going to act upon a new system. With regard to the expense of the plan proposed, he was aware it would be stated as an argument against him; but when he saw that the Court can increase the salaries of the Directors under the new system, and can give an additional salary to the President of the Board of Control; and when he saw that they could expend 4,000*l.* a year in dinners at the London Tavern, he could not listen with patience to an objection on the ground of expense. Whatever transactions he had had with India had been occasioned by the knowledge he had acquired by reading an account of its resources. The publications which he wished to see issued would give an opportunity to the public to avail themselves of the great and unusual resources that are to be found in the extensive empire of India. One-third of Madras only is in a state of cultivation; the other two-thirds lying in jungle. The hon. proprietor concluded by moving—

"That the information as to the proceedings of Government in India, given by the Directors to the Court of Proprietors, is insufficient for placing them on an equality with her Majesty, on the choice of fit persons for the directory; and that it be referred to the Committee of Bye-Laws to suggest a plan for remedying the defect, and report the same to the next Quarterly Court."

The Deputy Chairman.—Does any gentleman second the motion?

Mr. Lewin rose and said, that rather than the question should fall altogether he would second it.

The motion was then put and negatived.

THE RETIRING DIRECTORS.

Captain Macgregor intended to have moved a vote of thanks to the retiring directors, but feeling that it would be better if there had been a fuller court: that it was the wish of the proprietors present, so far as he could gather their sense, that the matter should not be further proceeded with on this occasion; and he should not move now, but would substitute a suggestion that, on Wednesday, 12th of April, when the incumbence of office on the part of the retiring directors would cease, a Special General Meeting be summoned for the purpose of considering the subject, which he accordingly moved.

The Deputy Chairman.—I beg to point out that there are two ways in which the Court might proceed. One, and the most obvious, way is, that a special court should be summoned in the usual manner at the requisition of nine proprietors. The only other way would be by adjourning the Court to the day named, which, I think, would not be the most convenient or proper mode.

Mr. Lewin said he should propose as an amendment, that thanks are due to that part of the directors who have assisted in turning out those members who, as a general rule, opposed every proposition for improving the system of government in India, and giving redress to those who had been unjustly treated.

Mr. Dent said—I rise probably under more embarrassment than on any former occasion in the whole period of my life. I confess I was much annoyed at being one of those who were turned out of the direction. Probably I am one of the directors to whom the hon. proprietor has just alluded.

Mr. Lewin.—I did not mean you.

Mr. Dent.—I am happy to think that I am supported in my retirement by the knowledge that those directors whose good opinion I respect and who are most respected by the proprietors, gave me their votes. But I should have retired without saying a word, but for a report which has reached me. I have continued to believe, as I did when the ballot took place, that all the votes had been given with the same honesty and the same conscientious understanding as my own, and as I now believe the votes of many of my colleagues were given. I went into the Court without having said a syllable to any one as to how I should give my vote, and I left town with the conviction that my colleagues had done the same. There was a tacit understanding that such was the case. I returned to town within a week after, and I learned on all sides that there had been a combination among the directors. I think the members of the Court of Directors are bound to clear themselves from that imputation. It is easily done; declare the numbers. I, as one of the rejected, wish it. The numbers were only withheld in consideration for those who were rejected. From the numbers alone, the proprietors, the public at large, and the legislature, will see whether the duty imposed upon the Court was performed honestly and conscientiously or not. It might be done without declaring any particular names.

Captain Shepherd.—This is the first time I have heard one single word with respect to a combination among the members of the Court of Directors. It is the first time that I have heard the selection made complained of; and I certainly am surprised at hearing my hon. friend speak of a combination, when he himself, after the ballot, came up and said to me, "I am bound to say that the selection is a very fair one." Further than that, the hon. gentleman put a letter into the Times newspaper, and stated to the public that he believed the selection had been fairly made. I firmly believe that there never was a ballot more honestly conducted. I never heard of any members having spoken to each other, or that any member told another how he was going to vote.

Mr. Dent.—My having told hon. gentlemen that I believed the selection was fairly made, only shows that my conviction was that my colleagues had voted conscientiously. I am certain that what the hon. gentleman says is true, and that he did not communicate with any one. But here are the reports outside the Court. I am not mentioning this for the first time; I have mentioned it before to many members of the Court; I did write a short letter to the Times; I have not a copy of it, but it was to this effect: "These are the gentlemen who are to be the Directors, and I think the public will see that the Court have made a very fair selection. I do not wish the letter to appear as an advertisement; but I will pay whatever you like to charge." The Times returned my letter, saying they could not insert it without heading it as an advertisement.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I think after what has occurred, it is right I should say, that it appears to me my hon. friend must be very much mistaken as to what has taken place. My belief is, and I know it is the belief of the Chairman, that there has been no communication among the members of the Court, and I do not think there has ever been any suspicion abroad that there has been any combination. It has been almost the universal remark, when the report of the result of the ballot came before the public, that the list of selected members was exceedingly fair. I cannot perceive that my hon. friend has any ground for his suspicions.

Mr. Dent.—I have brought the matter forward to show that I have no suspicions.

The Deputy-Chairman.—I have thought it necessary to say thus much, lest from my silence a false inference should be drawn. I cannot help saying, that I am very much astonished that my hon. friend should make such an accusation.

Mr. Twining said he came down to the Court as being the last quarterly court that will be held under the former system, and he did anticipate that something would occur that would give the proprietors an opportunity of expressing their regret at parting with many kind and zealous friends; and also of expressing not simply a vote of thanks to them, but a vote of cordial regard, and to record the sense they entertained of the zealous and active services of those who were about to retire from the direction. He could have wished that the matter had here closed; and he deeply regretted that a discussion of so very painful a nature as that just heard should have taken place. He had hoped that there would have been some spontaneous expression on the part of the Court of Proprietors; and although he should not have opposed the course which the hon. proprietor (Capt. Macgregor) has adopted of appointing a special court, yet considering the shape which the question had now assumed, he was afraid that it would be very painful to enter upon it lest the same unpleasant subject should be renewed.

Mr. Dent made a remark which, from the confusion that prevailed, was not distinctly heard.

The Court then adjourned.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, 22nd March, 1854.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That the Finance and Home Committee will be ready, on or before Wednesday, the 5th April, 1854, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, to receive Tenders, sealed up, from such persons as may be willing to supply the Company with 3,000 Tons of Coal, of any of the under-mentioned sorts, to be delivered at Aden, on the Southern Coast of Arabia, viz.—

WEST HARTLEY COAL,
CARR'S HARTLEY COAL,
BUDDLE'S HARTLEY COAL,
DAVISON'S WEST HARTLEY COAL,
HARTLEPOOL WEST HARTLEY COAL,
RAVENSWORTH WEST HARTLEY COAL, JONASSOHN'S HARTLEY COAL,—or GLASGOW HARD SPLINT COAL,

Screened.

The Tenders are to be made according to a form which may be had upon application at the Marine Branch of the Secretary's Office, in the East-India House, with Conditions annexed; and the Tenders are to be left at the Secretary's office at any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the 5th of April aforesaid, after which hour no Tender will be received.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

CANTEEN.

EAST-INDIA COMPANY'S BARRACKS, WARLEY, NEAR BRENTWOOD, ESSEX.

East-India House, London, 29th March, 1854.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the CANTEEN in the above-mentioned Barracks is to be LET, upon the following Conditions, from the 28th May, 1854, to the 25th May, 1857.

No person but of unexceptionable character, nor any person who will not undertake bona fide to reside in the Canteen, and conduct the business thereof in his own person, will be approved; and two sureties will be required for the regular payment of the rent, and of all sums which may become due in respect of the said Canteen, and for the due performance of the several conditions and stipulations of the indenture of lease. The revenue or other licenses to be paid by the tenant.

The person whose proposal shall be accepted (and his sureties) must execute an indenture of lease, and covenants relating thereto; the particulars whereof may be known by applying at this House, or at the Office of the Commandant of the Company's Depot, Warley Barracks, Essex.

The names of two respectable persons, with their Christian names, professions, and places of abode, who will join the tenant in executing the indenture of lease, as his sureties, must be inserted in the proposals, and no proposal will be attended to which is not accompanied by the written consent of the persons named to be the proposer's sureties. The tenant is to pay the full value of the stamps on the indenture of lease upon executing the same, and it is to be understood that the East-India Company will not undertake to procure the tenant a license.

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Secretary, East-India House, London, with the words, "Tender for Canteen, Warley Barracks," written on the outside cover, will be received at this House, at or before 11 o'clock of the morning of Wednesday, the 26th April, 1854, after which hour any proposal received cannot be noticed.

By the Mutiny Act, Canteens are not liable to have troops billeted on them.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

East-India House, 22nd March, 1854.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY publish, for the information of the Proprietors of PROMISSORY NOTES of the BENGAL FIVE PER CENT. LOAN of 1841-42, who may not be resident in India, the following Notification, which has been issued by the Government of India, and published in the "Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary" of the 28th January, 1854:—

No. 3.

Fort William, Financial Department,
28th January, 1854.

NOTIFICATION.

Notice is hereby given, that all the Notes of the Five per Cent. Loan, bearing date the 30th June, 1841, which have not been already advertised for payment, and are still outstanding, will be discharged at the General Treasury in Calcutta, on the 29th of April next, on which day the interest thereon will cease.

Proprietors of the Notes hereby advertised for payment are permitted, on or before the 29th of April next, to transfer the amount of their Promissory Notes into the Four per Cent. Loan of 1854-55.

Proprietors who may transfer their Promissory Notes into the Loan of 1854-55, through the Government Agent, shall not be subjected to the payment of the fees prescribed in the rules of the Government Agency for transferring Notes from one Loan to another.

All Officers authorised to receive subscriptions to Government Loans are hereby required to receive applications in writing from individuals who may desire to transfer the amount of their Notes into the Four per Cent. Loan.

These applications, together with the Promissory Notes in reference to which they may have been received, shall, without fee or expense of any kind to the proprietor, be transmitted to the Deputy-Accountant-General at Fort William, who will forthwith cause to be prepared and issued to the parties entitled thereto, Promissory Notes in the Four per Cent. Loan of 1854-55.

Prompt settlement of the principal and interest, at the rate of five per cent. per annum to the date of advertised discharge, will be made with proprietors who may tender their Notes for transfer into the new Loan; provided, however, that the principal only will be transferred, and that the interest at the rate of five per cent. up to the 29th of April inclusive, as well as anticipation interest at the rate of four per cent. up to the 30th June, 1854, will be discharged in cash.

It is further notified, that the Most Noble the Governor-General in Council has, for the accommodation of proprietors who are not in India, authorised the Deputy-Accountant-General to allow the conditional transfer of their Notes to the Four per Cent. Loan of 1854-55, on the application of agents or friends, leaving it optional with the proprietors to confirm the transfer, or to require payment in cash; provided, however, that no notice disallowing the transfer will be received after six months from the present date.

Published by order of the Most Noble the Governor-General of India in Council.

(Signed) C. ALLEN,
Secretary to the Government of India.
JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,
No. 1, KING WILLIAM STREET, CITY, LONDON.
Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament, 6 Will. 4, cap. 54.

DIRECTORS.

SIR HENRY WILLOCK, K.L.S., Chairman.
JOHN STEWART, Esq., Deputy Chairman.
Lieut.-Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong,
K.C.B., K.C.T. and S.
John Bagshaw, Esq., M.P.
Augustus Bosanquet, Esq.
Charles Dashwood Bruce, Esq.
Ellis Watkin Cunliffe, Esq.
William Kilburn, Esq.
Francis Macnaghten, Esq.
Charles Otway Mayne, Esq.
Major John Arthur Moore.
William Rothery, Esq.
Robert Saunders, Esq.
Capt. Samuel Thornton, R.N.
Brodie McGhie Wilcox, Esq., M.P.

The marked success which has attended the operations of this Society justifies the Directors in calling the attention of the public to the superior advantages held out to all classes desirous of affecting Assurances upon their lives.

The subjoined scale of rates is framed with the greatest care, and will be found to be as MODERATE as is CONSISTENT WITH PERFECT SECURITY.

Annual Premium required for the Assurance of £100 on a single Life, with participation in Profits:—

30	£1 18 8	35	£2 14 11	50	£4 5 6
25	2 3 3	40	3 3 0	55	5 5 10
30	2 8 10	45	3 12 2	60	6 13 2

Tables for Policies to be effected in India have been especially prepared from the records of the East-India Company, on the experience of mortality in that country.

During the last twelve years, the reduction of Premium on Policies entitled to participate in Profits has averaged more than 44 per cent., and in the last three years it has been declared at 45 per cent.

An annual division is made of one-fifth of the ascertained profits of the five preceding years; the other four-fifths being set apart to enter into the average of succeeding years.

Of the sum annually divisible, 75 per cent. is apportioned to Policy-holders who have paid six annual Premiums, either in a Reduction of subsequent Premiums, or as a Bonus added to the Policy. The remainder is apportioned to the Shareholders.

Assets of the Society, upwards of £600,000.—Amount of Policies in force, £2,000,000.—Annual income arising from Premiums, exclusively of interest on the invested capital, exceeds £120,000.

Weekly Board-day, Thursday, at 10 o'clock.
Committees sit every Tuesday and Saturday, at 12 o'clock, when Policies requiring despatch may be effected.

40	38	39	40	41	53	49

To the policy holders on the profit scale, who have paid five years' premium, a bonus of twenty per cent. has been annually allowed for the last three years.

The Society grants an immediate reduction to the English rates to parties proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and a reduction after one year to those who come for a short period only.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period are also granted.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents at the other Indian Presidencies.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA, &c.

DRAWN BY JOHN WALKER,

A New Map of India;

Showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the Position and Boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys executed by Order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or on cloth, in case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

*.* The object kept in view in compiling this Map, has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all Stations—Civil and Military—are inserted, as well as those of all Towns and places of note, likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various Districts and Collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The Railways are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the Map clear and easy for Reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been shunned.

A General Map of India;

Compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Hon. East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

Map of India;

From the most recent authorities. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

Map of the Routes in India;

With Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this Map are given the whole of the Military and Civil Stations, together with the principal Towns, the villages being omitted so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies.

Map of the Western Provinces of Hindoostan;

The Punjab, Cabool, Sindh, Bhawalpore, &c.; including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or on cloth, in a case, £2; or on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

Map of India and China, Burmah, Siam,

the Malay Peninsula, and the Empire of Anam. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 6s.

Map showing the Steam Communication and Overland Routes

Between England, India, China, and Australia. Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 4 in. high; on cloth, in a case, 14s., or with rollers, and varnished, 18s.

Map of Arabia;

Compiled from all the most recent authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high; on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

Map of the Punjab and Sikh Territory.

On one sheet, 5s.; or on cloth, in a case, 6s.

Map of Afghanistan and the adjacent Countries.

On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

Map of China,

From the most authentic sources of information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or on cloth, in a case, 11s.

Map of the Burman Empire,

Showing the annexed district of Pegu. One sheet 3s. 6d.; or on cloth, in a case, 5s.

THE GENUINE INDIAN CURRY MIXTURE,

PREPARED BY A LADY (a long resident in India), who was instructed in the preparation by the late celebrated Fyzoo Kausumah, of Calcutta.

This mixture contains all the ingredients used in India in the preparation of a Curry, and requires no addition, is highly approved by those who have resided in India, and the Curries prepared with it pronounced by them "the best they have eaten since they left India."

To be had of Wm. Ashdown and Co., Indian Lamp Exporters, &c. &c., 167, Piccadilly, and (wholesale) by letter addressed to Messrs. Edward and Co., 21, Pelham Road, Brompton.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT, a sovereign remedy for the Afflicted.—The number of years this invaluable ointment has stood the test of public opinion, and the longer known the better appreciated, is a testimony of itself more powerful than anything that could be written in praise of the curative properties it possesses. For Ringworm, Scald Heads, and all diseases of the Skin, it is unequalled; recent Tumours, or old Ulcers, may very shortly be healed by its use. For Tumours, Bad Breasts, Scrofula, and Sore Legs, there is no remedy to be compared with it; and in conjunction, as a purifier of the Blood, and to effect certain cures, HOLLOWAY'S PILLS should be taken.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION OF OPIUM

and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—Thirty years have elapsed since Captain Jeremie, the Inventor of this most valuable preparation of Opium, first offered it to the public, since which period most of the respectable Members of the Profession in India, England, and on the continent of Europe, have prescribed it and recommended it as the safest and most efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium. The universal patronage which this medicine has obtained in England in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting, the premonitory symptoms of Cholera, and the great and increasing demand for it from all parts of the continent of Europe, is the greatest proof of its efficacy and good effects.

Prepared only by SAVORY and MOORE, Chemists, 143, New Bond Street, London.

N.B.—None can be genuine unless surrounded with a Government stamp. Agents for India—Messrs. R. SCOTT, THOMSON, and Co., Calcutta.

LADIES of DELICATE COMPLEXION, who suffer

from exposure to cold winds and damp atmosphere, will find immediate and soothing relief in the application of ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.

This unique Botanical Preparation allays all irritation and tenderness of the skin, removes cutaneous disfigurements, freckles, and tan, and imparts a healthy and blooming appearance to the complexion, and a delicacy and softness to the neck, hands, and arms. Perseverance in its application promotes a free and uninterrupted exercise of those important functions of the skin, so essential for the preservation of health, and the attainment and continuance of a beautiful complexion.

Gentlemen, after shaving, will also find it allay the irritability and smarting pain, and render the skin soft, smooth, and pleasant.

Its purifying and refreshing properties have obtained its selection by Royalty, and the several Courts throughout Europe, together with the "élite" of the aristocracy.—Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR" are on the wrapper, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 30, Hatton-garden, London," on the Government stamp, affixed on each bottle. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

alliance with a Christian nation than with a kingdom belonging to a creed which they deem doubly accursed. Strange to say, in spite of all the ill-treatment he has received at our hands, Dost Mahomed is said never to have lost his regard for the English. And even at Cabool, notwithstanding the Afghan war, with all its crimes and all its blunders, there are many of the chiefs who associate the name of our countrymen with that of Mr. Mountstuart Elphinstone, who was the first British official they ever saw; and they would gladly enter into an offensive and defensive alliance with our Government. The news of these overtures on the part of the Dost requires confirmation, but we hope to be able to supply the information respecting its truth or otherwise, in the next issue of our Summary.

We have said nothing of Oude for some time past, simply because there was nothing to be told. A correspondent of one of the Calcutta papers writes: "What can I say of Lucknow excepting the old story—that the king's subjects are still oppressed, and his servants still unpaid?" This is the sum and substance of the intelligence from Lucknow ever since our journal commenced its course, and long before. Another correspondent of the same paper points out the unvarying state of the Nizam's dominions not less felicitously than does his fellow that of Oude. He says, "It is almost useless to describe the disorders which prevail in the country. They have always one and the same character, and are only varied by their greater or lesser magnitude."

Local news from Calcutta there is none; so we have recourse to the presidency usually named next after Bengal, and the very first sentence of the Madras summary positively astounds us. It runs as follows:—

"Ex nihilo nihil fit," is a truth sufficiently ancient, as we thought, to authorize our pleading it, when appealed to by our printer for a Summary; but the bare idea of 'delivering' the present issue without one has had such an effect, that if it were only for the sake of being 'human,' as Brother Jonathan hath it, we have deliberately seated ourselves to reverse the sentence and write 'something fit.'"

There is after all not much that is "fit" for our purpose. The Maharajah Duleep Singh is really coming to England, it seems, after all the contradictory reports in regard to the matter. The head-quarters of the 15th Hussars embarked for England at the end of February. The Athenaeum is eloquent in bidding the regiment good-bye, and we quote part of its valediction, to answer the very different purpose of a welcome on its arrival on our shores.

"We gladly take this opportunity of bidding the gallant 15th farewell. A finer set of men, or more disciplined, never left these shores. One fact speaks volumes for them. There has scarcely been a court-martial for the last two years; and the health in which they arrived at the presidency after the fatigues and comparative license of a march, is the best proof of their previous sober and orderly habits."

Bombay is about as lively as the other Presidencies. The most stirring incident is furnished by a steamer (the Bombay), belonging to the Bombay Steam Navigation Company, having struck on a rock near Dwarka. The accident happened, it is said, through the officer on watch trying how well he could perform his duty with his eyes closed, and his senses steeped in the forgetfulness induced by the drowsy god. The vessel is said to be uninjured: perhaps she was asleep too (as all Bombay, and indeed all India appear to be), and escaped injury by keeping quiet.

Persia has of late excited an interest which contrasts strongly with the apathy formerly displayed towards that country. Circumstances have altered, and therefore we quote the following from the Bombay papers:—

"The latest intelligence from Persia has come to hand via Muscat. On the morning of the 20th ultimo, the Achar left Muscat for Bushire. The authorities at Abbas Bunder will not give the place up to the Persians; they wish to pay tribute, and in case of not being allowed to do so, are prepared to fight. Four hundred Persians have encamped to take the fort. A skirmish between the contending parties has taken place, in which the Persians are said to have had fifty killed, only two or three of the other party being wounded. The Muscat authorities have sent three vessels and two thousand men, the whole commanded by Mahomed-bin-Salem, to assist Abbas. It is said that Sultan-bin-Sugur is ready to assist Persia, and it is apprehended that a severe struggle must take place."

The Colombo Observer is much delighted with a specimen of some beautiful gold-coloured silk, produced at an industrial school in that place. But this is nothing to the production of gold itself, which it seems is likely to distinguish Ceylon. The discovery was deemed of sufficient importance to warrant the issue of a Colombo Observer extraordinary; and in order that our readers may be in time to avail themselves of the find, we print the following:

"In our last ordinary issue we announced the all-but certainty of gold in Ceylon, and have now the pleasure to state that doubt is entirely removed by the arrival of the joint report (then expected) of Mr. McCartney, the superintendent of police, and Mr. T. Power, assistant Government agent, which says that they witnessed the digging and washing of 'two pans of earth,' which contained 'very many minute particles of gold.'"

"Their report is dated 'Yattegodde, 11th March' (yesterday), and is unavoidably hurried, in order to reach Colombo in time to be forwarded by Government to the Secretary of State by the out-going overland mail."

"We may add that the modliar (native headman) of the district sent in yesterday to the Government agent of Colombo a specimen of the gold, which he also saw dug by the sailors; and that Mr. Layard will leave for the spot this evening."

"The locality is about forty miles from Colombo, near Girooele, on the road from Negombo to Kornegalle. A good carriage-road runs all the way from Colombo to the scene of action."

"We have as yet no precise information as to the proportionate quantity of gold which the earth contains, but it cannot be insignificant, seeing that the sailors who made the discovery, and are old Californian and Australian diggers, continue at the work."

"Our next report, we hope, will be the result of personal inspection."

After gold all other things appear mean, so here we conclude our Summary, and shall look out with ardent expectation for the next Overland, in hope of hearing more of the gold.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE ARMIES OF INDIA, REPORTED SINCE OUR LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s Troops.—Lieut. Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong, col. of the 32nd regt. and late commander-in-chief at Madras, at sea, on board the ship Barham, on his passage to England, March 3.

MADRAS.—Ens. J. H. B. Rhind, 3rd L.I., at Talyhaut-cherry, Feb. 23.

BOMBAY.—Capt. H. W. Brett, art., at Bombay, Feb. 27; Surg. B. A. R. Nicholson, 6th N.I., at Hyderabad, March 1.

MUCH THE SAME ALL OVER THE WORLD.—The proprietors of shops in Duncan Road, Girgaum, Dobee Tank, and the Chuckla, have a manufactured liquor of their own, expressly for the supply of sailors, known by the name of "Sailor's Jack," or "Tom's Brandy," which is liberally supplied to the unfortunate seamen possessed of money, with a view to rob them, in which these proprietors but too easily succeed, for the liquor takes immediate effect. It is prepared from strong country arrack, mixed with the poisonous juice of the datura, the juices of tobacco and chillies, and a quantity of opium. The beer and wine sold to Jack are by no means better. The former is a mixture of beer, water, a decoction of vinegar, soapnuts, sugar, and soda, which for two or three days after it has been bottled, is sold to "Poor Jack" at half a rupee a bottle. The wine is a mixture of vinegar, sugar, and Parsee brandy, with a decoction of log-wood, and is bottled and sold at the rate of a rupee a bottle, as port wine; and yet the vendors of such poisonous liquors escape punishment.—Joyce's Exposure of the Haunts of Infamy and Dens of Vice in Bombay.

BURMAH.

TOUNGHOO AND BASSEIN.

The latest intelligence from Burmah appears to have excited a somewhat unnecessary alarm. Some severe skirmishes have, it is true, occurred upon the frontier, but we perceive nothing in the very minute information which has reached us, to distinguish them from the conflicts to which we are accustomed in the north-west. There has been no general outbreak, no manifestation of popular hostility, no movement from Ava, and the loss of life, though doubtless to be regretted, has been in itself but trifling. On the morning of the 24th January, Major Allan, in command of a small force, including some Sikhs and Europeans, marched out from Tounghoo. He had been ordered, under instructions from the Governor-General, to mark the boundary of our new acquisitions, which will run about about thirty-seven miles to the northward of that city. The first day's day march was accomplished without even the appearance of opposition. On the following morning, however, as the force entered a broad glade in the forest, they were fired upon by a band of "dah-mas," or robbers, posted in the jungle at a distance of about eighty yards. Two men of the Madras fusiliers, and a sowar were wounded, and the assailants made their escape. On the 27th, the attempt was renewed. The force was again fired upon, and Lieutenant Grant, of the fusiliers, had his right arm disabled by a musket-ball. In the course of the same day, the attack was explained. A letter was received from the headman of Nyeen Gyan, a place some forty miles across the border, coolly demanding the reason of Major Allan's proceedings. The boundary question, said the headman, with all the mendacity of a true Burmese, was under the consideration of the commissioner, and Major Allan's advance was totally uncalled for. This production received a reply, but as Major Allan neither delayed his march nor suspended his surveying operations, he was again attacked at a place called Tagarrah, between the great teak forest and the river. The enemy, in considerable force, had stretched themselves across the road, scooped the bank of a neighbouring nullah, and thrown up a strong breastwork. All was alike useless. Undeterred by a heavy fire, the men of the fusiliers sprung forward with the dash which has always distinguished that fine regiment; the Sikhs vied with the Europeans, the breastwork was turned, several of the enemy were bayoneted, and two jinjalls were taken. Captain Geils was the only officer wounded, with a corporal, a few men of the 60th, and one or two Sikhs. The instant the intelligence reached Tounghoo, two 24-pounder howitzers and 120 Europeans were hurried forward under Colonel Poole, and it was expected that they would arrive in time to prevent the possibility of another engagement. The country, however, is covered with morasses, the character of which may be comprehended from the fact, that at Kaylen, one of them is crossed by a bridge, 1310 yards long. The movement of artillery is, therefore, a task of extreme difficulty, but it is scarcely needed. We have to contend with enemies like those against whom Americans have been warring for years, and under circumstances almost precisely similar. We must resort to the weapon which has rendered the Americans victorious. In the teak forest and the swamp, the rifle is all-powerful, and a dozen marksmen will strike more terror than as many artillerymen. The heavy fire of European regulars only barks the trees. These marauders, whether paid by Ava or actuated by patriotism, must feel that to approach within gunshot of Europeans is certain death, and we shall hear little more of these petty skirmishes. Politically, they are as important as mosquito bites, but they ought to be suppressed. They keep up a chronic irritation, distract officials from the duties of civil administration, spread causeless but injurious panics, and give to journals like the Rangoon Chronicle occasion for publishing legends, which in the columns of the Times are transmitted into history.

A slight outbreak, also, has occurred in the district of Bassein. The Governor-General, aware of the importance of the river of that name, issued orders during his recent visit to clear a space at its mouth for the site of a new city. Captain Fytche instantly proceeded to the spot, and was engaged in completing the survey, when intelligence reached Bassein of a movement in the Northern division of the district. It appears that immediately after his lordship had left the river, some chiefs with gold umbrellas, high-sounding titles, and a small armed retinue, appeared on the Northern frontier. They declared that the Governor-General had surrendered to them Bassein, and pointed to the absence of the gun-boats as a proof of their assertion. The people believed; every scoundrel in the neighbourhood flocked to chiefs who offered at least a chance of plunder, and the peasantry, half-credulous, and half-frightened, afforded them an unwilling assistance. Captain Fytche saw the necessity of instant action. Taking with him some thirty men of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, and double that number of sepoys, he surprised and utterly defeated the main body of the rebels. From thirty to forty were left dead on the field, and so complete was the terror inspired by his energetic severity, that in a few days not an armed Burman could be found. Meanwhile, the Karens, as usual, lent their efficient aid. Koe Loe, the Karen leader, who armed on our behalf in the very beginning of the war, attacked and carried a strong entrenchment. Two other Karen chiefs displayed a similar zeal, and as our letters left Bassein, the head of one of the rebel leaders, slain by their followers, was carried into the town. Only one man still holds out with a small force. Captain Fytche is in active pursuit, and in a few days this rich district will be as quiet as it was before the emeute occurred. It will be observed that it arose from no discontent, and from no hostility to the British. Not a man would leave his rice-field until convinced that the country was surrendered, and the erection of the new city will soon extinguish this habit of political credulity. Meanwhile, Captain Fytche deserves credit alike for the energy which frustrated the efforts of the Burmese, and for the personal activity which makes the small force under his command almost ubiquitous.—Friend of India.

THE ARMY OF AVA.

The first detachment of H.M.'s 51st regiment, with the headquarters under Brigadier Elliott, K.H., having arrived from Rangoon, we hasten to lay before our readers the intelligence we have received of the strength and distribution of the army of Ava, as we believe the Governor-General designates that force. The army is to consist of—

- 5 European regiments of infantry.
- 11 Native ditto ditto.
- 4 Field batteries.
- 5 Reserve companies of artillery.
- 4 Companies of sappers and miners.
- 1 Regiment of irregular cavalry.
- 1 Arracan local battalion.
- 1 Pegu light infantry battalion.

The armies of Bengal and Madras are ordered to furnish the following:—

	Bengal.	Madras.	Total.
European regiments of infantry ....	3	2	5
Native ditto ditto .....	4	7	11
Field batteries.....	2	2	4
Reserve companies of artillery .....	2	3	5
Companies of sappers.....	0	4	4
Irregular cavalry regiment.....	1	0	1
Arracan battalion .....	1	0	1
Pegu light infantry.....	1	0	1

The troops of the different presidencies occupy the following stations:—

	SAPPERS.	INFANTRY REGTS.				ART.		CAV.
	Companies.	European.	Native.	Arracan.	Pegu.	Field Battery.	Reserve Companies.	Irregular.
Moulmein.....	0	1	2	0	0	0	1	0
Naminyan .....	1	1	1	0	0	1	1	50
Thayet Myoo ...	1	1	3	0	0	1	1	250
	4	5	11	1	1	4	5	500

The Madras troops occupy Rangoon, Tonghoo, Moulmein; the Bengal troops occupy Naminyan, Thayet Myoo, and furnish one European corps for Moulmein.

The Madras sappers are detached to Naminyan and Thayet Myoo, and the Bengal irregular cavalry to Tonghoo, Naminyan, and Thayet Myoo.

The Rangoon force detaches to Pegu two companies of European infantry, five companies of Native infantry, one-third of a company of reserve artillery.

The Tonghoo force detaches to Thuygeen, the same strength as that sent from Rangoon to Pegu.

The Moulmein force detaches to Bassein one European company of infantry, four Native companies of infantry, one-third of a company of reserve artillery; to Sitang the same strength, and one company of Native infantry each to Tavoy and Mergui.

The forces, as above, appear well distributed and in commanding positions, enabling them to cover the country and guard against invasion from any quarter, and yet each detachment is sufficiently strong to resist any force the Burmese can bring against it, so that, provided the measures ordered by the Governor General be taken, for opening up the country by forming roads and canals and using rivers, to connect the different parts of it, and to facilitate communication with the troops by land and by water, we may consider our recent acquisitions in Burmah secured against all the efforts that the despicable Government of Ava can make for their molestation.

GENERAL D'ORGONI.—General D'Orgoni (to whom the familiar title of Captain still adheres) left in the Fire Queen this morning for Calcutta. From thence it is believed to be the intention of the old chap to proceed to France, if the Governor-General is merciful enough to allow him. If we are not much disappointed, his presence in Calcutta will create much more sensation than it did here, and in France he will become a lion. It is said to be the intention of the General to return to Umerapoor. We suppose it will be the policy of our government to prevent his doing so; but unless those who try to prevent him are as cunning as himself, he will give them the slip.—Ibid. February 4.

DACOITS.—A gang of 200 dacoits or patriots, as they are termed, are infesting the south portion of the Dalla district, in consequence of which four companies of the Pegu light infantry marched inland, while a strong armed party in five boats, under the Myo-Ouk and Goung, of Dalla, proceeded to the Bassein Creek on Monday last to scour them off, and afford protection to the villages infested.—Ibid. February 11.

BLOCKADE OF THE RIVER.—For the last two or three days rumours have been prevalent to the effect that the river above Meahday is under a state of blockade by the Burmese by an army of 4,000 men. We believe the authorities here have not as yet received any authentic information on the subject. We give the above as cheaply as we obtained it.—Rangoon Chronicle, Feb. 8.

THE "NEMESIS."—There must be something on the board, for we notice the workmen in the dockyard have been at work night and day on the H.C.'s steamer Nemesis, in order to prepare her for sea. She was to leave this for Bassein this morning, but we shall place no credence in the report until we see her fairly on the start. We know of our own knowledge that a detachment of the 19th M.N.I. were ordered to embark on this vessel on Tuesday last, two p.m., and it has been put off to two p.m. day after day. About twenty tons of gunpowder had been sent down, and the commander very properly refused take it in, whilst red-hot rivets were being driven in every moment. We are not aware where the locum tenens of this power may be at present, but we hear it is knocking about "somewhere," and we think the sooner it is placed in "a safe keeping," the better for the towns-people.—Rangoon Chronicle, Feb. 18.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE GREIG.—It is with much regret we have to report the death of Mr. George Greig, superintendent of the coal department at Donabaw, by drowning, on the 7th instant. The deceased was stepping from the steamer on to the flat, when unfortunately his foot slipped and he was precipitated into the water. The steamer immediately had her boats manned, but of no avail, as the deceased was never seen to rise. The body was found at Yandoon three days after the melancholy occurrence, when it was forwarded on to Donabaw for interment.—Ibid.

BENGAL.

THE HOLY VEHME IN SINGAPORE.

We have frequently alluded to the existence of secret societies among the Chinese inhabitants of Singapore. These societies, or Hoeyes as they are called, enlist nearly all the Chinese of the settlement into their brotherhoods, and exercise among themselves a secret and irresponsible authority. The institution and its effects are alike dreaded and disliked by the European inhabitants of Singapore, and the local journals have frequently called upon the Legislature to put them down with the strong hand. So long as the societies were really secret, their objects unknown, and their organization only matter of conjecture, we resisted these demands, as an unjust interference with customs, of which as nothing definite was known, so nothing appeared to call for intervention. The societies, we knew, were proscribed in China, and created excessive irritation in California. Still, the ideas of the Manchow dynasty were not necessarily those of the British Government, and the angry Americans appeared to know just as little as the doubtful Europeans of Singapore. The police, however, have discovered the nest of one of these societies, and have found, translated, and published the secret oath, and we are bound to retract our previous opinion. We never remember to have perused a more singular document, or one which indicated more clearly the existence of a dangerous invisible authority. The oath seems to enunciate all the principles of all the secret societies of Europe. Laws, which the members of the Holy Vehme would have considered cruel, are enacted to support principles of social morality, of which Freemasons boast the exclusive possession. Mazzini's followers, as depicted in the Times, could hardly appeal more readily to the dagger, and the Plymouth Brethren could hardly enunciate ideas more in harmony with Christian communism. The society is called that of the Hong. It is, we believe, one of the strongest, if not the strongest in Singapore, and its members subscribe to six-and-thirty oaths. They are intended obviously to meet every contingency which could possibly create disunion in the brotherhood, and are drawn up with a minuteness which speaks of high administrative ability. The neophyte swears to reverence his parents, to abstain from gambling, and to avoid injuring any of the brotherhood in person, property, or honour. He must not abuse one of the brethren, he must not betray him, he must render him assistance if he is in any strait, must give him alms if he is in want, or clothes to pledge, if too poor to lend him aid in specie. Nay, so minute are the provisions for securing unity, that the members are specially prohibited from boasting, or from repeating to one another the ill-natured sayings of a third. In short, the oath contains in its thirty-six clauses, a code of social morality, which would be valuable anywhere, and perhaps not altogether useless in Indian society. Nevertheless, we fear, we must pronounce the society alike illegal and mischievous. In the first place, the breach of any one of these most important philanthropic rules is punishable with death. Sometimes the death denounced, is simply a prediction of the doom which Heaven will inflict upon the criminal. Thus the member who speaks disrespectfully of his parents will be "killed with ten thousand knives, or else be struck dead by lightning." The member who does not "conduct himself with sincerity, faithfulness, and in a righteous manner, blood will flow from his eyes, nose, mouth, and ears, and he will die." This is a mere anathema maranatha, of importance only as far as it indicates the ideas, which have gained ground among the people who believe these maledictions. In some of the other clauses, however, actual and immediate death is denounced against offenders, and the offence for which they are to be thus visited, is obedience to the law. Thus, if a member turns informer for money, and "any of the brethren from inquiries shall learn that any of the brethren have committed this offence, they shall seize them, and kill them." Ag in, "if any other persons attempt to take the property of which any of the brethren is possessed, or has charge, and we know it, we must inform the other brethren, and call on them to render him assistance. If there be any unjust person who will not obey these laws, he will be murdered." Here we have the Hoey stepping beyond the limits of the society, and declaring war on the external world. The rule would, if observed, compel the society to slaughter a bailiff sent to estreat the property of a member. Lastly, and we quote this entire, the thirtieth oath strikes directly at the very foundation of society. The Hoey practically arrogates to itself the right to slay any one, who has ever in any way brought a member of the society into a court of law:—

"If any of the brethren who have entered the gate of Hong are aware that any one who wishes to become a member of the family, has ever taken any reward to point out any of the brethren who were accused of having committed any crime, or has caused any of the brethren to be arrested for any offence—any one of the brethren who knows that he has done so, must at once inform the other brethren so that he may be arrested and revenge taken for the former injury; none must allow him to escape; and if there be any person who is friendly disposed towards him, and who allows him to escape—or if there be any unjust person, who knows that such person is in the place (at the meeting), and does not inform the brethren, or who dare himself allow the man to escape, he will one day be killed with a knife. If any of the brethren know of it, they must seize both (the aggressor and conniver), and kill them both."

These rules are not mere vague denunciations. The brethren do assist one another, do refuse evidence, do impede the law, and, if Singapore rumour may be trusted, do carry their sentences occasionally into effect. The only rules as to the observance of which there is any doubt, are those which advocate justice and morality. It is evident that such a society, banded together for such purposes, is one of those which regular governments regard with especial dread. Not to speak of the governments of the Continent, whose position in many respects is analogous to our own, even English law punishes the illegal oath of a trades union. And the Hong Society is a trades union, with more than the ferocity which in evil times sometimes actuates those bodies. The union may order an assassination, "to strike a salutary terror." The Hoey orders it as the orthodox retribution for assisting at an arrest. The justice of putting down such societies is sufficiently obvious, and it is doubtful whether a legislative suppression, would not also be expedient. It is open to question whether a direct violation of the laws of political morality can ever be committed with impunity, and it is committed when an imperium in imperio is allowed to inflict death at its own discretion, for offences of which neither Divine or human law has any cognizance. These societies may yet be as politically dangerous to ourselves, as they have been to the Manchow dynasty. The English law against illegal oaths is, we should imagine, sufficiently strong for their suppression. If it is not, we would hold the Hoey responsible for the life of every man, whose death is obviously the expiation for some offence against their secret and irresponsible tribunal.—Friend of India.

MR. DANBY SEYMOUR.

The "perfect man" is with philosophers a favourite subject of discussion. We feel greatly inclined to speculate upon the qualifications of the "perfect Indian traveller." Without entering into any long investigation, we may fairly believe that such a being, in his endeavours to ascertain the true condition of the country, would divest himself at once of his European ideas, would distrust at first his own conclusions, would watch anxiously to provide against wilful deception, and would feel some slight degree of thankfulness to those who pointed out an imposition. In short, he would have nothing in common with Mr. Danby Seymour. That gentleman considers that a rapid tour through a section of a presidency, enables him to pronounce a positive opinion on the connection between the European officials and the native masses. He not only took no precaution against being deceived, but adopted a measure which could but have deception for its result. He is not only not grateful to us for our quiet warning as to the imposition practised on him, but he accuses us of injustice and want of generosity. At a meeting in his honour at the house of Mr. Juggernath Sunkersett at Bombay.

"He noticed the strictures upon his conduct in the Friend of India, to which he intended to reply, but could not do so for want of time. He had nothing to do with the editor's opinions, but his statements of facts were both unfounded and untrue. He never in his travels in the Madras Presidency mentioned the government to the natives, nor did he offer to obtain redress for the grievances of the people. He contented himself with inquiring minutely into the condition and affairs of the ryots, and the mode in which they paid their taxes, a proceeding which the hon. gentleman contended he had a perfect right to adopt, whether as a member of parliament or a private traveller. The references made by the Friend to the native gentlemen who travelled with him were unjust and ungenerous, and while they were with him, their conduct elicited his warmest approbation."

Had Mr. Seymour been able to deny our facts, his refutation would have occupied two lines, and cost him ten minutes of his leisure. If, on the other hand, he had to prepare a reply which would extenuate without denying, that task might have occupied a sophistical intellect, and an unready pen for an entire hour. The excuse of want of time is inadmissible, and the present statement is no denial at all. We never accused him of offering natives to obtain redress for private grievances. On the contrary, we distinctly exonerated him from that charge, the more carefully, as Mr. Seymour never communicated with the people, except through an interpreter. What we said was, that his companions, the native and the East-Indian clerk, did spread abroad tales of his mission and his power. He says this is "unjust and ungenerous." In other words, our authority, who cannot have been ignorant of the facts, is wrong, and Mr. Seymour, whose information can be derived only from the very personages accused, is right. The great subject of our complaint, the existence of the picture, is not noticed at all. Denied it could not be. We put it to the candour of even the Madras Athenæum, whether it is possible, that this journal should have any political motive for misrepresenting Mr. Danby Seymour. He was believed to have arrived at conclusions adverse to the present Government of the Madras Presidency. We have condemned that Government for years. He was believed to be hostile to the ryotwarae. The system has no more earnest antagonist than the Friend of India. As for personal motives, we leave the exposure of that absurdity to the minds which alone are capable of such insinuations.—Friend of India.

WATER IN THE VICINITY OF AGRA.

For several years past, the attention of the inhabitants of the districts around Agra, has been directed to a singular phenomenon. The wells are drying up. The means of irrigation which are the life of the district, are becoming more and more difficult of attainment, and indeed, so remarkable is the subsidence of the water, that able inquirers begin to suspect, that a geological upheaval of the entire district is now in progress. The water appears universally to have receded some thirteen cubits (nineteen feet), and in the Agra district alone, thousands of brickbuilt wells have become useless, and abandoned. The universal cry has of course attracted the attention of Government, and the following list will show that there is some ground for inquiry, if not for apprehension.

Division.	No. of Pucka Wells in the Year of Settlement.		No. which have become useless.
	Wells.	Laos.	Wells.	Laos.
Delhi .....	11,137	10,428	818	792
Meerut .....	33,575	55,471	5,852	10,740
Rohilcund ..	466	708	70	129
Agra .....	27,842	61,319	8,183	17,751
Allahabad ....	19,634	41,133	2,028	2,968
Benares .....	47,307	17,327	3,809	1,628
	139,961	186,386	20,760	34,008

A loss of more than 8,000 wells in a single division is a matter of serious importance, more especially in a territory where a drought at once extinguishes the cultivation, on which two-thirds of its inhabitants depend. These figures which represent so vast a decrease, do not represent the incessant effort of the cultivators to contend with the deficiency. In the same division, 29,743 new wells have been constructed, and 34,646 "laos;" old wells have been repeatedly deepened, and thousands of wells not returned as useless, contain but a reduced supply of water. In Agra, even these exertions have apparently failed. Notwithstanding the efforts of the cultivators, the encouragement of the officials, and the direct temptation held out by the system of "tuccavee" advances, the gross number has diminished, and the presence of some general disturbing cause has become painfully evident. It affects also the surface waters. In Mynpoorie, the "Eesau Nudde," which contained up to 1837 a great body of water, even in the hot season, is now dry within two months after the rains. The ancient aqueducts and canals of Cawnpore have ceased to be of use. In Banda, tanks once always full, have become gradually disused, and though this may be attributed partially to neglect, it chimes in strangely with other acknowledged facts. The cotton and salt trade of the Jumna stopped in 1850 for want of water; and it is a question which Lieut. Garforth might answer, whether the volume of water in the Ganges itself has not decreased. Whether, for instance, the flats below Ghazepore, rich with the spoils of steamers, are not becoming worse every year, not from their upheaval, but from the subsidence of the waters.

Facts like these, well understood in the north-west, have attracted the attention of the Board of Revenue, and inquiries have been addressed to various officers, whose experience might enable them to assign a cause, and a remedy, for so menacing a fact. The result, we believe, is not very satisfactory. Throughout the Agra division, the fact of the sinking of the water is at once acknowledged. It has sunk, and with it the inclination of the people to construct wells of the depth which is now considered necessary. The cause of the subsidence, however, is as yet undiscovered. The native opinion remains unchangeable. They declare that the famine drought of 1837, which undoubtedly affected the wells, has ever since been succeeded by diminished rains. The springs, unfed from above, have receded, and with them the chances of successful irrigation. Others, again, hold that the gradual denudation of the country has had the effect of decreasing the amount of rain, and the argument is in accordance with facts repeatedly observed in newly settled countries. A third party, again, hold that as the decrease is more especially observable along the line of the Jumna, it may have been created by the drain of water for the Jumna canals; but Colonel Cautley considers it a proven fact that those canals have not diminished the supply. Others believe that the drain of water for the new ravines cut for irrigation itself, is the proximate cause; and lastly, the suggestion of a general upheaval is considered to deserve investigation. Whatever be the cause, diminished rain or increased irrigation, the Jumna canals, or a geological change, the fact remains. There is less moisture in the soil of the Agra presidency than there was ten years ago, the gradual decrease is still in progress, and the risk attendant upon droughts is indefinitely increased. The remedy must be left to engineers, but the inquiry is one which will demand and receive the most earnest attention, alike of science and the Government.—Friend of India.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE GANGES.

The report on the operations for the improvement of the Ganges, from Revelgunge to Allahabad, extends over the greater part of three years. It contains, however, few facts of interest. The expenditure of the department amounts to about Rs. 18,000 a year, and the results are exceedingly unsatisfactory. All that engineering skill can do for the river has been done by Lieutenant Garforth, but the improvement effected is almost nil. The river still follows its own sweet will, fills up a channel one day and opens it the next, sweeps away a bank, or covers a rock with sand, without warning as without remedy. Lieutenant Garforth has tried every experiment he could invent, or discover recorded in scientific works. He has striven to improve the banks, has tried facines, and made experiments, on German authority, with brush-wood; has constructed great wooden rakes, and has used the galvanic battery with considerable effect; and the river takes its own course still, as it has done since it fell from the curls of Siva, and will do when steam has been superseded by electricity. The utmost he can accomplish is, to prevent it from becoming worse, and to remove single obstacles which impede the steamers. Even in this attempt he is opposed. Like the Cornwall coast men, the Zemindars have a sympathy with wrecks, and instead of condensing long lists of futile experiments, we prefer making an extract from his account of the wreckers of Ghazepore:—

“Sunken boats have been destroyed in the same manner as the trees, after saving as much as possible, by the use of gunpowder; great jealousy of our interference has been shown, and three complaints against the establishment laid before magistrates; latterly orders were issued that no one should approach a sunken boat containing goods, or render assistance, without previous reference; it is evident that we are interfering with what has hitherto been considered the right of some one; I have not yet been able to ascertain how wrecked property was disposed of; in a case in the Ghazipoor district, where one of my moonshies made inquiries quietly, but did not interfere, it seemed that the zemindar received a large percentage, the police a small portion, and the owner was permitted to remove the remainder when these fines was paid; in another case in Shahabad, a cargo of stones was saved by the establishment, and the wrecked boat blown up; a complaint was laid by the owner that some of the stones had been purloined, the case was dismissed by the magistrate; here the zemindar did not, openly, interfere: in another case in Ghazipoor, a thanadar complained of a pilot who had begun to remove a boat; the pilot was ordered to desist; after six weeks no attempt had been made by the owner, or others, to save the boat, which had partially buried itself, and obstructed the channel, it was therefore blown up. I hope to collect much more information on this important subject; what I have at present is not satisfactory.”—Friend of India.

THE ARMY COMMISSARIAT.

The Gazette Official contains an order for the new scale of warrant and non-commissioned officers for army commissariat department of this presidency, which is to consist of

- 1 Deputy commissary;
- 1 Assistant commissary;
- 1 Deputy-assistant commissary;
- 8 Conductors;
- 12 Sub-conductors; and
- 40 Sergeants.

The order also states that the warrant officers of the commissariat department will be, in all respects, on the same footing with those in the ordnance department, and the allowance of the non-commissioned officers will also remain the same. Warrant officers appointed to executive charges will be required to furnish security, namely, the deputy commissary, assistant commissary, and deputy-assistant commissary, to the extent of Rs. 1,000, and conductors Rs. 500 each.

The above is an exceedingly good arrangement, because although causing no alteration in the numerical strength of the non-commissioned staff of the department, it increases the number of the higher and more desirable appointments, and thus holds out a very powerful stimulus to energy and uprightness, which cannot produce other than beneficial results to all parties concerned. Comparing the new scale with that hitherto obtained, we perceive there is a decrease in the number of sergeants from fifty-five to forty; but, on the other hand, the number of sub-conductors has been increased from four to twelve, of conductors from three to eight, and there are besides a deputy-commissary and assistant-commissary, which are entirely new appointments. The former, we believe, will draw Rs. 431-12, and the latter Rs. 351-5 per mensem. Thus not only is the number of the more desirable grades increased, but there is also a fair gradation established, by which promotion is accelerated. This arrangement will entail an increased outlay of about Rs. 1,800 per mensem; but this is a mere trifle compared with the efficiency and saving that will result from more general European supervision. Indeed, if we remember right, the late commissariat commissioners pointed out very forcibly, that European non-commissioned officers were employed to a much larger extent, and with great advantage, in the Madras and Bombay commissariat, and they were of opinion that the plan might be followed with advantage in Bengal.

The new arrangements will raise the non-commissioned staff of the commissariat in the scale of position, and surely where so high salaries are in prospect as those of the deputy commissary and assistant commissary, it may be relied upon that those expecting to attain them will not be wanting to render themselves deserving of the promotion by constant and close attention to their duties. The present liberal measure has, we believe, been suggested and strongly recommended to the Government by the commissary-general, who is entitled to acknowledgments on the part of the whole non-commissioned staff of the department for the boon which the new order confers upon a very deserving and useful class of public servants. It is gratifying to observe that, while reform is being introduced throughout the department, the individual merits of the several classes are not overlooked. The commissary-general has certainly shown his determination to enforce the strict observance of his orders, but he has likewise proved that while having a careful eye to the interests of Government he is not insensible to those of the officers and establishments placed under his control. Both officers and office establishments can bear witness of the manner in which their services have been acknowledged, and another instance is now afforded by the encouragement held out to the non-commissioned staff.—Hurkaru.

THE IRON DISTRICTS OF INDIA. — NAGPORE AND BEERBHOOM.

There is iron in Nagpore. The great territory which has just lapsed to the British Government, and adds to the empire a state of which even an American might be proud, is as rich in minerals as in cotton. Both resources were neglected by the native government, and both require European capital and energy for their full development. About eighty miles to the south-east of the capital is a place called Wyragarh, and about eleven miles from this, almost on the bank of the Wyn Gunga, stretches an iron district. In its centre, for some 250 feet, rises a low hill, called by the natives Khandeshwar, the upper half of which is a perpendicular mass of rock. The entire “mass, with a basis of quartz, is richly laden with iron,” while at the bottom of the ascent huge masses of iron ore are lying about untouched, unworked, and apparently unnoticed. Upon the slope of this hill, amidst the jungle which covers a gradual ascent, are the mines opened by the natives. They are rather “diggings” than mines, mere surface excavations, like those in which the earliest settlers in California found their gold. Never deeper than five feet, they are entirely without system, and commenced wherever the workmen fancy that the metalliferous rock appears most easily friable. Large pieces are rejected. However rich or accessible they may be, they are carefully avoided, for the wretched native tools employed would be ruined in the effort to divide them. Even these diggings are not regularly worked. Men visit the hills as they please, quarry a few fragments of the small size preferred, break them into still smaller pieces, and carry them to their villages. Of these, the most important is Trijwarce, where there are twenty-three furnaces, the neighbouring villages supporting forty-seven more. In all, the same process is pursued. The furnaces are of earth, charcoal is the only fuel employed, no “flux” is heard of, and cold and hot blasts have never entered into the imaginations of the cultivators, oilmen, and fishers who betake themselves to the trade. The profit is as wretched as the process. Each furnace produces on an average every day a lump of cast iron called a “Kotie,” and weighing about a maund. This is cut in two, while red hot, with hatchets, and the halves are thrown into a smaller furnace to be refined. They are then divided once more, still with the hatchets, and handed over to the blacksmith to be hammered into bars. From two maunds of the unwrought iron, as it issues from the first furnace, one maund of malleable iron is ultimately produced, which sells at Trijwarce for 1½ Nagpore rupees, or a little more than one Company’s rupee. Eight annas, therefore, is the amount daily produced by each furnace, the cost of charcoal and some other expenses is about three annas, and the remaining five annas forms the wages of the two or three workmen attendant on the furnace. Be it remembered, these are the statements of the miners themselves, who have every inducement to diminish their income, and exaggerate their outlay. It may be observed, also, that with these wretched tools, without capital, without machinery, without a flux, without the means of erecting a good furnace, and with their utter neglect of the best ores, the wretched miners of Khandeshwar can still turn out seventy tons of iron a month. The extent of the supply we cannot ascertain, but it appeared to our informants almost inexhaustible. Nor is this all. At Meytapore, twenty miles nearer Nagpore, twenty-five furnaces are supplied with iron dug from a great plain covered with red earth. The ore is scarcely so perfect as that of Khandeshwar, but it is found only two feet from the surface. At Lohara, and in the subah of Bandara, 125 more furnaces are known to be in work, and the whole, though ruder in construction than those which Tubal Cain must have employed, more than supply the necessities of Nagpore. Neither fuel or flux are wanting. Round Khandeshwar, for hundreds of miles, the jungle is inexhaustible, while food is so cheap, that labour can be obtained at rates to which even those current in Bengal appear excessive. No flux can be found near the mine, but within three miles runs a broad river, and along the banks of some of its feeders the common kunkur, or limestone, an excellent material for the purpose, is distributed in abundance. The Wyn Gunga is navigable for several months in the year, and if the improvements suggested by Col. Cotton were introduced, the water communication down the Wyn Gunga and Godavery would be perfect. Of all the iron districts, of which we have as yet received and account, Khandeshwar appears to be by far the most promising.

It has been pointed out to us that Mr. Oldham, the company's geologist, in his remarks upon the iron districts of Beerbhoom, has adduced facts which prove that profitable manufacture of iron in India is almost impossible. We think that far too wide an interpretation has been placed upon the views which that gentleman considered it necessary to adduce. His arguments were published at a period when English iron was much cheaper than it is at present, and scarcely half the price it will reach in Calcutta during an European war. Secondly, we question if he desires to extend the application of his calculation, beyond the districts he had personally surveyed. He calculates, if we understand him correctly, that while the production of a ton of pig iron in England would cost 2l. 2s. 10½, in Beerbhoom it would cost only 2l. 1s. 10½. In order, however, to erect furnaces capable of supplying the Indian demand, it would be necessary to expend 36,000l., and when waste, and charges for repair are taken into the account, there would remain from the proceeds about 1,687l., or less than five per cent. Therefore says M. Oldham,

"It appears, most obviously and clearly to result from these considerations that, under existing conditions, the manufacture of iron, on any efficient scale, and on the European system, cannot be undertaken in this district with certain prospect of such a return as would justify the great outlay required."

This calculation, however, is based upon the supposition that the iron is to sell for £5 a ton, and that the average profit on that quantity shall be exactly one shilling. The Railway Company would now be too happy to pay seven pounds, and the difference upsets all Mr. Oldham's calculations at a stroke. Moreover, many of the sources of expense existing in Beerbhoom would not exist in Khandeshwar. In the latter territory, there is fuel, and cheap fuel. There is labour, and cheap labour. The "flux" which is to cost in Beerbhoom twenty-seven shillings a ton, could not cost a tithe of that sum in Khandeshwar. There is a great river upon which to convey the iron produced, and the ore is confined to two soubahs never fifty miles from the stream. Should the Government of India be true, at once to its own interests and its own responsibilities, and erase the native tyranny, Nagpore may yet become what nature intended it to be, the South Wales of the Indian empire.—Friend of India.

INQUIRIES INTO THE SALT MONOPOLY.

Mr. Plowden, a member of the Board of Revenue, and late officiating secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, has been deputed on a mission to Madras and Bombay, for the purpose of making certain inquiries connected with the salt department of the East-India Company.

As it seems to us a matter of interest, we may state that the Court of Directors have called for an inquiry into the salt monopoly of India, in order to see whether some alteration cannot be devised, whereby the manufacture of salt may be entirely taken out of the hands of Government. Our readers will of course have it fresh in their memory, that Sir John Pakington drew the attention of Parliament, in the discussion on the India bill, to the salt monopoly. We believe that the impression that the Court of Directors are jealous to preserve this branch of trade in their hands is erroneous. Far from this, as we are assured, the Court would be very happy to get rid of it, if they could do so without injuring the revenue of the country. With this feeling they have directed the present commission, which Mr. Plowden has undertaken, to be issued, in order that a report may be made to them as to whether, and in what manner, the trade may be taken out of their hands and transferred to the commercial community. In visiting Madras and Bombay, and, on his return, in examining the returns made in Bengal to the Board of Revenue, we believe, the object in view is for Mr. Plowden to inquire whether it would be practicable to abolish the present system and establish in its stead an excise upon salt, contracting with private individuals for its manufacture. It is obvious that this plan would be much to the advantage of the Government, and it would also be agreeable to the wishes of the Nantwich and Droitwich speculators, who of course have but one object in view in agitating this question. If an excise upon salt is established, they cannot complain, because they will then be enabled to enter the market upon an even footing with other traders. It will remain for them to see whether they will be able to compete with the manufacturers of salt in India. Even at the cost rates to Government, we question whether this would be possible; but it must be borne in mind, that if the manufacture is transferred to private speculators, the cost involved will be naturally less than what Government pays. We imagine that the cost per maund of manufacture to Government cannot well be reckoned at less than two to three annas above the cost prices of private manufacturers. When private individuals engage in the trade, the salaries of a host of officials and a perfect army of retainers will be done away with, such persons not being at all necessary to Jones, Brown, or Robinson, in their small manufactories, where they will superintend affairs for themselves. There can be little doubt that this subject will be again brought before the attention of Parliament. We believe Sir John Pakington is quite prepared to urge it upon public attention; and we apprehend that the Court of Directors must have foreseen some such movement in ordering the present commission, which, it is to be hoped, will supply them with satisfactory material for answering the demands of the Droitwich faction. Whatever may be the nature of Mr. Plowden's report, we feel little doubt that some such measure will be adopted as that which we have denoted; and it cannot but be regarded with satisfaction, should it be so, as recognising the impolicy of Government trading on its own account. The whole character of the Government of India is now changed, and it is only fitting that the principle of traffic, which has been heretofore its very nature, should likewise determine. The empire of India must daily less and less be considered as in the hands of a company of merchants. It was a mercantile speculation—a joint-stock company. The late bill has made it almost cease to be so; the former charter struck the first blow at the system; and whenever the next step is taken by Parliament, it admits of little doubt that the last traces will be washed off the slate, and India will become purely a political branch of the Government of England.—Hurkaru.

THE EAST-INDIAN RAILWAY.

It always affords us pleasure to bring before the notice of our readers the progress of the East-Indian Railway. Judging from recent observations, we think we may safely state that the first section of 120 miles, from Calcutta to Raneeungee, may be considered in a fair way towards completion. The portion from Calcutta to Hooghly is now completed, and quite ready for the reception of traffic. The engines and carriages, however, as we are informed, have but lately been shipped in England, and though now on their way out, will not, in all probability, arrive here before the end of July. This, of course, must delay the opening, a subject which we have almost grown weary of alluding to.

Beyond Hooghly, the works, though not in a forward state, are progressing favourably. The embankments are in a great measure completed, though in many places the bridges are only just beginning to have their foundations put in. Approaching Burdwan, the aspect changes. Here all is life and activity. The Burdwan viaduct, numbering some 300 arches, swarms with artificers and labourers. On the morning our informant happened to pass by, he encountered a continuous stream of people proceeding to their work, and was perfectly astonished at the numbers employed. There appears little doubt that the Burdwan viaduct will be completed before the next rains set in. The foundations appeared all set in, the piers all up, and about thirty of the arches turned. The Bankah bridge was also showing visible signs of progress. The abutments and piers are completed, and the iron girders placed across one of the openings. A very short time ought to complete this work. Beyond Burdwan, and towards Raneeungee, the whole of the works are, with one or two exceptions, in a very forward state. From the energy and activity now displayed, we may almost venture to expect that this portion of the railway will be completed by about next August. We would therefore urge upon the railway company the necessity of redoubling their exertions to push on those portions that are so very backward, especially near Punduah, as this will retard the opening of the first section of the line to Raneeungee, which otherwise might be opened for traffic simultaneously throughout.—Englishman, March 3.

THE NECESSITY OF A CENSUS FOR BENGAL.

If anything were required to demonstrate the necessity of a central statistical bureau for India, it would be found in our utter ignorance of the population of Bengal. The province is the oldest of our possessions. For three-quarters of a century it has been governed by British officers, the greater portion has been surveyed, and the whole has been either taxed, or specially exempted from taxation. Yet at this moment the only mode of obtaining an approximate idea of its population is, to compare a series of guesses, most of them as wild as those which school geographies hazard concerning the population of the Chinese empire. Not to mention the scientific curiosity, which in Europe even statesmen are compelled to respect, the account is necessary for our legislation. Without this groundwork, the Government must on some questions grope its way in the most ordinary departments of the administration. It can obtain no accurate estimate of the incidence of taxation, for it knows not upon how many families the taxes are to fall. Its ideas on the working of the different tenures are imperfect, because it cannot tell whether the competition for land increases or diminishes. The criminal statistics at its disposal are worthless, for they are based upon a census in which no confidence can be placed, and as to detecting infanticide or the rates of mortality, the attempt would be too heroic for Lord John Russell. In the absence of anything like facts, the most vague guesses are hazarded as a groundwork for important speculations. One officer believes that Bengal must become a rabbit warren of pauper agriculturists, as the increasing population causes that fierce competition for land, which is the greatest source of the misery of Ireland. If his speculation is correct, the Ejectment Act is merely a weapon in the hands of the land owners. Another denies both increase and competition, and therefore considers that too much encouragement is given to the settlement of cultivable land. A third, after taking infinite pains in the inquiry, arrives at the startling conclusion that in one vast district of Bengal a population of 640 to the square mile is growing rich on the cultivation of rice.

Old officials frequently assert that the population and the number of rupees levied for the assessment are always exactly equal, and the theory, absurd as it may seem, is borne out by facts in entire districts. The government is no better informed than its subordinates. Perhaps the best estimate yet framed for the regulation districts is the following semi-official one, upon which we believe most of the statistics of crime are based. We have added to it the Court of Directors' estimate of the area, based for the most part upon an actual survey, and the whole is perhaps the most perfect census in existence of that portion of Bengal:—

This is the best table procurable; yet it is palpably absurd. Not to speak of the density of the population in a country where great districts are still almost uninhabited, the disparities between the different districts set at defiance all laws of population. While Burdwan, with its light soil and frequent droughts, supports 752 souls to the square mile, the 24-Pergunnahs, which include the suburbs of the metropolis, have only 199. We should have believed that some clerical error had occurred, but that the Court's printed estimate, drawn up by different hands for a different purpose, gives almost the same result. Jessore and Rajshahye, Barraet and Dacca, Rungpore, and Dinapore, present nothing but the same incomprehensible anomalies. Either all these statistics are guesses, and consequently utterly worthless, or the population of Bengal obeys laws utterly unknown to any other corner of the world.

It is neither for the interest or the honour of Government that such uncertainty should continue to exist. We need a census if only to ascertain the truths involved in the average consumption of salt, and the proportion borne by the police to the people they are appointed to defend. The new Government of Bengal will, we may hope, have the leisure, as it will certainly have the inclination for such inquiries, and among its acts the elaboration of a plan for a quinquennial census ought not to be the last. We are aware of the excessive difficulty of the task, of the reluctance of natives to aid in a work which they fancy is a preliminary to taxation, of the size of the districts over which the investigation must extend, and of the loose mode of thinking current among the officials to whom it must necessarily be intrusted. Nevertheless, we submit, the task is not beyond the power of the Government to accomplish. The people of the North-West distrust the census as much as the people of Bengal, yet it has been taken, and some of the results at least may be accepted as correct. We would not at first attempt to obtain more than an approximation to the truth. It is an accepted fact, that in all countries the population bears some unvarying proportion to the number of houses. A series of investigations, prosecuted in different places over small areas, would enable us to ascertain the proportion in Bengal, and the houses at least may be enumerated. We should thus, at least, obtain the gross total, and every successive census would remove some of the suspicious anxiety natural to ignorant orientals. In fact, the task has been commenced. Statistics of a few of the districts are actually in existence, and we have seen tables for Midnapore, Behar, Shahabad, Sarun, Patna, and Monghyr. They are, it is true, exceedingly imperfect. Whatever relates to the assessment, the area of cultivated land, and the taxation per acre, is carefully collated. The equally important facts connected with the population have been left to conjecture, except in Shahabad, but enough remains to prove that there is no insuperable obstacle to the compilation. Some even of these imperfect statements are of singular value.

We seldom remember to have seen a more perfect exhibition of the iniquity of the perpetual settlement, than the detailed account of the taxation of Midnapore. No two pergunnahs in that great district are taxed alike. In Midnapore itself, the assessment is 4½ annas per acre; in Pergunnah Chettooh, it is two rupees, and everywhere else the assessment fluctuates between those two rates, with a happy contempt for every principle of taxation. The difference does not arise from the existence of waste land in one pergunnah, which does not exist in the other. There are 167,045 acres of good land in the three pergunnahs round Midnapore itself, and they pay Rs. 93,719 a year. There are 102,094 in the seven pergunnahs round Mysadul, yet the payment is Rs. 154,994. That is, the people of Midnapore pay nine annas per acre to the state, and the people of Mysadul and the neighbourhood one rupee eight annas. The comparative extent of rent-free lands may explain the difference, though it would increase the anomaly, by proving that the taxation is borne by only a portion of a single class of the community. The total assessment on the entire area is only nine annas and three-fourths per acre, and as if this calculation were not sufficiently minute, some of the returns inform us of the number of separate estates in the district. The population alone is omitted, and we submit that the time is arrived, when this great defect may be repaired. Bengal, if we mistake not, is now the only country, ruled by a civilized race, in which the government cannot tell within millions the number of its subjects.—Friend of India.

The LONDON MAIL of Jan. 24th arrived at Madras Feb. 26th, and Calcutta March 2nd (per Oriental).

LIEUTENANT OGILVIE, of the 60th regiment N.I., has been directed to study the new commissariat system in the office of the auditor of accounts.

GOVERNMENT have ordered that officers temporarily employed in the commissariat department in Burnah shall be allowed the full staff salary of Rs. 300 per month.

CAPTAIN G. SUTHERLAND, of the 25th N.I., is to have the command of the Arracan battalion in the room of the late Captain Barry.

QUARTERMASTER GILLESPIE.—Letters from Umballah mention that the court-martial for the trial of Quartermaster Gillespie was to assemble immediately.

MAJOR OTTLEY, of the Bombay army, has sent in charges against Lieut.-Col. Brown, of H. M.'s 94th regiment.—Hurkaru.

ARMY OF RESERVE.—A rumour has been current at Delhi, that an army of reserve is to be formed either at Umballah or Ferozepore.

TEN THOUSAND CASKS OF BEER AND PORTER were imported by the Government of India, during 1853, for the use of the troops of the Bengal presidency.

THE CHILLIANWALLA MONUMENT.—A letter from Lieutenant J. Harley Maxwell to Brigadier Hearsey, C.B., on the Chillianwalla Monument, has been published. It is complete. The obelisk has been erected, inscriptions in English, Persian, Oordoo, and Punjabee, have been cut on the four sides of the pedestal, the enclosure has been planted, and everything done which could be suggested to improve its appearance. The expenditure has been Rs. 7,409, the subscriptions exceed that amount by Rs. 611, and Lieutenant Maxwell awaits instructions for the disposal of this sum.

WAR BATTAL.—When in the proclamation of peace of the 30th June, 1853, the Governor-general awarded to the force employed in Burmah six months' donation batta, the Royal and Indian navy set up an additional claim to war batta. We believe the same was granted upon the strength of precedents, but we perceive that there is an end to similar claims for the future, for the Governor-General of India in Council, under instructions from the Court of Directors, has decreed that no claim for war batta shall hereafter be admitted for any services for which donation batta is granted to the Royal and Indian navy. We all along considered the distinction which was thus made between the military and naval services a perfect anomaly. Both are employed for the attainment of the same final object, and if any war batta is to be allowed, it ought to be given to both.—Bengal Hurkaru, Feb. 21.

IRON, equal to the best Swedish manufacture, is produced in the State of Gwalior, at about Rs. 1-10 per maud.

MR. COLIN CAMPBELL has been elected Secretary to the Laudable Life Assurance Office by a large majority.

MR. JOHN PETER GRANT is to be proposed for a seat in the Supreme Council, which will shortly be vacant.

CAMPBELL v. DEVERINNE.—The long disputed case, Campbell v. Deverinne, has been compromised. The former gets the Jungpore concern, and the five leased factories, on condition of his giving up all other claims upon the latter.

MR. G. D. WILKINS.—"The special duty on which Mr. G. D. Wilkins was employed," says the official Gazette, "having ended, the Most Noble the Governor-General in Council, is pleased to place the services of that officer again at the disposal of the Government of Bengal." Mr. Wilkins was sent to Rangoon to assess the claims of such parties as had been sufferers in consequence of the outbreak of hostilities with Burmah, and as many parties here are interested in the liquidation of the various claims, it would be an act of fairness on the part of Government to publish a statement of the assessed claims, and the probable time of their liquidation.—Bengal Hurkaru, Feb. 21.

ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY.—Government have agreed to give the Oriental Gas Company a charter of incorporation; a site for the gas works; to allow the importation of materials for such works free of duty; to pay five rupees per 1,000 cubic feet of gas required for the public lights, and to give the Company a lease of twenty-one years.

INDIGO SMUGGLING.—The Hurkaru states that the Board of Revenue has determined to confiscate the whole of the indigo shipped by Messrs. Wattenbach, Heilgers, and Co., under passes containing erroneous statements of the weight subject to duty. The value of the indigo is about Rs. 75,000. The firm still deny most emphatically any participation in the fraud.—Friend of India.

THE TELEGRAPH.—Dr. O'Shaughnessy, in a letter published in the Englishman, states that in a few days the line of Telegraph will be open to Agra. It waits only for the completion of the subterranean line between Barrackpore and Calcutta. The line to Loodianah also will be ready in a month.

THE NORTH WEST BANK has declared a dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum on the operations of the half year. It has been determined also to permit the management to resume the practice of granting "service loans," that is, loans on personal security. Such loans, however, are not to exceed more than one-third of the capital of the bank.

THE AGRA SAVINGS FUND.—The Mofussilite reports that the Agra Savings Fund, a miniature bank in that town, has declared a dividend of sixteen per cent. a year, and a bonus at the rate of eight per cent. per annum on the capital. The deposits amount to five times the subscriptions, and the reserve is nearly as large as the capital. The borrowers, of course, pay for all this prosperity.

TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCHES FOR OVERLAND MAIL.—The Postmaster General has issued a notification, announcing that for the future a mail packet will be made up at Kedgerree for the overland steamer. It is to contain only telegraphic despatches forwarded from Calcutta. The despatch will be copied at the office at Kedgerree, and placed in a sealed envelope, addressed to the person to be advised. The steam postage on such despatches cannot be prepaid.

THE AGRA BANK has realized a profit of the operations of the past six months at the rate of Rs. 12-12 per annum.

THE MADAR PLANT.—At the last monthly meeting of the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, a communication was read from Capt. G. E. Hollings, containing further facts on the utility of the madar plant. The wood is the best for making the charcoal required in gunpowder. The leaves, soaked in water, are used for tanning. Wine may be made from the fibre, and fine cloth can be manufactured from the cotton found round the seed. Strong rope, it is believed, may also be made from the fibre, and lastly, the milk has most of the properties of gutta percha. According to Dr. O'Shaughnessy, however, it cannot be used to insulate the wire of the electric telegraphs.

MR. J. BAUCE, commissioner of revenue for the Jessore division, intends, it is reported, to retire from the service.

BREED OF SHEEP IN THE PUNJAB.—We perceive from a report of the proceedings of the Punjab Agricultural Society, published in the Lahore Chronicle, that an attempt is being made to improve the breed of sheep by an importation of rams from Mysore. In that country the Merino sheep have become acclimated, and it is believed that they may thrive equally well in the Punjab.

PULTAH GHANT.—A steam ferry has been established at Pultah Ghant, where the grand trunk road crosses the Hooghly.

THE BANK OF BENGAL raised its rates of interest and discount one per cent. all round on the 21st February. This step was rendered necessary by the drain of bullion from its vaults. In October last, ten lakhs of rupees were exported to China alone. In November, three lakhs and a half only was exported altogether; but in December, Rs. 8,82,000 followed, and in January nineteen lakhs more. Six lakhs have been sent in February, the greater portion of the whole being intended for the purchase of rice in Akyab and Khyouk Phyou. There does not appear to be much prospect of a further importation of specie from Europe.

INFANTICIDE.—A great meeting for the suppression of infanticide was held at Mooltan on the 29th December. The meeting was attended by a great number of natives of all classes, who readily agreed to enter into the engagements signed at Umritsur. Many others, who were unable to attend, forwarded letters, intimating their perfect accordance with the objects of the assembly.

SLAVES IN THE STRAITS.—The Penang Gazette states that the importation of Chinese women into the Straits still continues. The ancient prejudice appears to have given way, and the women are imported under contract, and assigned as servants in the same way as the coolies. The Gazette considers the "business will be deeply tainted with slave-dealing." It is slave-dealing, and will remain so until some frightful catastrophe compels the British Government to break down the wall of "practical difficulties," and bring the traffic under strict regulation.

THE DELHI BANK.—We perceive from an advertisement that the profits of the Delhi bank during the past half year have amounted to Rs. 72,824. This is at the rate of 8-1-4 per cent. per annum; but the dividend declared is only 7 per cent. Of the balance, one per cent. has been carried to the reserve fund, and the remainder to the profit and loss account. The bank, we perceive, has Rs. 10,30,198 out on personal security with life insurance, and Rs. 1,29,587 on personal security only.

—The Calcutta Gazette of Saturday, the 25th February, contained no less than nine Acts. The more important are:—Act No. III., of 1854; an Act to amend the 38th article of war for the native army. Act No. V., of 1854; an Act to amend Act No. V., of 1838, relating to the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association. Act No. VI., of 1854; an Act to amend the practice and course of proceedings on the Equity side of H.M.'s Supreme Courts of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay. Act No. VII., of 1854; an Act for the apprehension within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, of persons charged with the commission of heinous offences beyond the limits of the said territories, and for delivering them up to justice, and to provide for the execution of warrants in places out of the jurisdiction of the authorities issuing them. Act No. VIII., of 1854; an Act to explain and amend Act X., of 1851, and Act XX., of 1841. Act No. IX., of 1854; an Act relating to appeals in the Civil Courts of the East-India Company. The remaining four are local.

MR. THEOBALD, of the Calcutta Bar, is, it is reported, to be secretary to the Council of Education.

ROADS.—The Delhi Gazette publishes a letter from a gentleman who has recently travelled from Agra to Bombay. He declares that the road is in tolerable order. The entire journey of 760 miles was accomplished in 111 hours, being at an average rate of seven miles an hour. The writer travelled in a post-office cart. One bit of the road from Indore to Sirpoor is out of order, but it is still "practicable." There is nothing to see on the road, and the bungalows are indifferent.

NATIVE SUPERSTITION.—A correspondent mentions a fact, which proves how little even English dominion can effect the long standing ideas of Orientals. Below Attock, the bed of the Indus is filled with rocks, and is much dreaded by the natives. As soon, therefore, as the native boats arrive at the spot, the boatmen begin praying, leaving the care of their lives and cargo to Providence. This is in the true spirit of the Koran.

INDIGO CULTIVATION.—A correspondent of the Bengal Hurkaru publishes an estimate of the extent of indigo cultivation in Bengal. The export of indigo is 1,20,000 maunds, which will require about 10,25,000 acres, and an annual expenditure of Rs. 130,00,000. Of this large amount, about 5,41,666 acres is believed to be included in the Lower Provinces, consisting chiefly of land rescued from the rivers. We should have placed more confidence in the writer's estimate, had he not added the following unfortunate sentence:—"Do you ever hear of a dacoity or other serious crime in the districts of Kishnagur or Jessore? Seldom, if ever." Kishnagur was within the last few years the worst district for dacoity, and Jessore is distinguished for the size of the armed bands maintained alike by zemindars and planters.

STAFF CORPS.—The Hurkaru states that the Court of Directors have at length determined to create a staff corps, that is, to strike from the strength of the regiment every officer appointed to the staff, after three years' probation. The experiment is first to be tried in the Commissariat Department. The claims of staff officers to pension will be arranged according to the rank attached to the office held. Thus the commissary-general will be considered a full colonel, his deputies, lieutenant-colonels, the first class assistants, majors, and the sub-assistants, lieutenants. Will the officers thus struck off be amenable to the courts-martial?

COPPER MINE.—Dr. Campbell, superintendent at Darjeeling, has discovered a copper mine at Pushok, in the neighbourhood of that station.

TRAFFIC ON THE GRAND TRUNK ROAD.—The Agar Messenger supplies the following analysis of the traffic on the Grand Trunk Road in 1853, through the district of Allyghur:—

Laden bullock-carts .. ..	6,30,298
Unladen .. ..	75,741
Bullock train-waggons .. ..	56,602
Trucks .. ..	29,806
Buggies, or 2-wheel carts .. ..	6,331
Ekkas .. ..	10,775
Elephants .. ..	971
Camels .. ..	1,81,388
Buffaloes .. ..	1,14,914
Bullocks .. ..	1,58,035
Native ponies .. ..	2,80,809
Donkeys .. ..	2,78,725

THE HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARTILLERY REGIMENT.—At last, Dum-Dum ceases to be the head-quarters of the Bengal artillery regiment. The brigadier-commandant of artillery has laid his hawk for Meerut; thither also proceed the assistant adjutant-general, and the director of the School of Instruction. The officers of the assistant adjutant-general and of the select committee of artillery officers have gone to Meerut; the band, the public, and mess property will also go there. Dum-Dum will be commanded by Lieut.-Colonel A. Wilson, who will have a seat in the Military Board, and draw the Rs. 500 per mensem attached to that situation, and hitherto drawn by the brigadier-commandant of artillery. The artillery force at Dum-Dum will consist of two European and four native companies of artillery, with one light field battery. The expense magazine is to be a dépôt dependent upon the arsenal at Fort William, and the cap manufactory is to be maintained as at present. A portion of the mess property is to be left at Dum-Dum for the use of the officers quartered there, and part of the mess-house is to be converted into quarters for the young officers arriving from England to join the regiment, who will thus be accommodated with both board and lodging at a moderate rate. We trust that measures will be adopted to preserve that high and gentlemanly tone which has always characterised the Dum-Dum mess; and to maintain this it would be advisable to have as few married men as possible at the station, so that the senior officers may not be merely members, but habitual frequenters of the mess, where their presence will not fail to have a good influence.—Hurkaru, Feb. 21.

THE MILITARY BOARD.—It appears that after all, the long-talked-of dissolution of the Military Board is not so near at hand as was anticipated, for we understand that though the Court of Directors fully approved of the proposed arrangements by which the Board was to be relieved from the charge of the Commissariat Branch, and that of the Department of Public Works, they have not given any decided opinion as to the dissolution of the Board itself. We believe, therefore, that its existence is not likely to terminate during the present year.—Hurkaru, Feb. 22.

MOOLTAN PRIZE-MONEY.—The Calcutta Gazette contains the long-expected announcement regarding the prize-money for Mooltan. It amounts altogether to Rs. 14,64,000. Officers whose donation of batta, however, exceeds the prize-money, will receive nothing. Lord Gough will obtain Rs. 1,73,610, in addition to Rs. 35,598 already received; and the other ranks may claim as follows:—

Brevet colonels .. ..	Rs. 298 2 8
Brevet lieutenant-colonels, and superintendent surgeons .. ..	1,274 10 5
Brevet majors .. ..	484 8 3
Brevet captains .. ..	59 10 2

No one else, except a few officers on the staff, receives anything.

—[The order will appear in our next issue.]

COL. LUGARD, C.B., has been appointed adjutant-general of H.M.'s forces in India, pending the decision of the home authorities.

MILITARY ON DITS.—The retirement from the service of Captain and Brevet Major Lyell, of the 43rd light infantry, is announced.—The Lucknow correspondent of the Englishman says, that Captain Hayes is likely to leave Lucknow for a more lucrative appointment at Gwalior, and that Captain Lamb will become assistant adjutant-general at Cawnpore, and be succeeded as brigade-major at Lucknow, by Captain Innes, 61st N.I.—The 34th N.I. reached Lucknow Feb. 22, to relieve the 35th L.I., which was to march the next morning.—The 24th N.I., proceeding from Goruckpore to Wuzerabad, were also at Lucknow on the above date.—The Commander-in-Chief reached Moradabad on Saturday morning, and inspected the 23rd native infantry on his arrival. At one o'clock the usual levee was held, and the camp was in orders to halt on Sunday.—Capt. J. Staples, 7th L.C., leaves Umballa on the 1st March, in charge of remount horses as far as Sealkote.—We have heard a report to the effect that Colonel T. H. Shuldham is about to be posted to the 59th N.I.—Brigadier Brooke, C.B., commandant of artillery, left Dum-Dum on the morning of the 24th February. He will probably arrive at Meerut about the 8th or 10th March.—General the Honourable G. Anson left Agra for Muttra on the 27th Feb., whence he proceeds to Deig and Bhurtpore, returning to Agra in a few days.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

FIRST-LIEUT. CHARLES RICHARD BLAIR, SECOND EUROPEAN BENGAL FUSILIERS.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Futtchgurh, Feb. 9, 1854.—At a general court-martial assembled at Moulmein on Wednesday, Jan. 4, 1854, 1st-Lieut. C. R. Blair, 2nd Eur. Bengal Fus., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.—

For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Moulmein, on Aug. 8, 1853, in company with 1st-Lieut. J. Tovey and 2nd-Lieut. F. Moffat, of the same reg., proceeded to the house of Mr. Judah Ezekiel, merchant, and there wantonly caused and joined in a serious disturbance, in the course of which Mr. Ezekiel was maltreated and his property destroyed, and which eventually resulted in an affray in the public street, and his, the prisoner's, being subjected to the indignity of being conveyed to the police station under restraint.

Finding.—Not guilty of "conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman," nor of the words "wantonly caused" and "serious;" but guilty of the remainder of the charge, which the court considers conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded in such manner as his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief may see fit to direct.

Approved and confirmed,

Head-Quarters, Camp, Khodagunge, Feb. 1, 1854.

Remarks by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief.—The Commander-in-Chief, considering that the police at Moulmein acted with unnecessary precipitation in seizing Lieut. Blair and his companions, precipitation which seems to have led to the affray in the public street, is of opinion that an exception of the concluding averment of the charge should have been made in the Finding in this case, as was done in the verdicts in the cases of Lieuts. Tovey and Moffat.

His Excellency hopes that this trial will be a warning to Lieut. Blair to be more circumspect in his future conduct.

Lieut. Blair is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

FIRST-LIEUT. JOHN TOVEY, SECOND EUR. BENGAL FUSILIERS.

Before the same court-martial, on Tuesday, Jan. 10, 1854, 1st-Lieut. John Tovey, 2nd Eur. Bengal Fus., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.—

For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Moulmein, on Aug. 8, 1853, in company with 1st-Lieut. C. R. Blair and 2nd-Lieut. F. Moffat, of the same regiment, proceeded to the house of Mr. Judah Ezekiel, merchant, and there wantonly caused and joined in a serious disturbance, in the course of which Mr. Ezekiel was maltreated and his property destroyed, and which eventually resulted in an affray in the public street, and his, the prisoner's, being subjected to the indignity of being conveyed to the police station under restraint.

Finding.—Not guilty of "conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman," nor of the word "serious." Guilty of the remainder of the charge; but the court attach no criminality to the fact described in the last part of the charge, namely, "and his, the prisoner's, being subjected to the indignity of being conveyed to the police station under restraint;" and the court are further of opinion, that the conduct of which the prisoner, 1st-Lieut. John Tovey, is found guilty, is to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

Sentence.—To be suspended from rank, and pay, and allowances for a period of two calendar months.

Approved and confirmed.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Khodagunge, Feb. 1, 1854.

Remarks by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief.—As observed on the case of Lieut. Blair, the Commander-in-Chief is of opinion that the police officers acted with great precipitation, and that had proper caution on their part been displayed, the affray in the public street would not have taken place.

In the hope that this trial will be a sufficient warning to the prisoner, and on the consideration of the length of time that he has been in arrest, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to remit the punishment awarded.

Lieut. Tovey is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

SECOND LIEUT. FREDERICK MOFFAT.

Before the same court-martial, on Thursday, Jan. 12, 1854, 2nd-Lieut. Frederick Moffat, of the 2nd Eur. Bengal Fus., was arraigned upon the following charge, viz.—

For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Moulmein, on August 8, 1853, in company with 1st-Lieuts. C. R. Blair and J. Tovey, of the same reg., proceeded to the house of Mr. Judah Ezekiel, merchant, and there wantonly caused and joined in a serious disturbance, in the course of which Mr. Ezekiel was maltreated and his property destroyed, and which eventually resulted in an affray in the public street, and his, the prisoner's, being subjected to the indignity of being conveyed to the police station under restraint.

Finding.—Not guilty of "conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman," nor of the words "wantonly" and "serious." Guilty of the remainder of the charge; but the court attach no criminality to the fact described in the last part of the charge, namely, "and his, the prisoner's, being subjected to the indignity of being conveyed to the police-station under restraint;" and the court are further of opinion, that the conduct of which the prisoner, 2nd-Lieut. F. Moffat, is found guilty, is to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

Sentence.—To be suspended from rank, and pay, and allowances for a period of one calendar month.

Approved and confirmed.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Khodagunge, Feb. 1, 1854.

Remarks by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief.—As observed on the case of Lieut. Blair, the Commander-in-Chief is of opinion that the police officers acted with great precipitation, and that had proper caution on their part been displayed, the affray in the public street would not have taken place.

In the hope that this trial will be a sufficient warning to the prisoner, and on the consideration of the length of time that he has been in arrest, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to remit the punishment awarded.

Lieut. Moffat is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, March 4).—Cotton Goods, &c.—The general position of this market is much the same as reported in our last, and as regards most staple Manchester goods we see no immediate prospect of an advance in price to compensate for the decline in exchange; importers continuing free sellers. Grey Shirtings.—A considerable amount of Sales are reported in 40 inch, and some qualities have brought a slight advance, but most of the wider cloths are placed with difficulty even at former rates. White Shirtings.—The finest makes are much inquired for, and the supply being moderate, prices are on the advance; a few have also been in demand at full prices. White Fancy Shirtings.—Importers have continued to accept previous prices, and the demand not being very brisk, there appears no hope of improvement until supplies are more moderate. Prints continue in a most unsatisfactory state, the large stock here having been but little reduced by the purchases of the Caubul dealers, who are now leaving; and where sales have to be made the prices are ruinous. Turkey Red Goods are in fair demand, but no advance in prices has taken place. Copper.—Sales have been to an insignificant extent, but Sheet is scarce, and held for extreme rates, whilst of Bolt and Nail none is obtainable; Tile and Old have not fully participated in the late improvement; steady imports of coin from China interfering with the former, and the number of vessels sheathed with the latter.

MADRAS.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—We have heard with much satisfaction that the electric telegraph has already been brought into operation in a manner which cannot fail to exhibit its importance to Government. The wing of H.M.'s 43rd regiment, under orders to march from Poonamallee, were under some hesitation about being able to move, consequent on the non-arrival of some of the supplies and followers; but by means of the telegraph, the communications were so rapidly made by the quartermaster-general, that the whole of the arrangements were completed, and the detachment enabled to march yesterday morning en route to Bangalore; thereby saving certainly one, perhaps two days, at a season when every day was of importance to the health of the men.—Athenæum, Feb. 25.

H.M.'s 94th REGIMENT.—On Saturday evening, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief reviewed the head-quarters of the 94th regiment. His Excellency was received by the line with presented arms and the customary honours, the usual number of guns being at the same time fired from the saluting battery. The wing then marched past in slow and quick time, and afterwards performed a series of evolutions with its accustomed precision and celerity; after which it again formed line and advanced to the general salute. The lieutenant-general expressed himself well pleased with the appearance of the men and their steadiness under arms, after which the wing returned to its barracks, from what we suppose will be its last review in India.—Ibid.

THE WEATHER.—There was yesterday morning a most unusually dense fog at Madras, which shrouded everything, and obscured the sun until after seven o'clock. No doubt it betokens the early setting in of the delayed southerly wind, although it did not appear to come from that direction.—Spectator, March 1.

MOOTOOCHERRY.—The Bangalore Herald reports that the people of that station have subscribed Rs. 2,448 towards the erection of school-rooms and a reading-room at Mootoocherry. The commissioner of Mysore, it appears, wrote to the projector of the undertaking, asking the amount required to complete the estimate. He was informed, and instantly forwarded Rs. 625 as his subscription. A great number of European pensioners live at Mootoocherry.

THE MADRAS BANK.—The Madras Spectator publishes the annexed schedule of the cash reserves of the Madras Bank:—

Cash on hand 1st January, 1852,	Rs. 15,03,082
Do. do. 30th June, ..	19,74,688
Do. do. 1st January, 1853,	34,47,560
Do. do. 30th June, ..	23,45,071
Do. do. 1st January, 1854,	36,48,470

It will be perceived that the funds lying idle in the coffers of the bank have been doubled within two years. Nevertheless, several of the shareholders are desirous of permission to increase the subscribed capital. The only justification for such a proposal would be the belief that a season of monetary pressure was at hand, an idea which we believe is not altogether imaginary.

SECUNDRABAD.—The old European barracks at Secundrabad, the most unhealthy in India, have been condemned. The order for erecting a new edifice has arrived from England.

THE SHERVARY HILLS.—A letter from a visitor to the Shervary hills, which latter form a kind of Indian paradise, has been published. The climate is delightful, and game in abundance, from woodcocks to royal tigers. Yercaud, at the top of the hills, is covered with houses and gardens well laid out, and the climate requires and permits the English style of construction. Supplies are abundant, and, above all, it is almost impossible to sleep without a fire. The hills are 220 miles from Madras, and M. Doure and Co.'s transit-carriages run to the foot. From thence to Yercaud the distance is about two hours' walk. The time occupied in the journey from Madras is about forty hours.

MILITARY ITEMS.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief inspected the 15th Hussars lately, on which occasion the chief was received on the ground under the usual salute due to his rank. The camp of H.M.'s 15th Hussars has been ordered to be removed from their present encamping-ground to the Black Town Esplanade, in consequence of a few cases of cholera having appeared in the camp of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders, and terminated fatally.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

H.M.'s 15TH HUSSARS.

Head-Quarters, Mysore Division, Bangalore, Jan. 29, 1854.

—On H.M.'s 15th Hussars quitting the Mysore division on their return to England, Major-General Sewell feels it no less than his duty to state that the conduct of H.M.'s 15th has been an example of the best behaviour in quarters that he can call to mind; he is aware of no instance of greater propriety of military conduct, and sobriety of character in barracks and out of barracks. He has infinite pleasure in making known that in H.M.'s 15th Hussars there have only been one general, one district, and three regimental courts-martial, in the last two years. The 15th have also lately volunteered, and during the carrying out of that order, there were no defaulters: these matters stand on record to the credit of the regiment.

Major-General Sewell will also with pleasure state that the attendance of the soldiers of this regiment, their children and families, at the evening service of our church has been happily and usually numerous; thus remembering their duty also to their God, and doing their best for the comfort of their own salvation.

Major-General Sewell offers to Lieutenant-Colonel Smith and his officers his best acknowledgments of their constant zeal in the service of the regiment, and which has so mainly contributed to the establishing the valuable character now possessed by H.M.'s 15th Hussars.

May the blessing of God grant to Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, his officers, and men, a safe passage to England, and a happy meeting with their friends at home.

BRIGADIER ELLIOTT'S ADDRESS.

Rangoon, 19th February, 1854.—Brigadier Elliott, K.H., will embark to-morrow morning with the head-quarters of H.M.'s 51st K. O. light infantry for Madras and England, and is happy to give over command of this station to Brigadier Franklyn from this date.

On relinquishing the honourable command, consisting of the artillery, H.M.'s 51st K.O.L.I., 9th and 35th regiments of the Madras presidency, to which he was appointed at the commencement of hostilities with the Burmese Government, Brigadier Elliott returns his sincere thanks to the heads of departments, and commanding officers, who acted under his orders during the earlier portion of the late operations, for the able assistance they have at all times afforded him.

The brigadier begs that all officers of the staff who have acted with him, or under his orders in connection with this brigade, will be assured of the high estimation in which they are held by him, for the zeal and attention with which they executed the orders and instructions emanating from the brigadier himself; and he requests that Capt. Lloyd, brigade major, will accept his best thanks for the perfect efficiency and unwearied zeal which he has exhibited in the performance of the onerous duties of his office, both at Promé and since the arrival of the brigade at this station.

Commanding officers are desired to express to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, the brigadier's admiration of their gallant conduct in the field, their patient endurance of severe sickness and privations, and their general good conduct, whether in camp or quarters, by which they have well sustained the reputation for gallantry and high discipline which has distinguished the army of the Madras presidency when and wherever employed.

In recording his sense of their excellent conduct, Brigadier Elliott remarks with pleasure that there has been but little crime, and that not an instance of lawless marauding, or of ill-treatment of the inhabitants of the country by the troops forming this force, has occurred since its arrival in Burmah.

It is by such steadiness and discipline that the honour of the British name is supported, and the reputation of both officers and men enhanced. Those regiments which are about to return to the presidency, embark with the conscious pride of men who have well performed their duty, and by their soldierly conduct won the approbation of their sovereign and the Government.

In a short time the troops which form the "1st Madras Brigade," late of the "Army of Burmah," will be dispersed; and in publishing this, his last order, Brigadier Elliott assures the officers and men of the brigade, that he will always entertain the warmest interest in their welfare, and that wherever they may proceed, they will bear with them his hearty good wishes.

BOMBAY:

The LONDON MAIL of Feb. 8th arrived at Bombay March 10th (per Victory).

MAJOR RAWLINSON'S DISCOVERIES.—We take the following from the Bombay Guardian:—"We understand that Major Rawlinson is prosecuting his labours at Bagdad with great energy. He has made some important discoveries of remains in Lower Babylonia, the region about Bagdad. He has found among the Assyrian records the name of Belshazzar, completed the list of kings mentioned in the Bible, and is quite satisfied as to the unerring fidelity of the Scripture accounts. He will probably leave soon, and visit Bombay before returning to England."—Bombay Guardian.

RAILWAYS.—The Bombay Gazette reports that the engineers of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company will complete their "flying survey" as far as Agra by April. Colonel Kennedy, the most influential director of the line, recently arrived in Bombay, stayed only one day, and instantly marched along the railway track. He says there is no difficulty whatever, and is now himself engaged in an amateur survey of the valley of the Taptee.

WRECK OF THE METEOR.—The Sindian reports, that the Meteor, a small steamer belonging to the Indus flotilla, has become a total wreck. She was proceeding from Kotree to Kur-rachee, but struck on some rocks near Jerruck. So rapidly did she fill, that her commander felt it advisable to drive her on the nearest bank. The water soon rose nearly level with the decks, only the upper portion of her engines have been saved, and much of her cargo, indigo, has been damaged.

MR. LUARD.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier now reports, that Mr. Luard has not been restored to his appointment. He has only been restored to the service. According to the Poona Observer, this gentleman is again in trouble. He is suspected of having furnished the information, upon which the Oriental News has founded its attacks on Mr. Goldsmid. All this is scarcely intelligible, but there is one thing still more difficult of comprehension. Who governs in Bombay, that all this is permitted to go on for years? We may notice also that an officer, who was in the district where Mr. Goldsmid is said to have beaten a ryot, denies in the Bombay Telegraph and Courier the entire story. He declares the truth was exactly as we intimated, viz., that the magistrate struck the prisoner with a bridle, but the blow "would not have broken a child's skin."—Friend of India.

MR. MACKAY'S REPORT.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier informs us that the Court of Directors have ordered the collectors of all the districts, condemned by Mr. Mackay, to forward special reports. These reports will have special reference to the correctness of Mr. Mackay's statements.

DRESS OF THE CAVALRY.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier reports that Lord F. Fitzclarence intends to submit to the home authorities a new plan for the equipment of the regular cavalry of Bombay. Their dress, arms, and saddles, it is said, are to be entirely changed.

COMMANDER CAMPBELL, I.N.—The East-India Company have communicated to the Bombay Government their resolve to present to Commander C. D. Campbell, I.N., a sword of the value of 200 guineas, with a suitable inscription, in testimony of the high sense entertained by the Court of Directors of his services in the Burmese war.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE HON. J. G. LUMSDEN.

THE RAILWAY.—It is stated that a portion of the Egyptian Railway has been used for the first time in the conveyance of the passengers from India, who came from the Nile to the canal near Alexandria, about fifty miles, by this speedy mode of transit.

LORD HARRIS, the new governor of Madras, arrived at Alexandria on April 2nd, by the Austrian steamer from Trieste, and left at once in a steamer placed at his disposal for Cairo, whence his lordship proceeds to Suez, to embark for his seat of government.

GREAT INDIAN BEAN STALK.—On perusing the last number of Dickens's Household Words, we eagerly turned to the article headed "Great Indian Bean Stalk." Curious to learn what could be said on such a stale subject, we had not read the first paragraph relating to "Ram Lallah," when we opened wide our editorial eyes, and pricked up our editorial ears, with astonishment at the writer's cool audacity, in filching from our old friend Paunch-kowree Khan, and not so much as even alluding to the source from whence he had derived his information! If the writer has been paid by Mr. Dickens for the contribution, we trust that he may be forced to disgorge his ill-gotten gains. Such cool plagiarism is contemptible at all times; but more particularly so when the would-be writer jumbles together what he does not understand. We would ask Indian readers whether a chuprasee on eight shillings a month, could, by any possible conjunction of circumstances, be converted into the baboo of the city of Calcutta, who, by means of his wealth, has all the European officials under his thumb? The Pagoda Tree is still occasionally found and pretty well shaken; but no shaking in the world could possibly resolve the curious problem of converting the bearer of a badge of office, worth four rupees per mensem, into a millionaire of the City of Palaces. Still, unreflecting people eagerly gulp down falsehoods, because they appear in a popular publication; and thus, we doubt not, implicit faith is placed by many in the absurdity referred to.—Benares Recorder.

THE GOLD QUESTION IN INDIA.

WE have already explained the condition of the gold coin of India, and the erroneous principles adopted for its manufacture. Things continued in this state when the gold of California and Australia began to affect the market, and to change the relative value of that metal to silver. The first considerable increase in the import of gold at Calcutta was in the year 1848-49, and a large portion of it was sent to the mint, in that and the following years, for conversion into low standard lion-device pieces. The advisers of the change of standard argued that the prejudice in favour of pure coin was thus yielding at last to the firmness shown in adhering to their measure; but no such inference could justly be drawn from the fact, for the sending of gold to the mint at this period was in reality a mere sale of the metal to Government for silver, at the par rate of 15 to 1, which then began to prevail as the market rate. The mint-certificates obtained for gold delivered were immediately paid in at that par, in satisfaction of Government dues, or were negotiated at the banks, where silver was always claimed upon them, under the option then given, of receiving the amount in rupees at the par in question. The gold thus, when coined by the mint, remained as a dead balance in the Government treasury, not being issuable at the par of 15 to 1, in the condition of base standard coin, to which it had been manufactured. Besides this process of gold accumulation through deliveries at the Calcutta mint, low-standard coin, previously issued, began also to be paid into the treasury, at the established par rate, in ordinary transactions; so that out of a total amount of lion-device gold mohurs not exceeding in value seventy lacs of rupees, which was the value of the coinage up to that date, as before shown, more than fifty lacs were, in 1852, in deposit at the Government treasury as a dead unserviceable balance.

It was at this time that the Government of India began to contemplate measures for converting its entire 5 per cent. debt into stocks at 4 per cent. The prospect, therefore, of having the balance to which the Government looked for the means of completing this operation rendered unserviceable for the purpose by the substitution of gold coin not a legal tender for the rupees claimable by the public creditors who might elect to receive payment in cash, was by no means agreeable. A prompt remedy was necessary, and the question being referred to the Court of Directors, the desire to adhere still to their old principles suggested that the low-standard gold coin, not being a legal tender, the receipt of it by Government should be altogether stopped; and this was accordingly done in 1852, by public notice in the Gazette of Calcutta. This however was, at the best, but a temporary measure; its tendency was further to depreciate the low-standard coin, and to render more unserviceable than before, the amount of gold locked up in the mint and treasury, and effectually to put a stop to any further deliveries of the metal for coinage. If it was an object with the Court to issue a gold coin which, though not a legal tender, might co-circulate with the rupee of general currency, that object was, in this order, either lost sight of or entirely abandoned, for the only shape given to this metal at the mint was that of a medal which the Government now declined to treat as money or receive at any value at all. Where, then, was the pretence to justify the levy of 1 per cent. seignorage for striking this medal? The gold acquired no additional value by being converted into these  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy standard mohurs: the contrary was notoriously the case. In its purity, without alloy, or in the shape of pure coin, gold still sold in India for more than it did as debased coin. If, therefore, it was determined to treat gold no longer as money, it would have been better to have repealed the law which authorized the stamping and issuing of 15-rupee gold pieces, and to have forbidden the Government mints from having more to do with gold upon any terms. But there has, from first to last, been a total want of system and of principle in the measures ordered in connection with this branch of the Government coinage; and it is this especially that we desire to expose.

The further receipt of gold and of gold coin was, however, stopped, as we have stated, in 1852. The question remained, What was to be done with the gold which had accumulated in the mint and treasury? The attention of the Governor-General was again especially drawn to this subject. He has a head and an intelligence peculiarly fitted for such questions, and the antecedents of his European education and statesmanship were calculated to make him familiar with them. He has, we understand, recently again strongly urged the Court of Directors to permit the Government mints to revert to a pure standard coinage, as a means, not only of disposing, at considerable profit, of the gold balance that has accumulated, but as a permanent source of convenience to the public and benefit to the state. The Court, however, as we hear, have negatived this proposition, still obstinately adhering to their old order, to coin none but  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy standard gold pieces; the resolution not to receive them as money, at any price, notwithstanding. In order to provide for the difficulty of the useless accumulation of gold in the mint and treasury of Calcutta, it was suggested that the deposit might be used for remittance purposes, and sent to England to be converted here into sovereigns or sold as bullion. This suggestion, be it observed, was made at a time when the London treasury was open for the receipt of money for bills on India at the rate of 2s. 1d. Now the Company's lion-device gold mohur contains exactly 180 grains of English standard gold. The sovereign contains 123½ grains; therefore each gold mohur, instead of yielding 31s. 3d., which it ought to do at 2s. 1d., or 30s., which it ought to do at 2s., taking the gold mohur at the par rate of 15 rupees each, at which it was received or purchased in India, would, independently of the cost of transit and allowance for interest from the loss of time and for agency charges, yield 10d. less than 30s. The remittance of the gold would, therefore, be at a rate, charges included, below 1s. 11d. the rupee, giving a loss of at least 2d. in the rupee so long as the East-India Company were drawing their funds at 2s. 1d. If the whole 50 lacs were thus sent home, the loss would not be less than 4,000l. or 5,000l.; and the measure, after all, would be a mere temporary expedient, that would make no provision for the future, and would leave everything connected with the gold coinage of India in the same confusion and difficulty as at present.

But the question how to dispose of the existing accumulated balance is quite secondary, for most probably the Government of India will find a means of settling that question better than by using the gold for remittance at a loss: it will be in their power to melt up the coin, and after refining, to sell the metal pure; or the coin will, upon some favourable fluctuation of the bullion-market, be tendered for and taken off at fifteen rupees to the gold mohur, or perhaps, with even more probability, it will be so taken upon speculation, to be refined for coinage at Lucknow or Jypoor, or for being converted into spurious pieces of the Delhi stamp and standard. We have to consider seriously, therefore, what is the best course for the future, quite independently of the disposal of the existing balance.

In England, as well as in India, we have seen that gold is beginning to bear occasionally a less value than 15 to 1 of silver. There will for some time be fluctuations, and the present circumstances of Europe are especially calculated to produce them, by occasioning local demands for bullion of one or other, or of both descriptions; but the tendency is, and must be, until the increased production of gold is exhausted, towards a further fall in the ratio. Can we then maintain the existing law for striking 15-rupee pieces of  $\frac{1}{17}$  alloy standard coincidently with the notice in the Gazette that those pieces, when so struck, will no longer be received at the rate of fifteen rupees, nor at any other rate? We have clearly the alternative open of either stopping the stamping and issuing of any gold coin, or of issuing and receiving it at such value as may consist with the market value of the metal and save the Government from loss; and if it be desirable to encourage the stamping of gold with a Government device, and to maintain as long as possible the established ratio for the two metals of 15 to 1, then clearly we should seek to adopt such a standard and form for our gold coin as shall be most esteemed, and carry with it the highest value. That additional value is conferred in India by coining the metal pure. For twenty, nay, for thirty years, the Court of Directors have been treating this preference of pure gold coin as a mere prejudice, which would soon wear off. It was shown in 1837 to be a prejudice, estimated at six or seven per cent. We now learn that, instead of being worn out or diminished, the preference has reached a difference of ten per cent., and is carried to such an extent as to encourage the production of spurious pure gold pieces of the old Delhi stamp and standard. If this preference of pure standard coin be treated as a prejudice or prepossession, may not the people of India, with equal justice, complain of the prejudice and prepossession in favour of base standard coin, so obstinately adhered to by the Court of Directors, in spite of the strongest evidence, and of thirty years' experience of the inconvenience and heavy loss to which it has subjected them? If the honourable Court could only be induced to yield to the oft-repeated and earnest recommendations of its Indian authorities, and permit the issue of pure gold coin, the necessity for altering the ratio of 15 to 1, as that at which this coin should be received at the treasuries, may be postponed perhaps indefinitely; and the gold bullion of the East will continue to pour into our mints for conversion into coin of this esteemed description, to the profit of Government from the seignorage duty, and to its great credit from the superior beauty and appearance of the coin issued, and the much greater security against deception afforded by this purity. If the base standard be maintained, the Government value must be reduced immediately to Rs. 14. 8 a., or the coinage must be absolutely stopped, to prevent the coin being yet further discredited, while other pure coin maintains its superior value.

And, after all, what are the reasons for adhering to the impure standard? Simply the supposition that, because the metal with alloy is harder, the coin will wear better; but if the coin be not wanted for general currency as the ordinary money of traffic, where is the necessity for considering its wear? That is a question for bullion-merchants and dealers, and they come to you and ask especially for the pure coin, notwithstanding the risk of loss by wear. It is said that the natives of India prefer the pure coin because of its more easy conversion into jewellery and ornaments. Be it so;—still, they are content to pay the seignorage duty, in order to give their gold that shape, and when it possesses it, it passes from hand to hand at a value ten per cent. higher than in any other shape. Why refuse to give it this value, when it not only costs you nothing to do so, but may absolutely be made a source of considerable permanent revenue? And with respect to the wear of pure gold coin, we have taken the trouble to inquire at several bullion-shops of this city, and have had weighed in our presence Venetian and Dutch sequins, coined at least sixty or seventy years ago, and which, it is to be presumed, have circulated all over Asia in this period, as well as in Europe, for in Asia these coins have a preference value because of their purity. Very few of these have been found of short weight, and when so, the wear has been very inconsiderable. Gold coin may purposely be sweated, as it is technically called, for the special purpose of abstracting portions of the metal; but in the transactions of commerce, it is much less liable to wear than silver or copper pieces carried ordinarily in the pocket, and used roughly for any purpose required. If even the fact be admitted that the hard coin must necessarily wear less than the softer pure coin, still the difference in this respect is a very small fraction, and affords no reason for not preferring the pure, if it be at a premium, and can be issued at greater profit. We shall be told, perhaps, that all the governments of Europe have ended in issuing base gold coin, and that this should be reason sufficient for imposing the base standard on India and the East. We deny the fact; there is one remarkable exception. Russia has become convinced of the superiority of the pure coin, and is now striking, for especial circulation in the interior of Asia, sequins of the form and standard of those of Venice, and of the ducats of Holland, which, on account of their purity, are there so much esteemed. Russia aims at extending her influence and credit in the East, and this measure has been adopted by her as a means to that end. The Court of Directors of the East-India Company alone set themselves and their British-standard prejudices in opposition to the universal feeling and customs of the East, and in a matter of proved pecuniary benefit, will not hear of yielding to the prayers and importunities of the country under their trust management, though continually pressed and repeated for thirty years. And what was the origin of the base standard of the gold coin of Europe?—Not the preference of their subjects for alloyed metal, but the frauds of sovereigns, which debased the coin for purposes of short-sighted self-interest; and when Sir Isaac Newton, in 1717, and the committee of 1801, had to report and make recommendations for the future, the coin was already in that state in England, and they therefore hesitated to recommend a change. If the coin of England had been in the state in which we found that of India, they never would have suggested a preference of the base standard, or an attempt to supersede the pure, such as has been making in vain for thirty years in India.

Importance is attached to uniformity of standard as well as of weight between the gold and silver coin; and this was made one reason for the changes introduced by the law of 1836. If the coin of both metals were expected to circulate together, and always to bear the same relative value of 15 to 1, there might be a benefit in the apparent simplicity of keeping them uniform both in weight and standard; but events show this to be impossible, and one only of these metals is now money, the other is a token of no assigned value, though bearing the name of a 15-rupee piece. Whence, however, came this notion of uniformity? We have it not in England, which is held out as an example for India in standard. The shilling is neither of the same weight nor of the same standard with the sovereign. It has less of alloy in the pound troy by 2 dwts. than our gold coin, and weighs only  $87\frac{1}{4}$  grains, while the sovereign weighs  $123\frac{1}{4}$  grains; nor do we find it in the coins of any other state or nation; and surely, therefore, this uniformity can be no reason for continuing a coinage on every other ground objectionable.

We must recollect that we are dealing with gold in a condition of declining value, which for many a century it has never exhibited. If it was thought desirable in India to return to a pure gold coinage in 1825 and 1837, when gold then bore a value of 16 to 1 compared with silver much more so is it expedient now, when by that means alone can the coin struck be brought to bear a value approaching to 15 to 1. Either this must be done, or we must discontinue striking gold coin of any description in India. It is impossible that the law should be left as it is.

ABSENTEE REGULATIONS FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.

WE may now, we believe, announce with confidence that the long-discussed questions relating to the absence of members of the civil service from their stations have been settled. The old rules may be presumed to be familiar to those interested in them; but it may be at least useful, if not absolutely necessary, briefly to advert to some of their leading points. Under those rules, no civil servant could pass the limits of the Company's charter without forfeiture of office. Within his own presidency, under medical certificate, a civil servant might retain office for two years, but subject to the deduction of one-third of his salary. Beyond his presidency, but within the limits of the charter, leave of absence for two years might also, on medical certificate, be obtained without abandonment of office, but under a scale of deductions varying with the amount of its salary. If the salary exceeded Rs. 2,000 per mensem, the forfeiture incurred was, for the first year one-sixth, for the second year one-fourth. If not exceeding Rs. 2,000 per mensem, the absentee forfeited, for the first year one-eighth; but no deduction was made during the first year from a salary of not more than Rs. 500 per mensem, and if above that sum, only so much of the eighth was retrenched as was necessary to reduce it to the minimum of Rs. 500: for the second year such absentees—all whose salaries did not exceed Rs. 2,000 per mensem—were mulcted to the full extent of one-eighth of their emoluments. Such was the old system—indeed it is the existing system, as a few months must be required to bring into operation the new one of which we are now to speak.

The first and most important alteration consists in the abolition of all distinctions and all restrictions as to the place in which it may please the absentee to make his sojourn. He may proceed to any of the sanatoria of India; he may visit any part of Europe,—the gentle south or the bracing north; may eat macaroni in Naples or caviare in St. Petersburg (if the war should come to an end in the days of any living man); he may carry his gun through the backwoods of America; he may explore the wonders of the country which has lately (so say the showmen) sent us two specimens of its produce in the persons of two Lilliputian children of Jewish physiognomy, to excite the admiration of gaping Cockneys and relieve them of their spare shillings; if he be desirous of studying the many genera and species of vagabondage (he will have learned something of them in India), and moreover be regardless of his pockets, or be careful to have nothing in them, he may wander among the raffish population whom the love of gold has brought together in the country previously noted for nothing but wool and convict-labour,—in short, the absentee may go wherever he will, wherever he may deem it most likely to find the renovated health of which he is in search. This change is considerate towards the invalid, and is one which is warranted by the altered circumstances of the age. Steam has almost accomplished the results sought in one of the passages immortalized by the learned Martinus Scriblerus, who, however, jeeringly calls it “a modest request:”—

“Ye gods annihilate both space and time,
And make two lovers happy.”

We come now to the element of time. In future, a civil servant, to be entitled to the full benefits of absence under medical certificate, must have resided upwards of ten years in India, and the total period of absence must not exceed eighteen months in the whole, nor fifteen months on any one occasion. If these periods be exceeded, the vacation of office is the penalty. As it may be in some cases important to be apprized of the mode of computing the time of absence, it may be mentioned that, if the invalid resort to any place within his own presidency, it will be calculated from the date of his arrival thereat; if to any place on the continent of India, but beyond the limits of his own presidency, from the date of his passing the limits of that presidency; if he proceed to sea, from the date of the sailing of the vessel on which he may embark from any port in India which is not more distant from the station of the absentee than the ports of his own presidency; and his arrival at any such port on his return will be considered as terminating his absence.

We next come to the all-important subject of allowances. As a general rule, the absentee will be entitled to draw one-half his salary during the fifteen months or eighteen months allowed, provided such proportion be not more than

Rs. 10,000 per annum, which sum is in no case to be exceeded; but where the salary shall not be above Rs. 5,000, no deduction will be made, nor in any case will the absentee's income be reduced below Rs. 5,000. It has already been mentioned, that on the expiration of the periods just named, the vacation of office follows; but if the absentee's state of health be duly certified to be such as shall require longer postponement of his return to duty, he may be granted an allowance of 500*l.* per annum for such further period as shall not render his absence more than three years in the whole, after which all allowance will cease.

Although, however, health may be restored, its continued enjoyment cannot be depended upon. It will therefore be provided, that if a civil servant of more than fifteen years' standing, having previously, at any period of his service, been admitted to the advantage of the eighteen months or fifteen months' leave of absence, be again compelled by ill-health to seek such relaxation, it may be granted, on special grounds, but only for six months, during which the absentee may retain office, with half his salary, subject to the conditions and limitations above mentioned. His office will lapse and his salary be withdrawn, if this period be exceeded; but a discretionary power will be given to the local Government to grant an allowance of not more than 500*l.* per annum, for a period not to exceed twelve months.

It will have been observed, that for the enjoyment of any of the privileges above enumerated, the qualification of upwards of ten years' service is necessary, and for that last adverted to, a service of upwards of fifteen years. Junior servants—those not having served ten years—compelled by sickness to seek relief from occupation and change of place, may obtain leave for fifteen or eighteen months, as may their seniors; but in all such cases they will forfeit their appointments. They will, however, be permitted to draw an allowance of 250*l.* per annum, which allowance may be continued for eighteen months beyond the expiration of the prescribed periods, if the health of the party render such continuance necessary. But junior servants having enjoyed the benefit of these privileges, or any of them, will not be entitled, when they have attained the qualification of more than ten years' service, to the indulgence provided for servants of that standing; only if the former periods of absence shall, in the whole, have fallen short of three years, the remainder may be granted, with an allowance at the rate of 500*l.* per annum. After fifteen years, however, such servants may participate in the advantages of the special leave conceded to those of their standing, namely, six months, with retention of office and a proportion of salary, and of twelve months further, if the Government be pleased to grant leave, with an allowance of 500*l.* a year, office being vacated.

Members of Council will be permitted to absent themselves from the seat of their duties only under special sanction of the Government, and for a period not exceeding six months, during which their offices will be secured to them, and the half of their salaries. If the six months be exceeded, their offices will lapse.

Short leave on private affairs is not to be interfered with. It will, as now, be limited to one month's privilege leave and three months' special—four months in all.

The furlough of three years is to be continued, but to be modified in a manner that will be acceptable to many. When the new rules shall have been framed and brought into use, the furlough will be allowed to be taken in two periods, if desired, or in one, as at present. If divided, the civil servant must declare, at the time of taking his furlough, the period for which he intends it to continue, which may be either twelve, eighteen, or twenty-four months; the remaining period being reserved for future enjoyment. Where thus divided, the first furlough may be permitted after ten years' residence, and the second after a further period of ten years' residence, to be counted from the date of return from the first furlough. The present allowance of 500*l.* per annum will be maintained, but will on no account be extended beyond three years, and vacation of office will, as now, continue to be a necessary consequence of the acceptance of furlough to Great Britain. Civil servants having been compelled, by sickness, to relinquish their duties before completing ten years' residence, will not thereby forfeit the privilege of furlough, but may be admitted thereto, with the usual allowance, when the requisite term of residence shall have been completed. Three years, whether on sick leave or on ordinary furlough, will count as part of the twenty-five years' service requisite to qualify for an annuity; and short leaves of absence on private affairs, as above, will count both as service and residence.

A new and very important rule will be introduced, by which the period of service in India will be limited. It is intended that no one shall be appointed to any new office after having served thirty-five years, nor be permitted, after such period, to retain any office which he may have held five years. This rule, however, it is proposed to leave open to exceptions, the local government being empowered to refer home for instruction in any special case in which such reference may appear desirable.

With regard to the emoluments of those holding acting appointments, it may be noticed that the principle laid down is, that no expense is to be caused to the state by absence and substitution; but allowances must be so arranged that, on the whole, the payments to absentees and to acting officers must not exceed the prescribed amount of official salaries and emoluments.

Before quitting the subject, it should be observed, that military officers employed on civil services will be subject, in regard to absence and furlough, to the rules in the military department applying to officers holding staff appointments.

Such are to be the rules under which the members of the civil service will shortly be placed in regard to absence from their stations. The most sweeping of all the changes intended to be made—that allowing an absentee to choose his own course as to place, without limit or restraint of any kind—will probably give universal satisfaction. It is a pure boon to the service; it gives much and takes nothing away. If a man choose to go to the Cape, he may still go to the Cape; but if he prefer going to the emporium of business, London,—or to the emporium of dissipation, Paris,—to saunter at Brighton, Bath, Cheltenham, Leamington,—or to ascend Mont Blanc with Mr. Albert Smith,—to risk his heart by flirting in a gay assemblage of bright-eyed, blooming belles,—or to risk his neck in a steeple-chase,—he may indulge his taste, whatever it may be, or wherever it can be indulged. "The world is all before him where to choose," and what can he desire more?

THE CHINESE SYSTEM.

We believe that we were the first to trace the new competition system of examination for public service to China. We rejoice to see that our researches have not been unsuccessful nor unrecognised. The Chinese origin is now generally admitted. The system is all but universally known as the Chinese System, the term by which it was first designated in the columns of a daily morning contemporary, but which has thence passed into common parlance as the shortest and most convenient mode of indicating the fungous article meant to be brought to notice. No wonder that the panegyrist of such a famous system, which England, the most enlightened country in the world, has been content to borrow from the next most enlightened country in the world, China,—no wonder that the eulogist of such a system, where the glory of the contest according to him is to be estimated, like that of contests of another kind, by the number of killed and wounded,—no wonder, we say, that the herald of such triumphs should be made a knight, a commander-in-chief, though probably he never fired a gun or handled a sword in his life, a vice-admiral, albeit he is innocent of affairs maritime as the unconscious infant that sleeps on his nurse's lap. The rewards are not perhaps peculiarly appropriate to the services, but this is not unusual. It might be difficult to say why the Duke of Wellington should have been a D.C.L., or the famous minister William Pitt a member of the Worshipful Company of Grocers. But such things have been, and therefore we need not be surprised to find the champion of a system of education which kills in a proportion which it requires some skilful actuary to calculate—in a proportion, for what we know, not far short of the Manchester mode of carrying out the doctrines of Malthus,—should, as an ardent friend of the human race, be rewarded by a cloud of honours so dense, that it positively bewilders. Doctor Bowring he was, before his last display. Whence the honour came we know not—not from Oxford or Cambridge we ween. But from wheresoever it might be, the distinction is eclipsed by what has followed. Doctor Bowring has ceased to be regarded: he is swallowed up in Sir John Bowring, Governor Bowring, Commander-in-Chief Bowring, and Vice-Admiral Bowring. And all this for hunting up a system of education which does not educate in anything worth knowing, but which kills part of the disciples (the combatants we mean) and makes fools of the rest. It is not however with the erudite Doctor, the illustrious Governor, the noble Commander-in-Chief, or the gallant Vice-Admiral, that we at present have to do. Our business is of a different nature; but we thought it would be ungracious, in adverting, as we are compelled to do, to the "Chinese system" (we thank our brother for teaching us this word), to pass over the very conspicuous merits of the Doctor, who understands all languages under the sun, if not a few others also, and who unites to this mass of erudition all those qualities that adorn the character of the courtly knight, the high civil functionary, the daring soldier, and the hardy sailor.

We come now to the subject which has led us into the above tribute to excellence. Our readers are aware that by the Act of Parliament last passed for the government of India, the mode in which members of the civil service were appointed—that mode which has created the first civil service in the world,—was set aside, because, as we must suppose, it worked well, for no other reason is apparent. The Chinese System was adopted, and is now about to be brought into operation, in order that all the sharp stuff in the country may be sifted out for service in India, and the rest of the material thrown away as dirt and refuse. Such is now the law, and it must, of course, be acted upon, if it be possible to act upon it. In order to try, a committee has been appointed, to frame rules for the admission of candidates, to be selected on the "Chinese System" for Hailebury; whether, when the rules shall be framed, it will be practicable to carry them out, without gross injustice, is a question that will then remain to be answered. We have at present only to state the names of the members of the committee. The number is five: the Right Hon. Lord Ashburton; the Right Hon. Thomas Babington Macaulay, M.P.; John Shaw Lefevre, Esq., C.B.; the Rev. Henry Melvill, B.D., Principal of the College at Hailebury; and the Rev. Benjamin Jowett, M.A., Bursar, Dean, and Logical Lecturer, of Baliol College, Oxford. Some of these names are known to fame, to that honourable fame which accompanies real desert, and we are not aware that objection can be taken to any of them.

THE CROWN DIRECTORS.

We announced in due course the names of the fifteen gentlemen chosen from the entire number of surviving Directors and ex-Directors of the East-India Company to form, with three to be appointed by the Crown under the new Act, the body to whose rule India and its vast interests were to be committed. Within the last few days the Crown appointments have been made in favour of Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Pollock, G.C.B.; John Pollard Willoughby, Esq.; and Sir Frederick Currie, Bart.

It is unnecessary to say anything of Sir George Pollock. Every one who has read of the disasters of Afghanistan, knows by whom retribution was effected, and British honour vindicated. Mr. Willoughby is the son of Sir Christopher Willoughby, Bart., and brother of Sir Henry Willoughby, the present inheritor of the baronetcy. He received a nomination for Hailebury from the Right Honourable George Tierney, then president of the Indian Board. His destination was Bombay, at which presidency he attained the position of Member of Council. He was examined as a witness during the late Parliamentary inquiries. Sir Frederick Currie is the son of Mark Currie, Esq., and was nominated to Hailebury by the late James Patteson, Esq. He proceeded to Bengal, where he became a Member of Council, accompanied Lord Hardinge to Lahore, shared in the honours then distributed, being created a baronet, and, after fulfilling his special duties, returned to his seat in Council, the usual period of service therein not having previously been completed.

Sir George Pollock is appointed for two years, Mr. Willoughby for four, and Sir Frederick Currie for six years.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.—On Wednesday, April 12th, a Court of Directors of the East-India Company was held, when thanks were unanimously voted to Russell Ellice, Esq. (Chairman), and Major James Oliphant (Deputy-Chairman), for their great application and attention to the affairs of the Company during the past year. Yesterday, April 13th, a Court was also held, when Major James Oliphant was appointed Chairman, and Elliott Macnaghten, Esq., Deputy-Chairman, for the ensuing year.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, APRIL 10.

EAST-INDIA BUDGET.

Mr. Hume wished to know from the right hon. baronet (Sir C. Wood) when he would make the statement with regard to the finances of India.

Sir C. Wood said that the house was aware, that by Act of Parliament the Indian accounts were laid on the table in the middle of May. The statement he was to submit must be based on the accounts, which would not be on the table of the house till that period, and probably not in the hands of members till a few days after that. But more than that, they were carrying on a considerable financial operation in India, namely, the conversion of the 5 per cent. into a 4 per cent. debt, which would not be concluded till the 30th April. This statement would be more complete, as well as more satisfactory, if he was able to announce the termination of that operation. It was probable, therefore, that he would not be able to make his statement till June, and he should like to postpone it till the result of that large, and, he trusted, satisfactory operation to which he referred, was known.

Mr. Bright said that something had been said last year about organising the accounts on a different footing. One gentleman of authority gave it as his opinion that that should be done, whilst others said that it was not necessary to make any change in the mode of keeping the accounts. The House had not before it now any accounts later than 1852, and probably there was nothing later than the estimates for that year. What he wished to ask was, whether it would not be possible to place before the house the Indian accounts, made up to the 31st December, during the following session?

Sir C. Wood said he had already stated the accounts for each year were made up to the 30th of April. The accounts of the different presidencies were not made up on the same principle or period. A scheme of accounts had been prepared, which, he trusted, would be more satisfactory. That scheme would be submitted to the accountant of the treasury, and he hoped it might serve as a model for keeping the accounts; still he could not promise that it would be adopted.

Mr. Bright was satisfied if the subject was under the consideration of the right hon. gentleman.

RUSSIAN VESSELS IN EASTERN PORTS.

At the Court of Buckingham Palace, the 7th day of April, 1854; present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Her Majesty being compelled to declare war against his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, and being desirous to lessen as much as possible the evils thereof, is pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that Russian merchant vessels which, at the time of the publication of this order, shall be in any ports or places in her Majesty's Indian territories, under the government of the East-India Company, or within any of her Majesty's foreign or colonial possessions, shall be allowed thirty days from the time of the publication of this order in such Indian territories, or foreign or colonial possessions, for loading their cargoes and departing from such ports or places; and that such Russian merchant vessels, if met at sea by any of her Majesty's ships, shall be permitted to continue their voyage if, on examination of their papers, it shall appear that their cargoes were taken on board before the expiration of the above term. Provided that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be taken to extend, to Russian vessels having on board any officer in the military or naval services of the enemy, or any article prohibited, or contraband of war, or any despatch of or to the Russian Government. And it is hereby further ordered by her Majesty, by and with the advice of her Privy Council as aforesaid, that any Russian merchant vessel which, prior to the 29th day of March now last past, shall have sailed from any foreign port bound for any port or place in any of her Majesty's Indian territories, or foreign or colonial possessions, shall be permitted to enter such port or place, and to discharge her cargo, and afterwards forthwith to depart without molestation; and that any such vessel, if met at sea by any of her Majesty's ships, shall be permitted to continue her voyage to any port not blockaded. And the Right Hon. the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for War and the Colonies, the Right Hon. the Commissioners for the Affairs of India, and all Governors, Officers, and authorities whom it may concern, in her Majesty's East-Indian, foreign and colonial possessions, are to give the necessary directions herein, as to them may respectively appertain.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR RICHARD ARMSTRONG.
—This distinguished officer died on the 3rd of March, on board the ship Barham, during his voyage homeward from Madras. Sir Richard Armstrong was the only son of Lieutenant-Colonel Armstrong, of Lincoln, and born in 1782. He entered the army as ensign in 1796, served during the whole of the Peninsular campaign, and then entered the Portuguese service, and remained in Portugal, which nation he greatly esteemed, and where he is still remembered with affection by many friends. Sir Richard served as brigadier during the first Burmese war; as major-general of the staff in Canada, and finally was appointed commander-in-chief of the army at Madras, which command he resigned from impaired health. Sir Richard received medals and clasps for his services during the Peninsular war, besides badges of distinction from the Portuguese government. He was a Knight-Commander of the Bath; Knight-Commander of the Portuguese Order of the Tower and Sword; and Knight-Commander of the St. Buto D'Aviz. Sir Richard Armstrong was colonel of Her Majesty's 32nd regiment.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I CANNOT permit the connection which has so long subsisted between myself and the Proprietors to terminate without expressing my grateful thanks to you for the honour you have conferred upon me, in having three times elected me a Director of the East-India Company.

In April, 1841, I sought that honour, from having had the experience of twenty-seven years in the Civil Service of the East-India Company; in China, where I held for four years the responsible position of President of the British Factory; and was subsequently appointed by his late Majesty to act with Lord Napier in superintending the relations of the United Kingdom with that country. I had hoped these services, followed by the diligent discharge of my duties for thirteen years as a Director of the East-India Company, would have led to my re-election on the 8th of last March; but while I regret these anticipations have not been realised, it is gratifying to reflect that such a result has not arisen from any change in the confidence you have uniformly been pleased to repose in me.

Intimately associated with India by birth, family connection, and public service, during an unbroken period of many years, I can never cease to feel a deep and lively interest in the welfare and prosperity of that country and its vast population; and should circumstances which at present it is impossible to foresee induce me hereafter to offer myself to your notice for a seat in the Direction, I trust I may venture to hope for a renewal of your confidence and kind support.

I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

W. H. C. PLOWDEN.

East-India House, April 11, 1854.

LONDON:—WILLIAM H. ALLEN & CO., 7, LEADENHALL STREET.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA, &c.

DRAWN BY JOHN WALKER,

A New Map of India;

Showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the Position and Boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys executed by Order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or on cloth, in case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

*.* The object kept in view in compiling this Map, has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all Stations—Civil and Military—are inserted, as well as those of all Towns and places of note, likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various Districts and Collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The Railways are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the Map clear and easy for Reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been shunned.

A General Map of India;

Compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Hon. East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

Map of India;

From the most recent authorities. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

Map of the Routes in India;

With Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this Map are given the whole of the Military and Civil Stations, together with the principal Towns, the villages being omitted so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies.

Map of the Western Provinces of Hindoostan;

The Punjab, Cabool, Sind, Bhawalpore, &c.; including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or on cloth, in a case, £2; or on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

Map of India and China, Burmah, Siam,

the Malay Peninsula, and the Empire of Anam. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

Map showing the Steam Communication and Overland Routes

Between England, India, China, and Australia. Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 4 in. high; on cloth, in a case, 14s.; or with rollers, and varnished, 18s.

Map of Arabia;

Compiled from all the most recent authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high; on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

Map of the Punjab and Sikh Territory.

On one sheet, 5s.; or on cloth, in a case, 6s.

Map of Afghanistan and the adjacent Countries.

On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

Map of China,

From the most authentic sources of information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or on cloth, in a case, 11s.

Map of the Burman Empire,

London: Wm. H. ALLEN & Co., 7, Leadenhall Street.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE MADRAS CURRY, and MULLIGATAWNY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho Square; FORTNUM, MASON, and Co., Piccadilly; and of the principal Sauce Vendors throughout the kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

THE GENUINE INDIAN CURRY AND MULLIGATAWNY MIXTURE, PREPARED BY A LADY (long resident in India), who was instructed in the preparation by the late celebrated Fyzoo Musumam, of Calcutta.

This MIXTURE is prepared with the same ingredients that are used in India in the preparation of Curries; is so ready and simple that a REAL INDIAN CURRY can be prepared with it in half an hour, is highly approved by those who have resided in India, who pronounce the Curries prepared with it "THE BEST they have eaten since they left India."

To be had of Wm. ASHDOWN and Co., 167, Piccadilly, and (wholesale) by letter addressed to Messrs. Edwards and Co., 24, Pelham Street, Brompton.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, remarkable for their efficacy in curing Dropsy.—Mrs. Nicholls, of Longton, had been a sufferer for years from a troublesome cough, shortness of breath, and a constant lassitude of feeling, rendering her unwilling to move or attend to her domestic duties; she had the advice of several medical practitioners without deriving any benefit whatever; shortly afterwards, about the meridian of life, her various complaints settled into a confirmed dropsy, and no hopes whatever were entertained of her life; however, by a steady perseverance in the use of HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, she soon improved in health, and is now completely recovered, being better than ever she was before.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

JEREMIE'S SEDATIVE SOLUTION of OPIUM and ANTI-SPASMODIC.—This most valuable preparation stands highly recommended by the faculty both in India and England, and also in several large cities on the Continent of Europe, as a safe and efficient remedy in all cases requiring the use of Opium, but more especially in arresting the Diarrhoea and Vomiting which so generally precedes EPIDEMIC CHOLERA. As discreditable attempts have been made in this country and in India to impose a spurious preparation by counterfeited labels and directions, it becomes the duty of Messrs. SAVORY and MOORE to caution the public against such impositions, and to inform them that JEREMIE'S SOLUTION of OPIUM is now prepared (EXCLUSIVELY) in their laboratory in London, by desire of the representative of the late Captain Jeremie, and that every bottle will be surrounded with a Government stamp, without which none can be genuine.

more serviceable every day. Till an efficient police of some sort is raised and scattered through the country, we can never be said to have a firm hold of it. We know what is going on on the river bank, and a few miles inland on either side; but the interior, with certain exceptions, is as yet unexplored and unknown to us. The people there have heard, perhaps, of our annexation of the province, but they see nothing of its effects; there are no police arrangements for their protection, and they must, of course, submit to the dacoits they dread so much, and whom they dare not offend, while our Government continues but a name to them. In like manner we have no civil authority whatever on the frontier. Fortunately, the Burmese outside the frontier have shown no inclination whatever to molest or interfere with us. They certainly have not wanted opportunities."

From Arracan there is news rather more exciting. It is contained in the following extract from the Hurkaru.

"We understand that official intelligence has been received of an expedition having been sent by the officer commanding in Arracan against one of the Arrang wild hill tribes. It appears that for some time past it was noticed that several of the coolies entertained by the authorities were occasionally disappearing, and notwithstanding all inquiries and search, no trace of them could be discovered. It was at last found out that one of the wild hill tribes was in the habit of seizing the coolies whenever there was an opportunity for so doing, and that the poor victims were sold into slavery across the frontier. An expedition consisting of fifty men and of one hundred Naikeskeys, under the command of Captain Sutherland, of the Arracan local battalion, was therefore fitted out, and proceeded towards the hills. Towards daybreak they arrived in sight of three very formidable stockades, which were at once attacked, and one after the other taken. The expedition left with strict orders not to fire except in self-defence, the object being to effect a surprise, and to take as many prisoners as possible. However, in such cases it is almost impossible to prevent firing altogether, and we hear that two of the Arrangs had been killed in the attempt to capture them. After the stockades had been abandoned by the Arrangs, all the works, together with the property they contained, were burnt to the ground. The stockades were about fifty miles N. E. of Talook, near the Burmese frontier, and the manner in which the whole of the arrangements were carried out reflects great credit on Captain Sutherland."

In relation to a country on the other side of India, we make an extract which will be regarded as important.

"While all Europe is in agitation, India is gradually settling into a state of profound tranquillity. The happiest time for a nation is said to be when history has nothing to tell, and we appear likely to arrive at that enviable condition, for this Government has announced that despatches, dated the 25th of January, 1854, have been received by the Government of India from Her Majesty's Charge d'affaires at Teheran, in which he announces that the Shah of Persia had officially declared to him and to other foreign ministers at Teheran, that in the war between Russia and Turkey a strict neutrality would be observed by Persia; and therefore our Indian force will not be required, as was expected, in the Persian Gulf."

The Bombay Times says—

"The report that Dost Mahomed had solicited Major Edwardes to send an envoy to his court at Cabul, although not confirmed, has not been contradicted, and many very plausible reasons are put forward to account for his having done so."

The Bengal papers also advert to the report in a similar doubtful manner.

From the British north-west there is little. The Kohat pass is now open to all, having been previously closed (it is said) by our own countrymen against the Afreedees.

Turning to Oude, we find nothing for notice except one passage, which we quote, because it is always pleasant, at least it gratifies curiosity if it do not minister to self-love, to ascertain what our friends and others think of us, and what are their wishes in regard to our good or ill success in the world. It seems we furnish a subject for some discourse in Oude, as from Lucknow we have the following morceau.

"The war between Russia and Turkey is still a favourite topic of conversation among the natives of Lucknow. Their sympathy is all for the former, and indeed nothing is so much desired by the Oudh court as the overthrow of the latter. The King detests Europeans, and he personally would willingly see the power of Turkey's powerful ally, England, cast down. Though he owes everything he possesses to our forbearance, and his throne to our support, Wajid Ally Shaw would rejoice at the news of a defeat over us by the arms of Russia. The latter he scarcely considers as a European power. His circumscribed notions of geography believe Velaet, or Europe, to be comprised in France and England, and I am sure he would hail an invasion by Russia with joy. Most of the natives here are firmly of opinion that Affghan and Persian armies, commanded and drilled by Russian officers, are only abiding their time to fall upon Hindostan. Any change they consider a gain. It is human nature, perhaps, to see him whose power we envy, humbled, and it is perhaps that feeling which makes the natives of this place so anxious to see the foundation of our government shaken, no matter by whom."

The Turks are Mahomedans, as is the ruler of Oude, and the Russians look upon themselves as Christians; but in Oude it is the fashion to wish success to the Christians so called, and to hope for the destruction of their Mahomedan antagonists. A beautiful example of unity of feeling among bigoted adherents of the same creed.

Nagpore, like everything Indian, has given rise to some angry talk. It is now part of the British dominions, having become so from circumstances that left no option but to take it, except the British Government had been prepared to do something very foolish, and at the same time very cruel to the inhabitants of the country left at its disposal. The case is stated in some of the Indian papers so well, that we prefer adopting their views to giving any of our own.

"The annexation of Nagpore has been effected, and 'the house of Bhonsla has ceased to reign.' There was no necessity for a proclamation, and the Government took possession, merely announcing that Mr. Mansel is Commissioner of Nagpore. A contemporary in reference to this states, 'By the fundamental law of India' the state had lapsed to the paramount power, and there was as little necessity for decrees, as if a zemindar's estate had passed under the hammer. The people care nothing about the change. The family of Bhonsla was absolutely extinct. Its original right, like all that of the Mahratta princes, was that of a gang of dacoits to the estate on which they have squatted. Even this right had ceased to exist. The last rajah, himself an adopted son, was absolutely alone in the world. There was not even a collateral remaining, and Nagpore passed at once to the power from whom all authority in India is practically derived. Like Pegu and the Punjab, Scinde and Assam, it is to become a non-regulation Province. Its revenue of fifty lakhs, once relieved of the native court, is even now sufficient for improvement, and the wise policy adopted in the Punjab and in Pegu—expense first and sanction afterward—we will hope be extended to Nagpore."

From Ceylon the reports on the gold discovery are not very promising. The date of the paper from which we copy that which follows is the 25th of March, a day on which a supply of gold is found by many in England particularly useful. But the sum of the matter is not flattering.

"The gold discovery announced in our last has continued to engross the attention of the public and the press, and in our columns will be found all the information and much of the discussion to which it has given rise. The result seems to be that Ceylon numbers gold amongst her mineral products, although not in quantities to render the search for it remunerative, or pleasant in such a climate as ours."

The quotation which we next submit is from the same article as that just made, but a little lower in place.

"Of course, the coffee-planting community have been in a state of suspense anything but pleasant. Many of the leading planters visited the Diggings, and we believe this Mail leaves them pretty well re-assured. There is gold-dust in the rivers of Brazil, but coffee-planting there has been found the more profitable pursuit. So, we may venture to assert, it will continue to be here."

This, we think, is sensible. The journalist, however (the Observer), comforts himself and his readers by turning from gold to pearls, iron and coal, "black" materials "and white;" we doubt, however, whether pearls can properly be termed minerals.

"But if Ceylon is to derive no revenue from profitable gold-mines, we are glad to have the strongest possible assurance, that, after a dreary interval of nearly twenty years, another of our ancient mineral resources is about to become productive. The result of Captain Steuart's recent inspection of the Aripo pearl banks is, that a really profitable fishery will take place in 1855. The last occurred in 1837. It appears also from Dr. Gyax's reports on the geology of Saffragam, that 'millions of tons' of iron lie there embedded, while specimens of anthracite are said to have been found in the same district. If anthracite in quantity to work the iron could be found, Ceylon would not be long without a railway, while the steamers calling at Galle could be supplied with coal at a cheaper rate than that which it requires a fleet to bring them now from far-distant Britain. We understand that one public-spirited and enterprising gentleman is so impressed with the importance of the subject that he has offered a reward of 100*l.* to any party who may make a discovery on a tract of land which he owns in the district."

We ought, perhaps, to mention that we are in possession of a Supplement to the Observer, published two days later than the above, wherein no mention, good, bad, or indifferent, is made of gold. A paper of the same date, 27th, issued in regular course, does not revive our hopes.

As to Chinese affairs, as these are notoriously difficult to understand (always excepting the wonderful death and glory competition system, for which we are indebted to the Chinese), we think that we cannot do better than give a copious extract from the Friend of China, as we find it:—

"The latest newspaper to hand from Peking is of a date equivalent to our 14th of January,—nearly a fortnight before the commencement of the New Year of the old dynasty. In a memorial in it, from the Censor Yung Paou, inspector of the central part of the city, setting forth the want of discipline in the military preparations for defence of the capital, and the distressed condition to which the inhabitants were reduced, it is incidentally mentioned, that (in confirmation of what we have before reported) at that date the rebel camp was only 70 miles distant—the Imperialist military commanders were not agreed in their views, and had not succeeded in any plan for the rebels' extermination;—that, according to the confession of spies who had been arrested, 'very many of the insurgents had arrived at the capital, where they hired houses, and secretly endeavoured to enlist persons in their cause;—that the soldiers of the capital, whether belonging to the Chinese or Tartar regiments, existed very much in name only—that the poorer inhabitants, who could not afford to remove from a place where they could find no employment, were obliged to starve and die;—that the board of revenue, being straitened for means, had, with the sanction of Hienfung, taken a per-centage from rentals,—but, in some cases, so poor were the holders that they prayed the board to take the houses altogether.

"The memorial displays the most painful distress at the northern capital, and gives every reason for hope that, ere this, Hienfung and his 'nominal' Tartar army are well over the border, and the road paved for the crowning result.

"From Nanking, the southern capital, we have no other intelligence than the report that the Tartar general Heang-yung was at last about to vacate the position he had tried to maintain between it and Chin Keang, and that a desperate and final attempt would be made to retake Shanghai.

"The authorities at Fuh-chau have been obliged to give up their endeavours to subdue rebellious parties in the country adjacent, and are now looking carefully to their own intrenchments. The emperor's uncle, the viceroy, was preparing for a trip to Shingking, in Manchoura, to which place, as we mentioned some time ago, the emperor Hienfung has directed the revenue to be forwarded.

"About Canton, matters remain quiet—though the authorities are now convinced their day is fast approaching.

"The winter, favourably for the insurgent southerners, unused to severe cold, has been of extraordinary mildness. The ice-crop about Shanghai is a complete failure; and, singular circumstance, it will be necessary for foreign residents to import a cargo of the luxury from America."

We must make one quotation more. It relates to a commercial subject of importance. The unsettled state of the country must be borne in mind, as well as some former occurrences, to render one extract intelligible.

"A week before the departure of the last mail-packet for England, her Majesty's plenipotentiary and superintendent of trade left this port for Shanghai in H.M.S. Encounter. It was at the time generally supposed that the object of his excellency's visit to the north was the securing for British subjects equal enjoyment of the privilege so unwarrantably assumed by the Americans, of shipping teas and other China produce, without paying a cent. of duty. But before the Encounter reached Shanghai, the Americans had made a show of coalescing with the British consul, and had consented to pay duties to the Chinese authorities temporarily stationed in an Englishman's house not far from the British Consulate, so that the necessity for any interference by the superintendent of trade was, for him, for the occasion, happily avoided.

"We have said the Americans made a show of coalescing with us;—but before they did so, the leading American firm, under the able management of the American consul, its managing partner, had comfortably provided for any necessity to report at his Consulate, or to pay duties at the Chinese custom-house. Native vessels in a long line on the river, flying the consul's house-flag, were first of all fully laden with all the tea it was possible to put hand on;—as much as two thousand tons of the herb, even now, lying safely stored at the anchorage, all ready for shipment in the first vessels available. Of course, directly H.M.'s consul announced, on the 9th ultimo, that, a custom-house being again established, it was his intention, in concert with the representatives of the other foreign powers possessing treaties with China, to enforce the payment of duties on all exports, British merchants had no option but to assent to the justice of the tri-consular intention (?). Such assent, however, was not given without a representation to Mr. Consul Alcock of the want of protection against the illicit shipment, in American and other vessels, of the large quantity of tea stored in the junks and other craft at Woosung.

"To this Mr. Alcock replied, that if it was duly authenticated before him that any part of that tea left Woosung without the duty being paid, he would then immediately accord to British traders equal privilege, and that Shanghai, to all intents and purposes, should become a free port; but, on the other hand, until so assured of the systematic evasion of port regulations, he threatened with certain confiscation any vessel taking advantage of the times, and of defrauding the Chinese custom-house of its dues. So circumstanced, the British traders kept a sharp look-out after their American and other free-trading neighbours, and having been well satisfied of the manner in which the American ship Helena had obtained her cargo and had left the port,—how a Russian ship had been filled up, also without going to Shanghai or giving the usual bond,—and how the coasting clipper Eamont, and four other schooners, had run the gauntlet,—they, on the 1st instant, again memorialized the consul, and lest there should be any alleged mistake about the thing after the superintendent left the port, they addressed H.E. the following letter."

The letter is too long to be quoted in this place. It complains of the great depression of trade, and of the disorderly army of the Chinese as tending to perpetuate the depression. The Friend of China concludes the matter by stating that "At the departure of H.M. Str. Salamander from Shanghai, an answer had been accorded either by the consul or the plenipotentiary to the letter from the Chamber of Commerce."

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE ARMIES OF INDIA, REPORTED SINCE OUR LAST PUBLICATION.

BENGAL.—Capt. E. P. T. Nepean, 38th L.I., at Dinapore, Mar. 7; Col. Sir J. Tennant, K.C.B., art., at Lahore, aged 64, Mar. 6; Lieut. R. R. Cumberland, 61st N.I., at Walcott, near Briggs, aged 26, April 12.

MADRAS.—Lieut. C. F. Hunter, 22nd N.I., at Mhow, Mar. 17; Lieut. H. M. Norris, 2nd Eur. L.I., at sea on board the s.s. Indiana, Mar. 15; Capt. J. Eykyn, 15th N.I., of Ashleton, Shropshire, April 16.

BOMBAY.—Lieut. G. R. Scatcherd, 24th N.I., at Oliver Terrace, Mile End Road, April 11.

REPORTING EXTRAORDINARY.—The march of intellect is rapid in Bengal. We have heard that it is not unusual in England for those who are about to hold forth at public meetings or dinners to send written copies of the speeches they intend to deliver to the members of the fourth estate, in order that the public may be pleased and surprised by a sample of their eloquence in the earliest issue of the journals to whose editors these are furnished. Young Bengal seems determined to go a-head of the dwellers in the old country, and on Friday last one of our reporters sent us an account of the examination of the missionary school at Mirzapore, which he represented to have taken place on the previous Tuesday. He unfortunately forgot to warn us, that the shadow of coming events had so strongly impressed itself upon his mental vision as to enable him to write an account of a meeting, to give the name of one of the reverend gentlemen present, and the substance of the speech of another, before the circumstances had actually occurred. We published on Saturday morning the account of an examination which was not held until the following Monday. Our reporter, while looking thus far in futurity, should have gone just a little further. He might then have learnt what would have been the consequence of his indulging his powers of "second sight."—Bengal Hurkaru.

[It may be recollected, that about five-and-twenty years ago, something like this occurred with regard to an anti-papal meeting held at Pennenden Heath, when a speech, written by the late Mr. Shiel, and given by him to a reporter, was duly published as part of the proceedings, though not a single line of it had ever been spoken.]

BURMAH.

RANGOON.

There was a report that a revolution had taken place at Ava, by which the war party had obtained the ascendancy; and another that two officers had been wounded, one of them mortally; but as they both want confirmation, we cannot but hope that the second has no foundation, and probably is a mere repetition of the rumour which preceded the definite intelligence regarding the skirmish in which Captain Geils and Lieutenant Grant were wounded. From Promé we hear, under date of 17th February, of tranquillity and security of life being in the ascendant. These results are attributed to the circumstances of provisions being cheaper, work abundant, and payments regular. Hundreds of natives are employed in the construction of roads in all directions, and other government works. The head-quarters of the 65th N.I. had reached Promé, the C troop of Madras artillery was about to leave it, and most of the troops lately out in the district had returned.

In Bassein district affairs are reported to be prosperous, and it is said that a Court of Inquiry is to sit upon an officer, who is accused of not having given sufficient support to the civil authorities during the late outbreak. Nga Few, the dacoit chief, is said to be again at the head of an armed band, numbering 4,000 men. Extracts will be found under the usual heading.

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF FORESTS.—We hear that the report of the officiating Superintendent of Forests has been satisfactory, and there is every likelihood that the trees killed and felled will be put up to public competition by the middle of this month. If there is any foundation to be placed in this report, we may yet hope to see this benighted land prospering better than anticipated by some of the English journals.

KILLING OR WOUNDING OF MAJOR ALLAN AND SEVERAL OTHER OFFICERS.—There has been a report flying about the town that Major Allan and several other officers, who have been appointed to mark the boundaries, have either been killed or mortally wounded. With reference to the first officer, we have it from undisputable authority that he was well, and "knew nothing of his death on the 25th instant." We were blamed for not having announced this gentleman's death in our last; we mentioned at that time, we wanted it to be authenticated, and were we to publish every rumour, we should often bring ourselves into a greater dilemma than we did when we announced Teling had been retaken by the Burmese. It is true, we believe, that two officers have been wounded, one of whom is supposed to be mortally.—Rangoon Chronicle, March 4.

SIR JOHN CHEAPE.—Sir John Cheape arrived on the Swilledge on Thursday last, and landed yesterday under the usual salute due to his rank.—Ibid.

MOULMAIN.

THE 18TH REGIMENT, M.N.I.—The second division of the 18th Regiment, M.N.I., which lately arrived here in the transport Teazer, and a company of H.M.'s 29th Regiment, left this on the 11th instant, in charge of treasure, to the amount of two lakhs of rupees, for Sittang and Shway-gyeen, and the former will afterwards proceed on to the destination of the corps, Toungchoo.—Advertiser, February 20.

The third and last instalment, with the head-quarters of the 18th M.N.I., which arrived from Mungaporcottah in the transport Atalanta a few days back, will, it is said, leave this in all the current week to join the other two divisions at Toungchoo.—Ibid.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOHNSON, 26th N.I., being about to leave the station with his corps, we believe the command of the Provinces will temporarily devolve on Lieutenant-colonel J. W. Goldsworthy, of the 1st N.I.—Ibid.

CAPT. WRIGHT.—We are informed that Capt. J. H. Wright, of the 1st regiment M.N.I., who lately underwent an examination in the Burmese language by the Reverends Hough, Haswell, and Bennett, passed the ordeal very successfully, and that he will, in all probability, be very shortly appointed to some staff situation under the commissioner of these provinces.—Ibid. Feb. 27.

LAUNCH.—We have to inform our readers that a splendid ship of upwards of a thousand tons burthen, which has been built on account of Messrs. Soames, Brothers, London, will be launched from the dockyard of Messrs. Dunbar and Sons, Mopoon, at high water about four o'clock this evening. We have heard several persons speak of the maiden craft as a paragon of naval architecture, and that her construction reflects infinite credit on the builder, T. B. Cousens, Esq.—Ibid. March 1.

BENGAL.

NAGPORE.—THE POLICY OF THE EMPIRE.

Carlyle, in one of the terse sentences, into which that unequal writer sometimes compresses a volume of truth, says there "is strength in silence." The last and best illustration of the apophthegm is the manner in which the annexation of Nagpore has been completed. The Indian government has remembered its duty, has adhered to the policy announced by its head, and has accepted the responsibility it has so frequently ignored. It has refused to believe its own dominion worse than the despotism of a native. It has declined to set up a new puppet, useless except to retard the progress which without him would be inevitable. It has annexed Nagpore, and, like most of its good deeds, the annexation has passed unnoticed. With every possible excuse for the indulgence of a vanity, not perhaps valueless as an element of prestige, it has not even issued an official proclamation. The "House of Bhonsla has ceased to reign," but no manifesto announces the fact with magniloquent sententiousness. A territory, twice the size of the principalities for which Russia is risking the advantages of a century, has been added to the dominions of the British Crown. Yet the world is only informed that "Mr. Mansel is Commissioner of Nagpore." A population equal to that remnant of the European Ottomans, in whose defence Europe is now arming, has exchanged a despotic master for a civilised rule. Yet it will learn the fact, only from the removal of oppressive restrictions, and from that reconstruction of society which Indian officials denominate a "revenue settlement." We question whether even in the States, where an Indian territory, as large as England, is styled a "windfall for the land office," so great a change was ever effected with so insignificant a display. Yet the silence of the Government, remarkable as it may appear to English politicians, seems for once to have been well timed. The annexation, however vast in its extent, or in its consequences, was a mere matter of course. By the fundamental law of India, the state had lapsed to the paramount power, and there was as little necessity for decrees, as if a Zemindar's estate had passed under the hammer. The people cared nothing about the change. The soldiery probably approved of higher pay and stricter discipline. The family of Bhonsla was absolutely extinct. Its original right, like that of all the Mahratta princes, was that of a gang of dacoits to the estate on which they have squatted. Even this right had ceased to exist. The last rajah, himself an adopted son, was absolutely alone in the world. There was not even, we believe, a collateral remaining, and Nagpore passed at once to the power from whom all authority in India is practically derived. Like Pegu, and the Punjab, Scinde and Assam, and in short, all our acquisitions for half a century, it is to become a Non-Regulation Province. Its revenue of fifty lakhs, once relieved of the Native Court, is even now sufficient for improvement, and the wise policy adopted in the Punjab and in Pegu,—expense first, and sanction afterwards—will, we hope, be extended to Nagpore. A revenue settlement and a criminal code, rough justice and a few roads, will speedily make the province an important section of the strength of the empire. With a fertile soil, and abundance of minerals, it needs only the population which a strong government will speedily allure.

It is not, however, the value of the acquisition which in our eyes lends importance to this resolution of the Indian Government. It is because we see in it an acknowledgment of those cardinal principles of Indian policy, which this journal has so long striven to maintain. "Nations," says a recent writer, "cannot flourish without a purpose," that is, without that clear design, and those settled principles of action which we call a policy. In maintaining such a purpose, the Indian Government labours under difficulties peculiar to itself. It has nothing hereditary in its constitution. It has none of that party spirit, which makes itself felt even in the military monarchies of Europe. Its administration is the most fluctuating in the world. The elective monarchy of Poland, and the revolutionary Governments of France are stable, compared with a system in which one man is all powerful, and that one is changed in every half decade. Nevertheless, in spite of the anomalous constitution of the Government, of its subordinate position, and of its incessant fluctuations, two or three great principles appear to be slowly gaining ground. They are unity of dominion, equality of taxation, and centralization of the executive authority. When they are acknowledged, India will be a power qualified to take a high place, not only in Asia, but the world.

1. Unity of dominion. The two hundred and fifty kinglings, whose names and territories have been recorded by the Court of Directors, must inevitably disappear, and that speedily. It is not our purpose to repeat the arguments by which we have proved how completely their existence is incompatible with progress. After eighteen years of vituperation, the "responsibility before God and man" is acknowledged at last; the Times declares the treaties effete; the Indian Government asserts its right to take every honourable opportunity of extending its territories; the independent states are styled Palatinates; and the annexation of Nagpore found but one formidable opponent. The principle is admitted. We have only to show how rapidly it will operate. The present Governor-General has been at the head of affairs scarcely six years, yet in that short period three great states have been surrounded with the red line. Not to mention Sattara, Sumbulpore, Berar, and about a dozen smaller principalities, the Punjab, Pegu, and Nagpore are alone equal in area to Spain, in population to Prussia, and in revenue to Denmark. What is more to the purpose; they are equivalent to one-seventh of India itself. Nor is the process likely to be retarded. An Indian aristocracy dies out even more quickly than the aristocracies of Europe. We have not all the facts before us, but from a consideration of some volumes of Indian treaties, we believe we are justified in saying there is scarcely one of the Indian royal houses so old as the British dominion. With some remarkable exceptions, they have all been compelled to adopt, and even adoption does not appear to have preserved them. If the same process should continue, and we see no reasonable probability of its cessation, India will in less than a century pass under British authority. We say nothing of other sources of decay. The independence of Guzerat can scarcely last; the Government of Oude has broken its most solemn treaties; Parliament may yet listen to the slaves of Travancore, and the Arabs of the Deccan are not yet expelled. Setting aside all these as only probabilities, the determination of the Government, as evinced in Nagpore, renders the ultimate unity of the empire only a question of time.

2. The centralization of the executive power is becoming yearly more and more complete. In May of the present year, the richest portion of our territories, Bengal and the North-west provinces, the Punjab and Pegu, will be governed by commissioners, under different titles, it is true, but all equally responsible for their executive authority to the central government. Every new territory becomes a non-regulation province, and of every non-regulation province Lord Dalhousie is the virtual governor. He signs every sentence of death in Jhansae. The appeal from General Cabbon and Mysore lies to him. Colonel Bogle, when not too precipitate, submits final sentences passed in the Tenasserim provinces for his approval. Even the Baroda residency has been separated from Bombay, and Colonel Outram was not reappointed by Lord Elphinstone. With the fall of the native princes, this tendency must increase. The only great obstacle, the pseudo-independence of the minor presidencies, and their real power of communicating direct with England, may perhaps endure for another twenty years. By that time, the disparity between the territories improved by the lieutenant governors and the territories kept quiet by English peers, will be too glaring even for an English ministry. We make no attempt to predict, but we cannot believe that the lesson afforded by the experience of the last five years at Madras and Bombay can be lost at home, and if not lost, India will within a generation be one and indivisible. It is not only in our political relations that the tendency to centralization is to be traced. It extends itself to every department of the administration. Year by year the old system of boards is broken up. All the new departments, and most of the old, have received separate heads, who are personally responsible for their management, and personally in communication with the Government. The rage for public works, the readiness of Government to grant assistance to private companies, and the growing reliance upon the central authority, all tend in the same direction. Every new reform centralizes authority. The improvement of the police has that principle for its basis; the reform of penal discipline was enforced by arguments which mean that or nothing; the union of the collector and magistrate is part of the same system. Every scheme for national education must have Government for its motive power. We express no opinion on the character of these reforms. Our object is not to argue, but to afford our readers materials for thought by pointing out facts, which they will on examination find it impossible to deny. We would only observe en passant that but two systems of government have ever permanently succeeded, in great countries, the perfect centralization of France, and the perfect municipal government of America. The latter has in India invariably broken down.

3. Equality of taxation. In this respect but little progress has been made. India is still oppressed by the evil which crushed the Roman Empire, which produced the French revolution, and which is the primary cause of the present weakness of Turkey. The whole pressure of taxation is borne by a single class, and that class, the agriculturists. Practically, the remainder of the community, like the lowest class in England, are as untaxed as nomads. Moreover, one of the exempt classes is the richest in the community. The merchant and the money-lender, the bill-broker, whose transactions extend from Calcutta to Peshawur, the Benares banker, whose wealth may compare with that of the greatest European houses, pay nothing at all for the order which protects their accumulations. The artisan and the shop-keeper, the clerk and the soldier, in short, all classes except the agriculturists are exempt, except as regards the salt for which all pay alike. To add to the anomaly, some of the richest even of the agriculturists pay nothing. There are jagheerdars without end in the Northwest. In Bengal we have pushed the theory of public faith so far, that we have for ever exempted, not individuals or classes, but all who may chance to purchase certain patches of land, from any taxation whatsoever. We still, however, see hope of progress. The impolicy of this exceptional taxation begins to be admitted. It has been boldly, though most injudiciously, asserted in England, that all Indian land ought to be taxed. In Pegu, we shall probably not exempt a square foot; in Bombay the Enamgrants are steadily attacked; in the Punjab the area of rent free land is systematically diminished; and lastly, we hear rumours of a system of licensing tradesmen, and of stamping hoondees, which will alleviate, if it cannot remove, the inequality between the taxation borne by the moneyed classes and the landholders.

The policy of the empire, for good or evil, is, we submit, becoming more distinct.—Friend of India.

MR. DANBY SEYMOUR.—FOR THE LAST TIME.

We have completed our inquiries into the proceedings of Mr. Danby Seymour, and regret to find that the result is utterly unsatisfactory. So complete and formal were the denials by the Madras press of the accuracy of our previous statements, that it was necessary to demand proof from our informants. Those proofs are now before us, and they would convince a Westminster jury, an Indian judge, or the editor of the Madras Athenaeum. They consist of the written statements of four gentlemen, whose integrity is as unimpeachable as their means of information. With one slight exception, every word we have hitherto published, has been distinctly substantiated. Mr. Danby Seymour was accompanied by the individuals we named, and was declared to be the queen's commissioner. Grievances were investigated, promises of redress were given, and in short, Mr. Danby Seymour was used as an instrument in the hands of the Madras Native Association.

The exception refers to the picture of tortures. Availing themselves of a wretched verbal quibble, the Madras papers have declared our story a "complete fabrication." It was nothing of the kind. The picture was not hung up, as we were at first informed, but it was exhibited, more especially in the Dawk Bungalow, at which Mr. Seymour for several days held a kind of cutcherry. It was presented to that gentleman at Madras, was exhibited to several civilians, and scores of ryots were questioned as to the accuracy of the scenes depicted. For these facts, our authority is Mr. Danby Seymour.

We have no desire further to discuss a subject, by no means a pleasant one in itself, and our object in entering upon which has been entirely misapprehended. Mr. Seymour fortunately was relieved of his companions before his journey was completed, and when he saw with his own eyes, without their spectacles, his vision is said to have been sufficiently clear. We condemn him simply for allowing himself to be misled, a fact of which he is by this time almost as sensible, as every European of common sense with whom he entered into conversation.—Friend of India.

THE CARAVAN TRADE OF THE PUNJAB.

We noticed last week the great extent of the silk trade between Bokhara and the Punjab, but the entire subject of the traffic between India and Central Asia deserves more attention than it has yet received. So far as it passes through Bombay and Scinde, it is tolerably understood. Manchester has a vague idea that "Central Asia" can purchase piece goods, is interested in the prosperity of Kurrachee, and is inquisitive about the quality of Russian chintzes. To all these ideas, Mr. Frere, sensible how rapidly a little English capital may develop the resources of his province, has readily responded, and the result is a mass of information, which, if incomplete, still enables us to comprehend the general character of the trade. Another portion, however, which passes through the Punjab, is by no means so generally known, yet though insignificant, in comparison with the vast sea-borne trade, it is well worthy an attentive consideration. Unfortunately, the authorities of the Punjab, perhaps from the pressure of more important business, have neglected to keep up the trade returns, which previous to the annexation were carefully compiled. Such returns, upon the plan adopted by Mr. Montgomery in Cawnpore, might easily be procured. The existing establishments, we imagine, would suffice, and the investigation should be made at Peshawur, Dera Ismael Khan, Mithunkote, Mooltan, Umritsur, Noorpore, some stations along the Sutlej, and a few others near the Jummoo frontier. Such returns would supply most valuable information to the Government, would indicate the progress of the people in the arts of civilized life, and, as the imports consist chiefly of luxuries, would furnish no unsafe criterion of the increase of the purchasing power. That they were once obtained is proved by the fact, that the returns for the five years preceding 1849 are now before us. The entire trade of India with Central Asia, exclusive of the traffic with Tartary and the East, amounts apparently to about a million sterling. Of this sum, about one-half includes the commerce which passes by way of Scinde, and the remainder that which traverses the Punjab. It is conducted entirely by caravans of camels, mules, and ponies. The camel caravans are by far the most important. Enormous strings of these animals, sometimes numbering 5,000, come from Bokhara through the passes to Dhera Ismael Khan. The proportion of attendants is usually one man to three beasts; the merchants travel armed, and are accompanied by their wives and children. Their beasts are laden with almost every conceivable variety of goods, silks and wools, groceries and spices, furs from Russia, and gold with the Bokhara stamp, but drawn in all probability from the mines of the Ural Mountains. Metals and dyes, punkahs and skin coats, books and cloths, form their less important staples, and the caravan is as it were a moving Liverpool in miniature. At Dhera Ismael Khan, they ordinarily disperse. The families and baggage are left behind, and the merchants, each with a train of from one to six hundred camels, start for the more southern provinces. The total number of camels employed is nearly twenty thousand, including, however, camels for the women and the baggage, young camels and unladen beasts retained to repair accidents. This is exclusive of between three and four thousand ponies and mules. The number of the men employed is computed at about 8,000, exclusive of armed retainers, women, and children. The articles imported on this truly oriental system, amounted on the average of the five years ending 1849 to

The word which we have translated by its American equivalent, "notions," includes gum-arabic, rose-leaves, asafetida, yellow amber, medicines, sulphur, liquorice, antimony, dyes, and a variety of groceries, spices, and all that is pleasant,—and unpleasant—to taste or smell. The phrase "light articles" covers a variety as miscellaneous as the stock in trade of a marine store-keeper, or a shop in the Calcutta china bazaar. It includes Persian silks, Russia leather, Russia chintzes, pet animals, great coats, Ispahan and Damascus blades, fans, punkahs, ermine, and sable furs, and though last, never least in the estimation of a journalist, reed pens from Persia. In fact, there are few articles, not absolutely necessary, which a caravan will not supply to the merchant. Absolute necessities, we suspect, are too cheap in India to bear the expense of this mode of transit. Silk, it will be perceived, is with one exception the most important item. Of the whole quantity imported, one-half is consigned to a single house at Umritsur, and a moiety of the remainder to a second. The latter, moreover, the house of Tukht Mull, imports half the wool. The raw fruits are consigned chiefly to Jewan Singh of the same place, and we may remark generally, that although the trade is widely scattered, the greater portion alike of merchandise and profits, remains in exceedingly few hands. The traders are generally "Kabulees," "Lohanees," and "Purachas," the two latter being natives of Damian and Attok. The Purachas are remarkable for their branch establishments. They maintain their throughout the Punjab at Umritsur, Mooltan, and Hooshearpore, in Behar, and Moorshebadad, and at Radhanagore. The only caravans apparently which reach Calcutta, are those which convey the articles under the head "notions."

The export trade is larger. During the same period it amounted on the average to
